Commissioner Charles Hilton agreed that the utilities had a responsibility to the public but insisted that the charges for the service be upped. His point was that the commission was losing money on the deal.

Feeling that the utilities was "getting short changed" by the commission when it came to collecting money where the thawing involved commercial premises, commissioners decided to continue the practice of putting the Calhoun on the payroll. "If we wants his pipes unfrozen, he must get his landlord to phone the utilities office. This way, the commission is sure of getting paid.

Commercials manager Jim Page will set up a rate structure which will take into consideration the number of the plumber's hourly pay, wear and tear on machines and gasoline used in thawing.

WILL STUDY COSTS

Before embarking on the project of running a water main into Trenton Street from Creelman Ave. to the town limits, as requested by the public works committee of council, the PUC will find out what costs are involved and how many will be involved with home owners along the street, under local improvement.

Since the planned-for federal provincial land assembly project on the east side will show signs of being implemented within the next few months, the commission feels it would be necessary to run a 12-inch water main along part of Sidney Street, to serve the new property on the street already might subject to paying for more than a standard 4-inch main. Some way of sharing the difference in cost must be found.

Mr. Hilton said that since Belleville and Quinte Mods Wasil Sidor, developer of the West-mount Park sub-division, west of Trenton, has put a six-inch main to his property he felt the commission would be "making fish of one and fowl of another" to let Sidney St. owners off with only paying for a six-inch main when a 12-inch main was used.

Mr. Sidor, however, didn't come in for preferential treatment when it came to considering his plea that he should not be called for the cost of the cost of the mains. His agreement with the commission called for the rebate "if annexation took place on or before June 6, 1962." Annexation didn't and as far as the commission is concerned, Mr. Sidor feels that a third party, responsible in part for the need to repair the lines, should be brought into the picture. No, says the commission, its agreement is with Mr. Sidor himself.

PROTECT LINES

The HEPC notified the PUC that even if it sold an 11-acre tract of land between the Quinte Electric plant and Highway 401, the right-of-way containing Trenton's high tension wire lines would be protected.

"That's good," commented Mr. Page. "Those lines bring all the power into Trenton."

The Protenax plant won't be penalized because it had a breakdown in its generating system this summer, even though plant heads failed to notify the commission that it would be using town water until the system was repaired. The first indication that Protenax had that using town water was expensive was when September, October, November and December water bills were calculated on the peak months of July and August when repairs were taking place. Protenax heads figured out a formula on which charges for the last four months of the year should be based. Since the formula gives the commission a better deal than its own formula, used in such cases, would, the commission readily agreed to rebate the local plant $726.74.

The commission found that it was getting bargain prices this year on the purchase of 40 transformers. Such will cost $405, which is $50 cheaper than last year. The commissioner's one regret is that they haven't the money to snap up transformers at this bargain price.

The commission will call tenders for the supply of a new half ton pick-up truck. The old truck, a 1950 model, has the following things wrong with it: burned motor, bad brakes, broken lights, bad fenders, bad rings and valves, hood latch broken, floor rusted through.

"It's pretty well had it," says the commission.

Air Commodore Completes Tour Of All Units

TRENTON — Air Commodore R. J. Lane, Air Officer Commanding, Air Transport Command has just completed his annual visit to all ATC Units from as far west at White-horse and as far east as El Arish, Egypt. He arrived home after a 1000-mile flight from Goose Bay, Labrador.

The majority of these visits, compressed into less than five months, have kept the air commodore and his Aide-de-Camp, Flight Lieutenant Jerry Foster on the go seven days per week since the tour began shortly before Thanksgiving.

Fleeting visits to home base at Trenton mean that the Air Commodore and his headquarters staff must work long hours, often late into the night, to complete the many important projects that are authorized in the final analysis by only one man, the Air Commodore himself.

"Officers, airmen, airwomen and civilians at all of our units," remarked the Air Commodore, "have done and are continuing to do outstanding work. I am extremely proud of all Air Transport Command people, from the tropics to the Arctic, a lot of extremely high calibre."

Early Development of 'Y' Traced by Special Speaker At Assoc. Annual Meeting

DAIRY DIRECTOR — Donald B Goodwille has been named director of the agricultural department's dairy products division after several years as chief of the dairy markets and merchandising section. (CP Photo)

"It's a good thing to look back and see what the Y.M.C.A. has meant in the past because it gives something to shoot for in the future," advised Professor F. L. Bartlett, director of the school of physical education of Queen's University, speaking at the annual meeting of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. yesterday evening.

Professor Bartlett, a University of Toronto graduate, a World War I veteran and a school trustee in Kingston, traced the early development of the "Y" in Canada. He noted that it had met a necessary challenge in World War I by providing hard-to-get items at very nominal prices to the soldiers in the field and recreational facilities behind the lines.

Since this time the community has changed considerably thanks to vast advances in transportation (when it took two-and-a-quarter hours to get from Madoc to Belleville by train), communications and technological developments, the speaker advised. "Canadians have changed from rural to an urban way of life," he said.

There is an important part for the "Y" to play in the modern stream of life as long as it holds true to its principles and goes forth with a spirit of friendliness, Professor Bartlett said.

There was no need to worry, as some do, about the "Y" going out of the Y.M.C.A., said the speaker. Whenever one helps a boy, brings in young people off the street, recognizes the voluntary services of a citizen, the "C" is being recognized, he suggested.

The "Y" is a place for all people to fully participate if they accept the principles and ideals on which the Y.M.C.A. is based and take part in a friendly manner, the speaker said.

In conclusion he emphasized the fact that every "Y" member can put the theory of Christianity in the "Y" to use by their individual actions.

SOON READY TO OCCUPY

During the president's remarks Mr. Bruce MacKenzie emphasized the fact that the local "Y" had a new building which it would have to ready for occupancy within the next year and a half. This goal would require a lot of work and a lot of policy decisions by the many volunteers working in committees.

The Belleville YMCA is an autonomous organization responsible only to the people and youth of this community, emphasized Mr. MacKenzie in speaking on the position of the "Y" and the community. The National Council of YMCA's in Canada is only a central coordinating body to provide ready access to information on the problems and solutions which local YMCA's encounter.

He noted that the Belleville "Y" had undergone a survey of community needs in the past year and was now meeting those needs with an altered and improved type of leadership. The YMCA is not just a sports organization but also provides training in leadership for both young and old, social activities for many people and a schedule of classes for adults to assist them in gaining a greater appreciation and a wider scope of life, he said.

He noted that membership had been added to the work of the Belleville United Appeal and that any youngster unable to meet the membership fee was not denied membership. A number of businessmen and the Belleville Y's Men's Club sponsor a number of boys as members now, he advised.

Mr. MacKenzie replied to critics of the location of the new "Y" building by presenting the factors which determined the location of same. The most recent survey of "Y" membership and users shows that 68 per-cent of them come from the east end of the city, whilst only 16 per cent come from the west and eight per cent from the north.

EXPRESSED THANKS

Mr. Diamantides explained, were out-of-town members.

During the general secretary's report, Dr. Diamantides noted that many things had happened during the past 12 months. Many decisions had been made, a stronger emphasis was being placed on non-physical activities and a full-time ladies' secretary had been employed.

The specific job of the local "Y" was to help more people to get a greater meaning out of living both as adults and as youngsters, Mr. Diamantides said.

He expressed his thanks to the staff and the many volunteer workers which made the "Y" program available and a success.

A number of citizens were recognized for their work with and in the YMCA. Presented with Leaders Fellowship Awards were Dr. Donald M. Scott, Hugh Watson, Mrs. Jean Smoker, Miss Mary Evans, Earl Dicknoether and Dennis Kent.

A special presentation was made to Judge J. C. Anderson for his fine work as honorary chairman of the building fund campaign in the form of a plaque presented by Lorne McDougall.

A cheque for $1,000 was presented by Mr. MacKenzie by John Hayman of the Y's Men's Club to fulfill its $5,000 pledge to the building fund. He announced that the club had pledged another $5,000 to bring its total contribution up to $10,000.

The meeting was conducted in a brisk, efficient and reasonably humorous manner by Linton D. Read.

A number of new people were elected to the board of directors for varying periods of time. They are: C. M. Cawker, W. T. Elliott, J. A. Ireland, N. E. Keith, Dr. D. M. Scott, Leo McKee, G. H. Trill, Mrs. V. Weir, W. S. Wills, Wm. A. Holway, Mrs. Ruth Barrows, f. Shulman, Neil Davidson and Mrs. Mary Haig.

Younger Seamen Losing Interest In Seal Hunts

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The younger seamen seem to have lost interest in the annual spring seal hunt off Newfoundland shores. Only veteran sealing men now are interested in taking ships to sea.

Of the three vessels scheduled for the seal fishery this spring, two will sail from St. John's. The Algerine will be commanded by Captain Charles Kean, veteran of 46 years' trips. The Sir John Crosbie will be skippered by Captain Leslie Winsor, who spent 20 seasons aboard sealing ships plus several seasons in command of his vessel.

The Kyle, sailing out of Carbonear on Conception Bay, will be commanded by its owner, Captain Guy Earle, making the second venture for seals in northern waters this year.

Capt. Earle decided to try his luck at sealing only three years ago when his firm, the Earle Freighting Service, bought the Kyle, a former CNR coastal vessel. Capt. Earle however had been in the cod fishing industry all his life, and is an executive member of the Newfoundland fisheries commission which plans expansion of the island's fishing industry.

The three sealers this spring compare with only two vessels last year, a far cry from a century ago when some 400 ships carried about 20,000 men on the seal hunt.

The Algerine with 55 men last season brought in 8,000 pelts worth a gross $14,136. The Kyle returnee with about twice as many crew members received about $275 each for the trip of little more than four weeks.

Pakistan Plans To Sign Border Pact With China

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (Reuters) — External Affairs Minister Z. A. Bhutto said today he will fly to Peking Sunday to sign a border agreement with Communist China.

Agreement in principle on the 300-mile border between China's Sinkiang province and the area of Kashmir controlled by Pakistan was reached last December.

Bhutto said the main purpose of his trip was to sign the border agreement, but he said he also would discuss with Chinese Communist leaders a wide range of subjects of mutual interest including the peace of the region.

The new border agreement fixes a frontier between China and Pakistan that extends across some of the world's highest mountains.

Pakistan sources said Pakistan would "gain some territory" out of the agreement. China would give up "one or two" frontier posts, and some disputed grazing grounds also would go to Pakistan.

Saw Knife Being Pulled From Throat

TORONTO (CP) — A youth testified Thursday he saw a knife being pulled from his friend's throat during a fight outside a Toronto high school last December.

The youth, Fergus Robert O'Connell, 20, was testifying at the preliminary hearing of Patrick Garrity, 17, of Toronto. Garrity is charged with the non-capital murder of Garry Graham, 19, also of Toronto.

O'Connell said he and Graham had gone to the school dance. A fight started and O'Connell admitted striking one "fellow". He said he was looking for "five guys who beat up his buddy." The two were then joined by Graham and O'Connell said: "I think Garry (Graham) struck Garrity. I don't know."

O'Connell said he struck Garrity "after I saw the knife." He said the dead boy fell on Garrity in the right side of the head.

He said he wrestled a knife from Garrity.

The case continues.

Doctor Had Race Horse As Hobby

OTTAWA (CP) — The Tax Appeal Board has ruled that a Napierville, Que., country doctor who raced his trotting horse for a hobby does not have to pay income tax on the $31,146 profit it earned between 1957 and 1958.

In a judgment made public Thursday, the board said Dr. Jean Beaudin used the horse with a trotter to make his sick calls during the winter, switching in a car in the summer. Each spring he gave the horse intensive training and raced it during the harness track season.

Dr. Beaudin owned only one horse at a time and during the last years in question happened to have a particularly fast one.

"Every man is entitled to a hobby," the board commented. "Unless he converts it into a trade from which he would make a living," his hobby cannot be regarded as an adventure in the nature of trade."

It added that the doctor bought the horse for $1,700 and later turned down offers of $30,000.

Hope Cold Wave Will Stop Flu From Spreading

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

An influenza outbreak which has gripped widely separated parts of southern Ontario for three weeks was on the wane today as cold arctic air swept across the region.

The outbreak hit the entire Cornwall district. In Sarnia, it closed one school and caused absence at schools in other centres dropped drastically.

John Howie, director of the Metropolitan Windsor Health Unit, said the return of arctic cold would end the outbreak.

"It's preferable to have colder weather than changeable conditions. I told reporters is what we have right now," he said.

Dr. Arthur Peachey, medical officer for Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Counties, curtailed visiting hours at Cornwall's four hospitals to prevent the illness spreading to patients.

More than 400 students from the city's five secondary schools were reported sick. At one time, 22 of 60 teachers at the Cornwall Collegiate and Vocational School were off. Supplementary teachers were called in.

Dr. Peachey said Indians at the St. Regis reserve were hard hit by the outbreak.

'Kampus Kapers' Enjoyed By Large BCI Audience

By HARRY MULHALL

Take a trip to Belleville Collegiate in the next day or so and get a load of everyone in action — in a show loaded with action.

"Kampus Kapers", the BCIVS annual stage presentation opened at the Collegiate last night, bidding fair to hold its own with its predecessors.

The emphasis this year is on acrobatics, as much onstage as behind the scenes. The collegiate's gymnasts acquit themselves with professional ease in physical display that betrays hard work and the team spirit that begets the excitement meriting the applause they received last night.

The behind-the-scenes touch comes in a message from principal E. A. Orr, inserted in the program. In the long run, it merits as much attention for Belleville citizens as the show deserves from its audiences.

The message says, in part: "Truly our facilities at BCIVS for athletic activities are by no means ideal. Indeed they pose serious problems and difficulties for those responsible for the administration of our athletic program. Nevertheless, we make no apologies, whatever for our school's athletic accomplishments of the past or the present. On the contrary we are proud of our athletic program and of the men whose characters it has helped to develop."

CLOWNS VERSATILE

The hint should be well taken, particularly after viewing the gymnasts in action in "Kampus Kapers".

However, the show is not exclusively confined to the acrobats - - even when they are bouncing through their paces. To leaven their presentations they have two of their top gymnasts arrayed as clowns whose business it is to continually interrupt the gravity of the proceedings. Programmed tersely as "Fifi and his country cousin "Mimi" the pair are as versatile as they are well-trained.

GOOD VARIETY

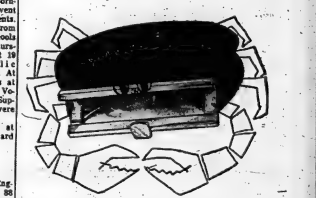
The show be strings along is one of good variety. In spots the acts are a bit long-drawn out, but this is something perhaps that can be remedied next year.



Among the highlights to watch for is "Dancing With the Times," a scene of lively modern dances. This is the milieu of such dances and it's a pity there isn't more of it to be seen. "The Twist" is cut for energy and these people have it. Whoa they dance it you do not have to be hep to enjoy it.

Neither do you have to be a parental school ratepayer to enjoy this edition of "Kampus Kapers." It's on again tonight and Saturday.

Poor Show

Robert E. Lee is a distinguished name in the history of the United States and it seems a shame that it should now adorn a man who brings it no reciprocatory honor.

Nevertheless, it is our sad duty to report that there is a Robert E. Lee who says that television viewers "don't want to be educated, but want to sit down with a bottle of beer and be entertained."

The idea that education and entertainment are incompatible seems to be commonplace amongst the television coterie. It is, however, distinctly disappointing to find this viewpoint shared by a man who is a member of the U.S. Federal Communications Commission. It is, perhaps, the most devastating criticism that one could make of TV as it actually is south of the border and as many people would like it to be in Canada, too.

The belief that we have to choose between education and entertainment is held, shockingly enough, by television's bitterest critics, as well as by its warmest defenders.

Why?

Those readers who insist on being "entertained" may, perhaps, claim that Conrad or Hardy or Sinclair Lewis or Hamsun fail to fill the bill. But whoever heard of a lover of literature who regarded books by such authors as being merely educational without any capacity to amuse or delight?

Are plays by Shakespeare, Ibsen or Shaw lacking any power to entertain?

In one sense, Robert E. Lee is right. Many people want to sit down with a bottle of beer and be entertained by TV. But does that mean that we have to endure a steady diet of "Hazel"? First consciousness is painful, because it is educational. We all know good-hearted, managing busy-bodies like Hazel and seeing all the absurdities of the type depicted on the TV screen is as educational, and almost as amusing, as ten minutes with Mort Sahl. But the subject is soon exhausted. The third time Hazel appears on the screen we wonder when Mr. Baxter is going to boot the old fraud back into the kitchen and inform his blonde and beautiful wife that if she does not get up off her fanny and take charge of the house for a change he is going out—permanently.

If we are to be forever entertained, our mental faculties must be faced with some challenge. This does not mean that we have to sit through an "educational" documentary, most of them dry as the Sahara.

The truly entertaining programs and the truly educational programs on television come on those rare occasions, even on the CBC, when some producer seems to say "a pox on both your houses," goes ahead and explores a subject which he finds interesting himself—as on the CBC "Quest" series. Often the program is a lemon—but the tart taste of a lemon is much to be preferred to the gooey syrup of the "entertaining" or the musty mush of the "educational" show.

Rebels with a Cause

Negro juveniles in Northern Rhodesia have instituted a new form of terrorism. Apparently annoyed by their elders' fad of having naturally crinkly hair straightened, the juveniles roam beer halls, public meetings and soccer crowds. When they find a Negro with straight hair, they give him a haircut.

There is a suspicion that the juveniles are members of Kenneth Kaunda's National Independence Party, and party supporters fear the haircutting raids will decrease the party's popularity.

That may or may not be so, but one must admire the juveniles. When their elders have their hair straightened to imitate one of the white man's physical characteristics, it is an admission that they are ashamed of being Negroes. And to be ashamed of one's race must be one of the few delusions more shameful than pride of race. If juveniles must rebel, and it seems they must, against the world of their elders, rebellion for the sake of honesty must be the most acceptable course.

Defence on the Farm

Stratford Beacon - Herald

John doesn't like having guns around. He knows that people have been killed while fooling around with guns that they were certain were not loaded. So he knows guns can be fascinating to small children.

John's farm is up north of the big city, though, and there have been a number of coons around the place for four or five years, both in wild animals such as foxes and racoons, and in domestic animals, particularly dogs and cattle. John knows that if a rabid fox bites a dog, and the dog then bites a human, the human has a straight choice of two courses. He can die a rather nasty, though fairly quick death, or he can submit to the needle for a series of 14 anti-rabies injections.

Reluctantly, John decided to buy a 2.2-calibre rifle and shotgun shells, household flare to use if just the sight of rabid fox might come near the farm buildings. As a compromise with his dislike of guns, and of killing, he did not buy any ammunition for the rifle.

There was no chance to shop around for ammunition, if John should decide to buy some. The only dealer who had ammunition to fit John's .22-calibre rifle was Uncle Sam Kennedy. If John should decide to have bullets for his rifle, he'd have to do business with Uncle Sam. The Sam firm as it happened, had formerly been run by Uncle Sam Eisenhower, and John had talked to him about buying ammunition, without making a deal. The firm name was changed, back in 1960, but it was still Uncle Sam and was still the only supplier.

The United States makes the Bomarc, it makes the warheads for it.

John talked to the Sam firm about a deal for some ammunition. John wondered if they could sell him the ammunition, but keep it in the Sam firm's warehouse, then if a rabid fox should attack the farm dog at John's place, John could telephone long-distance, and one of the Sam clerks could send out the ammunition, postage prepaid. As soon as the mail man or carrier arrived the next day, John could shoot the fox.

Canada Let Bomarc warheads to be kept "readily available."

One of the head men in the Sam firm said this wouldn't do; they wanted John to buy the ammunition and keep it at his farm. They were as much concerned as anybody, he said, that rabid foxes should be shot promptly. However, they wanted John to file an agreement that he wouldn't use any ammunition without telephoning to his headquarters for permission to shoot, and they also wanted him to agree to about sixty other things. The firm told him to; they might telephone him to pass the word that they had just about a fox coming John's way.

The Sam firm was a big one; it had an enormous cattle out of time (and I happen to be one of them) have perhaps relinquished the right to a civil declaration capacity for taking the present as it comes and enjoying it. They are forever planning ahead, living in the next hour, the next day, the next week, and the present is swallowed up by the future.

If the habitually unprompt are self-indulgent, the compulsively prompt are self-punishing; and it certainly seems to me that the person who is late for an engagement is generally more charming than the one who gets there early. This is what makes the punctual person so angry: he finds the people who are late have no right to be pleasant. Maybe this is what we resent in the dawdling children.

Snow Surprise

Halifax Chronicle-Herald

Canadians are a peculiar lot. Living in a northern climate, they nevertheless react in a shocked — even annoyed — manner when the first snow of winter arrives.

One might think it was lava. Street cleaning crews react sluggishly, motorists forget how to drive in the first inches and jams quickly develop. As if they had never heard of snow, thousands of people find they have no rubbers, overshoes, gloves, and that the winter tires are in the basement.

Frankly, just in case the family might buy some ammunition for R. Harkness thought, in fact, that it was rather silly not to have ammunition; he didn't think he could do much about the rabies danger by pointing an empty rifle at a fox, and saying, "Boo."

He was quite a determined boy, Harkness. He was polite to the head of the household, but finally, on Monday, February 4, he told John plainly that he, Harkness, was not going to look after that rifle any longer, and John could just spend the rest of the other boys to look after it.

Well, that's where the story ends, for now. If any foxes are looking on, they must be shocking.

Psychological Dimension To Time

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It is a truism by now that what we call "time" is relative to the position and speed of the observer. In handling children, we have to recognize also that "time" is relative to the age and experience of the observer. There is an important psychological dimension to time.

When a child promises to come in the house at the end of ten minutes, and is still after an hour, this is usually not willful disobedience. Children cannot be judged on the same time-scale as adults, for their reveries and dawdling are geared to a different clock than ours. Twenty minutes spent in tying a shoelace or playing with a second when the fantasy of the spaceship is more compelling than the reality of the school bus.

At the age of five, my boy wanted to hear if I had lived in the era of the cavemen, and seemed disappointed that I had never met any myself. At the age of six, he knew that a great time gulf existed between the cavemen and me, but he still wanted to know if I had ever met Abraham Lincoln.

To a child, a father is his six might as well be 150 years old. The difference between a father and a grandfather, it seems so pronounced to us, is nothing at all to a child.

Years, decades and centuries are all blurred in the short focus of the child's mind. What happened two years ago might have been yesterday, and next Friday is a million years away.

Understanding the relativity of time, in this psychological dimension, is absolutely essential if we are to cope with the world of children. It is a long and laborious process for the average person the time-sense of adulthood—and some people, it is true, never seem to get it.

The habitually unprompt, the inept planners, and last-minuters are really slaves to their emotional vestiges of their childhood, and are unconsciously reliving the same reluctant to break with their fantasies.

On the other hand, those persons with an overdeveloped sense of time (and I happen to be one of them) have perhaps relinquished too much of the civil declaration capacity for taking the present as it comes and enjoying it. They are forever planning ahead, living in the next hour, the next day, the next week, and the present is swallowed up by the future.

If the habitually unprompt are self-indulgent, the compulsively prompt are self-punishing; and it certainly seems to me that the person who is late for an engagement is generally more charming than the one who gets there early. This is what makes the punctual person so angry: he finds the people who are late have no right to be pleasant. Maybe this is what we resent in the dawdling children.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 22nd, 1913.

Approximately 1,000 passengers still were stranded at Cornwall station late yesterday as a result of a tie-up in passenger and freight train service on the main double track line of the Canadian National Railways between Montreal and Toronto. The stranded passengers remained in the coaches overnight and many waited downtown in Cornwall for meals. And from Ottawa came word that an estimated 14,000 persons bound for that place, reached there late yesterday after their transcontinental, Toronto and Pembroke were stranded from 10 to 18 hours between the capital and Smith Falls, Ont.

The undeveloped potentialities of Old Lady Moira, that fickle river which can be lazy and indolent in the summer and a swirling raging flood in the spring breakup, was graphically described by Mr. Arthur Neilly, well known Hastings County apriarist to the Belleville Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon on Monday. "Years ago," he stated, "one of the finest lakes that empties into the Moira River, was tapped by some Peterborough wiseacres who blasted an outlet and diverted the water to the Otonabee River."

There are grand opportunities at Crystal Lake, the Ship Channel, Lotta's Mills, Corbyville, Holgate's Mills, Lazier's Mills, Many acres of marsh have been lost through the lack of conservation of these waters, from the out of the damage caused by the disastrous flood in 1926 would have built all the dams necessary to hold back the flood waters and conserve them for future use.

Some Heresy On Frostbite

Ottawa Journal

A terse report appeared some days ago regarding the revolutionary, intelligence that frostbite should never be treated by rubbing snow on the cheeks, ears or plunging cold feet into cold water. Heat — hot water or hot air — was said, was the best way to thaw out. All this seemed too absurdly simple to be true. It is fine in the face of the folklore and tradition that cold Canadians have heard for generations.

So we tracked down the source of this heresy. There it was, set out in the most respectable of places, in the New England Journal of Medicine. Not only should snow and cold water be avoided in thawing out. The article said that the frozen part shouldn't be rubbed at all before, during or after rewarming.

Then comes the most distinguishing news of all. Remember the stories about the heroism of the noble St. Bernard dogs, each of cognac around their necks, bringing succor to those lost on the Alpine trails? The cognac might have done good but, say the researchers, the therapeutic value was nil. The only brief success in treating treatment when alcohol might be advantageous is when the actual warming is taking place and then only if the sufferer will not be exposed to cold again soon afterwards.

Most of the other information about chilled feet and proper clothing is known almost by instinct by anyone brought up in our climes. One bit of advice is delightfully gratuitous: Perspiration, it is said, should be avoided.

Try perspiring in Ottawa these days! Anybody who succeeds should be reported to the New England Journal of Medicine as a medical freak.

Botulism Very Dangerous And Acute Food Poisoning

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please explain botulism. Will any certain processes used in home canning prevent it?

Mrs. P. H.

Botulism is an acute and dangerous kind of food poisoning caused by one particular germ called Clostridium botulinum.

Unlike most germs, this is one which does not require air or oxygen for growth — quite the reverse. Hence if it happens to be trapped in an enclosed food container it can continue to multiply.

Proper canning will destroy the germ, and not since the early 1920's has commercially canned food been involved in a case of botulism.

It occasionally still occurs from home canned food, not often perhaps, but it is such a savage type of poisoning that one case is too many.

Usually there are no signs for 18 to 24 hours after eating food contaminated with the clostridium botulinum. Then the sky seems to cave in on the sufferer — first a feeling of extreme dizziness after which the serious symptoms appear: poor eye reflexes, double vision, diarrhea, vomiting, difficulty in swallowing.

Usually more than one person has eaten contaminated food, so the illness of several at the same time gives a quick and powerful clue.

The best treatment is probably a specific serum to combat the poison, plus other incidental medications aimed at the particular symptoms.

As I said, it's a dangerous disease, and the mortality rate can be as high as 65 percent, which is frightfully high.

Prevention can be a very, however. Cooking food for 30 minutes at 180 degrees will kill the toxin and germ.

Dear Dr. Molner: How harmful can paregoric be to a person who takes about two ounces a day?

K. T.

This might be justified in certain bowel disorders, but paregoric is still a narcotic and can cause drug addiction.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is cholesterol caused by the fat in food; does it have something to do with burning up energy by an active person?

V. W.

Animal fats are the richest source of cholesterol, but the body manufactures cholesterol from other foods, too, if necessary. And cholesterol, you understand, is a necessity in the body. It becomes a problem only when, for whatever reason, it is deposited excessively in the walls of the arteries.

Regular exercise, it has been shown in tests, reduces the amount of cholesterol circulating in the blood.

Note to K.M.R.: Tests in advance determine whether the various types of hearing loss can or can't be corrected, surgically. There is little if anything to be done once the nerve has lost its sensitivity, but many other cases can be corrected. Thus you can have at least a reasonably good forecast as to whether surgery is likely to succeed.

Headaches! You can beat them. Write to Dr. Molner care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill. for a copy of the booklet, "How to Tame Headaches." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope and 25c in coin to cover the cost of handling.

A force of British and Canadians under Lt.-Col. George Macdonnell crossed the St. Lawrence on the ice and captured Ogdensburg 150 years ago today in the War of 1812 — during the War of 1812. Macdonnell seized 11 cannon that were defending the town, and a large amount of military stores, and burned four warships. The raid was retaliation for an attack from Ogdensburg on Brockville earlier in the month in which 52 persons were captured.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

After fifteen years, I had occasion to revisit the plant of a small but very prosperous manufacturing company at which I used to be a regular and familiar visitor. In the meantime, I never had been a fishing companion of mine whom I picked up for lunch on numerous occasions. Who has died, I lost touch. On renewing my acquaintance with it, I was naturally pained to see which of the younger men in the firm, with whom I had been on the friendliest terms, had survived, and how they had advanced.

To my astonishment, the men who had been obviously next in line for top promotion were still in line, and a couple of them had left long ago. The general manager is now one of the lads I least expected to see rise to the top — a pleasant enough cousin to revisit the plant of a small but very prosperous manufacturing company at which I used to be a regular and familiar visitor. In the meantime,

Bomb Threat Made Against Queen, Philip

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP)—A bomb threat was made against the Queen when she arrived in Adelaide Tuesday, the Adelaide News reports.

The Queen and Prince Philip left Adelaide today aboard the royal yacht Britannia for Melbourne.

The newspaper says an unidentified man phoned one of its senior executives Tuesday and said: "There is a bomb planted at Holdens." Holdens is a large motor works outside Adelaide.

The News says three detectives investigated. The visit by the Queen and Philip to the plant went off without a hitch Tuesday.

The News says police also investigated reports that three men were overheard plotting to open the weir gates and drain Adelaide's River Torrens on which the Queen sailed to hear a concert at Elder Park Tuesday night. The objective was to prevent the Queen drifting on a barge to the festival.

GUARD AREA

Police kept the Torrens Weir and its approaches under close guard, the newspaper adds.

A message received from the escort ship Murae said both vessels were forced to manoeuvre several times to avoid the pots set out in shipping lanes.

Several fishing boats approached the Britannia to wave their catch, which is carrying the royal couple on their current Pacific tour.

High School Teacher Wins Nomination

KEMPTVILLE, Ont. (CP) — John Palmer, seven-foot, 200-pound high school teacher, Thursday night won the Liberal nomination for Grenville - Dundas in the April 8 election.

Mr. Palmer, 37, who lives in Kemptville and teaches in Prescott, defeated Bill Bost, 43-year-old political science lecturer at the University of Ottawa and former Canadian Press war correspondent, for the nomination.

Results of the ballot were not announced but party officials said Mr. Palmer's margin was very small.

The seat was held in the last parliament by Conservative Jean Casselman, daughter of Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario lieutenant-governor designate.

PRODUCE MARKET

Butter prices: Canada first grade: Ontario tenderable 51-52; non-tenderable 51¾, in light trading; western 52 (nominal).

Peer Says Cct Better Fed Than Prisoners

LONDON (AP)—An indignant British peer says his pet cat eats better than the 30,000 prisoners in British jails and prisons.

Lord Stonham, 59, a Labor peer, told the House of Lords only 15 shillings (£2.25) a week is spent on prisoners and 21 shillings of that goes for food.

"I asked my wife what 21 shillings a week for food meant and she told me she spent that much on shopbought food for our cat," Stonham declared. "The cat also eats some of ours.

"Our prisoners have the lowest standard of living in Europe.

Lord Dilhorne, spokesman for the Conservative government, replied that "The diet scales are fully adequate for health and great improvements have been made in recent years in the preparation and service of meals."

Windsor Man Says Uprising Due in Haiti

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—An explosive uprising in Haiti before May was predicted today by a Windsor man recently returned from a two-year stay in the dictator - dominated Carribean country.

Walter Rehm, 32, who worked as a mine supervisor for a Canadian mining company on the island said the uprising may take place before the national elections in May when President Francois Duvalier will seek reelection.

"Duvalier claims his program is one of social reform, liberty for his people and freedom from sovereign influence," Mr. Rehm said. "Actually he practises extortion, fear and murder of his people through his own secret police."

Mr. Rehm said the secret police—larger in numbers than the regular army—regularly extort money from small businessmen. There is also the civilian militia which pledges its allegiance to Duvalier and is designed for the president's personal protection."

EDDIE CANTOR ILL

Mrs. Cantor, who died last Aug. 8, left an estate estimated at more than $300,000.

Prince of Wales School Pupils Present Three Hilarious Talent Nights

On February 12th, Mr. B. Wright, principal of Prince of Wales School welcomed another capacity audience to the second "Talent Night," presented by the pupils of Miss Brown, Mrs. Hollywood, Miss Robertson and Miss Stephanson.

Miss Brown's class opened the program with a timely poem, "Boots Never Seem to Fit," followed by a delightful pantomime of "Goldilocks and the Three Bears," in which even the chairs, tables and trees were realistically portrayed by children. The class returned later to prove they were equally adept in the musical field, presenting first, "Wise Bird," "Song of the Seasons," "The Five Vowels," and for their finale, three nonsense songs, "My Old Rivver," "Chester," "Do Your Years Hang Low?"

Mrs. Hollywood's pupils were obviously delighted with their introduction to two-part harmony this year, their renditions of "Hunters' Moon," "The Bugle," "Morning Prayer," and "Follow the Leader" were excellent. In keeping with the season, a humorous play, exploring the difficulties of finding a Valentine gift from Mother, was ably presented.

Miss Robertson's group chose a choral speaking number, "The Snowman's Resolution," for their opener and returned later in the program to teach some good health habits in the form of an amusing play.

Miss Stephanson has undertaken to introduce square-dancing to the school, with the evident approval of all, for the children certainly enjoyed their demonstration of its finer points.

A medley of songs preceded their major contribution of the evening, a fine historical play, with imaginative costumes, of Christopher Columbus.

Mrs. Hollywood's songsters brought the evening to a close with their renditions of "Tic Toc," "By the Light of the Silvery Moon," "A Morning Prayer," and "Good Night, Mothers," the latter complete with bubbles to true Lawrence Welk fashion.

The final "Talent Night" was presented on February 20th by the classes of Mr. Wright, Mr. Emerson and Mrs. Hodgens.

A "Song of the Seasons" full costume roamed at large as Mr. Wright's class opened the program with three dramatized poems, "Pirate Dundurk of Dundee," "Solid Fact" (appreciated especially by the winter-weary mothers present) and "Money" and all its uses.

A young schoolgirl's solution to her homework problem presented the theme for a hilarious play involving the whole family. A succession of pictures drawn by Mr. Wright's pupils, projected on a screen and accompanied by an excellent narration, provided a lively way of telling the story of "Ti-Jean Goes Lumbering."

The show concluded with a rollicking play, inviting the audience to decide which was the more hazardous vocation—that of a housewife or a door-to-door salesman.

HIGH BOYS

An agile group of boys from Mrs. Hodgens' class appeared to have no difficulty slapping "Down in the Valley World," whether they were on their heads or on their feet—to the amusement of all. Three choral speaking poems, "Changing the Guard at Buckingham Palace," "The Proud Train," and "The Pessimist" were followed by a fine accordion solo and a display of baton twirling by two talented young ladies.

The art of pure speaking was demonstrated by a young student from Mr. Emerson's class — her topic—"Florida." A spirited display of square dancing had all toes tapping. These pupils had also been taught by Miss Stephanson.

After a brief history of the introduction of the Negro to North America by Mr. Emerson, the entire class, faces blackened, presented a medley of Negro spirituals, including "Old Black Joe," "It's Me, O Lord", "Swing Low," "Go Down, Moses," "Ezekiel Saw A Wheel" and "When the Saints Go Marching In." A solo recitation, a Negro version of the story of Adam and Eve, was a perfect conclusion to their program.

A fine display of student art decorated the walls of the auditorium during the three Talent Nights.

Flu Epidemic Worse in U.S.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—Influenza cases in the United States continue to increase and medical authorities are urging vaccinations to combat the spreading outbreak.

The communicable disease centre of the U.S. Public Health Service said today information compiled weekly from its 108 reporting cities across the United States drew 703 pneumonia-influenza deaths through the week ended Feb. 16. That is 54 deaths more than the previous week. Deaths outside these 108 reporting cities would run the figure higher.

The death toll is showing a continued marked increase in south and middle Atlantic states, the centre said. The flu outbreaks reached epidemic proportions in areas along the Atlantic seaboard Jan. 15, took a sharp swing upward two weeks ago and moved westward.

Different Kind of Dude Ranch For Different Kind Of Being Developed

By BRUCE LEVETT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A different kind of dude ranch for a different kind of dude has been developed in the dry belt around Ashcroft, B.C., 250 miles northeast of here.

It allows would-be ranchers to take part in the operation of a 20,000-acre working spread in their spare time without the heavy cost involved in buying and running a ranch.

George Treit, president of the Vancouver real estate firm operating the "ranchettes," says 100 home sites have been set aside, each of one to two acres, for lease at $240 a year.

Leases run from 10 to 99 years and can be paid semi-annually.

"The lessee has full run of the working ranch," Mr. Treit says.

"He can ride or hike anywhere any of the working cowboys can go. And he can help with the operation of the main spread."

SEE AND FISH

Instead of riding fence in the winter, he can ski in the hills or skate on the lakes. He can help with the branding if he wishes, but he may also wander over into the mountains hunting moose, deer or bear or shooting partridge or pheasant. For the fisherman, there are steelhead and lake trout.

He can own his own horses and, for an extra fee, run them with the ranch herd during the winter, or he may rent his mounts from the main ranch.

"It's for the man who finds it too expensive to take his family for two weeks to a guest ranch, some of which charge up to $100 a person a week.

"And it's for the man and his family who want to set their own schedule, working is supervised. You can do as you like."

Mesa Vista is owned by a Vancouver syndicate. Bordering the main 20,000 acres is another 60,000 acres of land under range permit on which the ranch runs its 400 head of cattle and its horse herd.

SOME FOR HERMITS

It ranges from sagebrush country along the North Thompson River up into timbered hills that rise 4,000 feet.

There is no accommodation for the lessee. He builds his own house or cabin and, say the brochures, "if desired, experienced staff can carry out construction at equitable cost."

Three types of ranchettes are offered.

Some 30 of the home sites are clustered in a community project with trunk line services of power, telephone, road and water. Lessees make their own connections.

In a more secluded area reserved for smaller groups, three or four ranchette sites are clustered. These will be serviced fully except for water and the lessee must drill his own well.

Also available are a few hermit sites where roads, power, water and telephone are the problem of the lessee.

partment turned down press photographers' requests - that Tunk pose with Ritchie. The department said Rusk didn't have time.

Ritchie was called to Ottawa Jan. 31 for consultations after Diefenbaker described a state department statement taking issue with his nuclear policies as an unwarranted intrusion in Canadian affairs.

STORE OVER BORDER?

Diefenbaker was reported to have proposed at one stage that the U.S. store the warheads suitable for Canada's jet fighters and Bomarc missiles on the U.S. side of the border, to be hauled into Canadian bases if and when a war breaks out.

This, it is reported, is what the state department had in mind when it said Jan. 30 that Canadian government proposals were impractical and ineffective.

While neither side would disclose details of Thursday's meeting, the Canadian embassy and state department said that along with North American defence, Cuba and Laos were discussed.

The Cuban discussion was reported to have covered the Caribbean shrimp boat incident where two Cuban MIG fighters sprayed the waters near the disabled boat with machine-gun fire.

DESERONTO

Council Hears Col. A. Duffy On Survival

DESERONTO — At the regular meeting on Monday night the town council was addressed by Col. A. Duffy, of Belleville, Co-ordinator for the Quinte Area E.M.O. Col. Duffy spoke to the council on the need to educate the people of the area in event of a nuclear strike against Canada. He told council that in the past war meant the sending of troops to foreign countries and Canada was not involved as a war area. He advised that in a future war the country would be like Belgium has been in the past two wars.

He spoke of the effect of an atom bomb striking Toronto and said that with westerly winds prevailing 65 per cent of the time the fallout in this area would be heavy. "This area," he said, "would be a reception area and we would be expected to accept survivors of the bomb sites and to do of four to one for our present population. He stressed that it was not a question of what we wanted to do but of what we would have to be because survival would be the main object of all efforts." He stressed the density of the fallout that could be expected here and said that we need to be prepared to protect themselves. According to him plans have been made for the survival of what are classified populated areas and everything the hospitals would be forced to operate at three times their present capacity. He told council that a committee should be set up in this area so far even set the operational headquarters for the town as a control centre and that is the best for protection.

Council thanked Col. Duffy for his address and agreed that a committee would soon be arranged.

A letter correspondence received at the meeting was a letter from I. Thompson applying for the position of dog catcher. This was filed.

The resignation of James McVicker as building inspector was laid over until council could obtain more information.

After a short recess council gave notice of motion for the rescinding of the by-law appointing the building inspector.

The request of the Deseronto Red Cross to canvas the town on March 12th was granted.

In the financial report there was an item of $160.89 for gas and repairs to the police car.

WILL REMOVE TREES

The street committee reported on a number of trees to be removed and there was some discussion regarding the installing of the light near the public school. The relief committee reported three assisted persons and ten families with fifty dependents on welfare.

The fire and police committees and recommended a raise of $1.00 per month in the monthly fee of the volunteer firemen and recommended subscribing to the telephone answering service at a cost of $15 per month for the police department. Both recommendations were passed.

One by-law was passed to provide for the expenditures in the streets for a total of $15,000.

Reeve Lott gave a report to council on the questions asked last meeting by George Jackson. He advised that the police car was in Belleville, Napanee and Picton on normal police duties and specific information could not be given out. He advised that passenger hazard and other insurance was carried on the police car and the duties of the police are to enforce the Police Act, Liquor Act, Highway Traffic Act and local by-laws. The gas consumption of the police car averages 4½ gallons per day for an operating period of 20 to 21 hours.

Suppose Jesus Returns?

By ROY L. SMITH

Among the Jews of Jesus' day there was a universal expectation that the "Messiah" was to put in an appearance, and inaugurate an entirely new era in human affairs.

But there were wide differences as to precisely "who" or "what" the Messiah was to be. There were those who believed he would be sent by the people of the area in event of a nuclear strike against Canada. He told council that in the past war meant the sending of troops to foreign countries and Canada was not involved as a war area. He advised that in a future war the country would be like Belgium has been in the past two wars.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for February 24: "YOU ARE THE CHRIST." Mark 8: 27 through 9:1.

Suppose, again, that Jesus should happen to decide to appear in Harlem, Chinatown or in the lettuce fields among the braceros. Would we cross town to find Him?

THE QUESTION OF FLESH COLOR

In the days before the communist take-over in China, I was spending some time in Shanghai, and found myself one afternoon in a great department store.

In hunting about in the hope of finding some material I wanted to bring home for my family, I encountered an English floorwalker. He was an affable kind of person, and helped me immensely. But he also seemed to want to talk.

"These Chinese ladies are funny, you know," he said. "There was one of them in 'ere a bit ago trying to buy some 'oce. I asked her what kind of 'oce she wanted, and blimy, she said, 'I want flesh color.' I say, what is flesh color?' The cockney's question has never left me. "What is flesh color?'

If Jesus took on "flesh" what color would that flesh be? Suppose He chose the color of the majority of us, it would not be white, for the white man is in the minority in our world. And if He chose the color of the most decent people in the world — those who are nearest to the kingdom of God — what color would that be?

Suppose Jesus were to appear in "flesh color" just where would He go to church in our town, on the Sunday following His second coming.

And if we were to take Him out to see the city, after dinner, what would we be most anxious to show Him? Would there be any part of the city we would not want Him to see?

If there is such a part of the city, maybe that's where the church ought to be putting in its best licks.

ler except a test ban until we are assured that the negotiation of this subject has been seriously undertaken and is being conducted in a manner which promises to yield concrete results."

Burns said the conference has a grave moral responsibility to stop nuclear testing in accordance with "an unambiguous mandate from world opinion" as expressed by the UN General Assembly.

SAYS EVERYBODY AGREED

"All the nations of the world are united in calling for the early conclusion of an agreement to ban tests. At this moment, when the obstacles which have blocked the negotiations on a treaty have been so substantially reduced, world opinion will not understand any slackening in our efforts to resolve this issue."

Burns suggested that the United States and Britain accept each submit a complete draft treaty, leaving blank the number of on-site inspections and black boxes (robot detection stations). In this way, each side would understand the other's thinking on inspection procedures before making a final commitment on numbers.

The Canadian delegate urged the American willingness to negotiate on the number of inspections, and said this proposal does not present difference over numbers was not an insuperable obstacle.

He also welcomed the Soviet concession in offering any on-site inspections at all, and declared:

"The Canadian delegation is grateful for this step forward. But how is it to assess the value of this concession until it has a more precise idea of what the Soviet Union understands these on-site inspections would involve?"

Kennedy

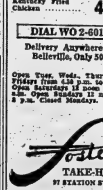
Furthermore, these sources said, the president's orders probably will result in placing more fast jets on "strip alert" — ready to take off.

Navy and marine Phantom jets are poised at all times at the Key West Naval Air Station, 90 miles across the Florida Straits from Cuba's north coast. At Homestead Air Force Base south of Miami, air force F-104 jets also are on alert.

The navy operates combat air patrols in the sensitive area between the Florida keys and the Caribbean Cuba coast with weapons cocked. There now may be more such patrols. Radar scans the Cuban coast constantly.

QUEEN A VICTIM

Asked at his press conference if an assault similar to the one on the shrimp boat might have been responsible for the disappearance earlier this month of the U.S. trawler Marine Queen, Kennedy said he had no information indicating this.



"But certain we would examine it," he said.

There is much the United States is not sure of—and may never know—about the attack on this vessel, whether it was a deliberate decision by the Cuban government or a decision by the pilots involved," Kennedy said.

He added that the 67-foot boat was lying in the water without flying any flag.

Some military officials, remarking on the same aspect, suggested the MiGs flying at perhaps 400 or 500 miles an hour may have taken the drifting boat for a derelict and may not have been in search practice. They missed by some 40 yards, Kennedy said.

WE'LL GIVE YOU $135.00 CASH TO PAY YOUR '63 TRACTOR FUEL BILL

(AND DON'T BE SURPRISED IF YOU HAVE SOME LEFT OVER FOR '64)

We want to make a point that the Case 3-plow 430 and the Case 3-4 plow 530 Dynaclonic diesel tractors cost less to operate than any comparable tractors on earth.

Yes, both already are world's diesel fuel economy champions in their classes. And here's your chance to make us prove our economy claims—on free fuel!

If you purchase a new Case 430 or 530 farm tractor* between January 15 and Feb. 28, 1963, we'll send you our check for $135 payable in cash. How much No. 2 diesel fuel can you buy locally for $135? Figuring a national tank wagon average price per gallon of 15.9c, that's 850 gallons.

In a Case Dynaclonic diesel, that's much more diesel fuel than you'll likely use in a year's work — with a healthy amount left over for next year!

Here's why we're so sure: in Dynaclonic design, each fuel charge is packed into a swirling tornado. It achieves the "maximum turbulence" engineers seek — the complete blending of fuel and air essential to complete combustion.

Results: more pounds of thrust—up to 13,700 pounds behind every piston stroke! More work-power from every ounce of fuel.

Team this combustion efficiency with Dynaclonic's long-stroke, high-torque design, and you'll see where its extra power comes from—why it can pull through where high speed automotive type engines begin to labor and stall.

Get the details— and a demonstration — from your Case dealer. And do it soon. Remember, the free fuel offer is good only through Feb. 28.

*PREFER GASOLINE TO DIESEL?

The same $135 cash bonus applies. Gasoline or diesel, you purchase the fuel at your convenience and from the local supplier of your choice.

On Sunday evening, 17th, Mr. D. Walker chose as his Scripture reading, "The Feeding of the 5,000." Scripture read was found in the Gospel John 6:1-14. This miracle occurred in the desert of Judea, and should not be confused with the feeding of 4,000 men as well as women and children, which occurred in the region of Tyre and Sidon, the first time our Lord had turned from Israel to preach to the Gentiles.

During His earthly life, our Lord devoted His ministry to "The Lost Sheep of the House of Israel." It was only after His resurrection that He commanded His followers "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

He read a letter from John Weisdorf, assistant provincial director of the Legal Aid Section of the Department of Law Society of Upper Canada, which said the society was "not unsympathetic to the belief that the public defender system was the best defence for an accused.

Lands and Forests Minister Kelso Roberts told the legislature, in answer to opposition charges that the province has been slow and indecisive in combatting Dutch Elm disease, there was "no reason to believe it will not cover all the species of elm that are native." However this did not mean the disease would not eventually be wiped out.

Mr. Roberts said spraying with chemical preparations and removal of dead trees might help control spread of infection but cross-breeding to develop disease - resistant varieties of elm "may be the best answer."

SPRAY A 'WASTE'

Robert Nixon (Bruce-Grant) said he understood the only effective control measure was destruction of dying elms to prevent spread of infection. He said spray control was a "waste of money."

Municipal Affairs Minister Spooner said legislation will be introduced amending the 1962 assessment Act, requiring all railway hotels in Ontario to pay business taxes.

He told the private bills committee the amendment will end an exemption held by the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, owned by Canadian Pacific Railway, since it was built in 1928. Business tax on the hotel was estimated at $170,000 last year.

The legislature threw out part of a private bill which would have allowed Toronto City Council to levy a one-per-cent tax on winnings at Old Woodbine racetrack, within the city limits.

American States, in which the U.S. is the leading voice.

Mr. Thompson said Canada should take the lead in establishing a Commonwealth trading community. The community would be centred around a "Commonwealth settlement bank" the functions of which he did not define.

Trade among Commonwealth countries would be financed "without the barriers of gold and foreign exchange crisis that have plagued our trade, especially with Great Britain, in the past."

The system could be used to expand Canada's trade with the United States, elsewhere in the hemisphere and with areas such as Europe and Japan.

He said trade with the Communist bloc will eventually weaken the "myth" of Communist strategy of peaceful co-existence was being helped by "naive pacifists, ban-the-bomb-ers and naive idealists who work diligently to weaken the military strength and political cohesion of the West."

The circumstances of the election indicated a "fight between isolationism with all its self-delusions, compromises and dishonesty and internationalism in its realistic form of interdependence."

WOULD START BANK

Mr. Thompson told a public meeting Thursday night establishment of a "social development bank," operating through the Bank of Canada, would supply money for schools, hospitals and other public projects at low cost.

He told the press conference earlier his party would support a minority government as long as its policies were agreeable to Social Credit.

Parliament had collapsed because of a series of leadership, policy and personality clashes the official opposition had failed to come to grips with public problems.

Mr. Thompson also urged the workers in another speech that, if he forms the next government, he is sure he will have the full co-operation of the Quebec wing of Social Credit.

Although not interested in a national health scheme, he told supporters he would like to see the federal government participate in a voluntary health plan to make needed care available to each person in the form he chooses.

U.S. State Dept. Will Test Foreign Policy by Computer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The state department is going to try to get background help on foreign affairs questions by push button.

Given a go-ahead by Secretary Dean Rusk after a visit to the Pentagon computer center last summer, the department's electronic answering system is due to swing into operation on an experimental basis during the fiscal year that begins July 1.

This was disclosed in the latest state department newsletter, a publication distributed to U.S. diplomats.

Successful demonstrations by the new information storing and retrieving machine, the newsletter said, points toward creation of "a system of mechanized support for researchers, desk officer, policy planners and decision makers who daily depend on substantive information and who frequently need it in a hurry."

Three desk officers — officials who deal with affairs of a particular country — have tried out the machine. All liked the results and two of the specialists reported it speeded forth "important documents . . . that they had never before known existed."

MEMORIZES MATERIAL

Here's how the system is supposed to work:

Researchers comb through the department's voluminous stacks of political, military, economic, geographic, biographic and miscellaneous information and decide what is important enough to be stored on the computer's memory tape. Then the information is indexed, or coded, to be given as an answer.

A simple question such as "what are the expressed views of Mr. X on subject Y?" produces a simple answer.

But questions asked too broadly can cause trouble, the newsletter warns. That's because the electronic selector, trying to cover all the angles on a fuzzy query, will tend to throw in a pile of only distantly related information.

Further word of caution to Washington foreign policy makers: "Rumors and reports to the contrary," the machine, alas, will not make foreign policy decisions.

Today's Cooking Magic

Give Baked Love Letters

Cookbook No. 14—Recipe No. 2

THE HUNGARIAN COOKBOOK

You no doubt are familiar with sending romantic messages — but have you ever heard of love letters that are baked? They are a Hungarian specialty. Tender pastry squares become "letters," each with a cinnamon-nut surprise sealed inside. Try them — you'll find the recipe below. This is one of 351 delicacies, detailed step by step in the Hungarian Cookbook, issued by The Ontario Intelligencer's Cooking Magic Series. Get your copy and start learning the secrets of one of Europe's most distinctive cuisines!

LOVE LETTERS
(Szerelmes Levelek)

Lightly grease baking sheets.

For dough — sift together into a large bowl 2 cups sifted flour; 2 tablespoons sugar, and ¼ teaspoon salt. Work into dry ingredients by pressing against bottom and sides of bowl with a fork, ¾ cup butter, chilled and cut in pieces.

Add gradually to butter-flour mixture, blending ingredients with a fork, 4 egg yolks, slightly beaten. (Mixture will be crumbly.)

Gather dough into a ball. Turn onto lightly floured surface. Squeeze dough until well blended, shaping into smooth ball with palms of hands. Divide dough into halves; wrap in waxed paper and place in refrigerator or about one hour. Shape dough in a very cool kitchen. After 45 minutes prepare filling.

For filling — Mix together ½ cup (about 2 oz.) coarsely chopped walnuts and 1 tablespoon granulated sugar; set aside. Beat until frothy, 2 egg whites. Add gradually to egg whites, beating well after each addition, a mixture of ¾ cup sugar and ½ teaspoon cinnamon.

Beat until rounded peaks are formed. Gently fold nut mixture into the egg whites. Set filling aside.

To form love letters — Remove half of dough from refrigerator; place on lightly floured surface and roll into rectangle 1/16 inch thick. Work quickly to prevent dough from becoming too soft. With knife or pastry, gently loosen wherever sticking occurs; lift dough gently by and sprinkle flour underneath. Trim off uneven edges of rectangle. Gather trimmings into a ball and roll into rectangle as per and place in refrigerator.

Cut rectangle into 3-inch squares. Place about 2 teaspoons of filling in centre of each square. Fold opposite corners together, overlapping slightly at centre. Repeat with other two corners. Place love letters 1 inch apart on baking sheet and brush with slightly beaten egg. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 20-30 minutes, or until lightly browned. When cooled, sift over top letters a mixture of 2/3 teaspoon confectioners' sugar and ½ teaspoon cinnamon. Yield: about 2½ dozen Love Letters.

If new ideas you want today prepare your meals the Hungarian way.

Woman in Business as Letter Writer

EDMONTON (CP) — Leora Smithson has more than her share of problems.

She also has more than her share of letters to write—that's in business as a letter writer.

Her talent with a pen has been cultivated over a period from 16 to 60 since she advertised in an Edmonton newspaper.

She says of her work: "I take on them. I welcome it. I just can't help it."

People come to the small apartment to discuss their problems and how they can be handled. Some of the people who consult the tall, slim and sensitive scribe are new Canadians who haven't mastered the language.

But most are young people whom she describes as "inexperienced and needing help."

Often simply talking their problems over is a great help, says Miss Smithson. She gives her advice on how a subject should be approached and then the letter should be written.

After her customer leaves, Miss Smithson sits down and puts the person's wishes into words.

In a few minutes she may have completed a simple letter of application. But after hours of concentration to write a letter on a touchy family problem.

"They're all different and all most confidential," she explains.

A few days later the customer returns to check the letter. He may even sit down at his own hand or Miss Smithson may do the handwriting.

The charge for her services averages about $2 but varies according to the time taken. Generally she writes two letters a day.

"I've been very fond of writing letters since I was a child," she says, and adds that she considers herself a correspondence of her own.

Knowing that her letters often help in a great collaboration and customers frequently come back to tell her the results.

STIRK — ELLIOTT

Plainfield United Church was the setting of a pretty recent winter wedding when Margaret Isobelle Elliott, only daughter of Mrs. Wilbert W. Elliott and the late Mr. Elliott, was united in marriage to Samuel Anthony Stirk, of Roslin, son of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel D. Stirk, of Brampton. The Rev. Robert Nicholls officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The church was decorated with baskets of white chrysanthemums and pink snapdragons. The guest pews were reserved with white satin bows.

Mrs. Harry Harrison, church pianist, rendered the wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Earle Wannamaker of Roslin who sang, "The Lord's Prayer," before the ceremony and "Because," during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Howard Elliott, of Plainfield, was charming in her bridal gown of white faille, fashioned with a full skirt flowing into a chapel train. The fitted bodice with scoop neckline was accented with applique lace, the full length sleeves ended in lily-point cuffs and the matching headdress was a tiara of seed pearls with a short bouffant veil of silk net falling from the back. Bible crested with red roses and white satin streamers knotted with red roses.

She was attended by Mrs. Fred Janke, of Waterloo, as matron of honor and the Misses Mary and Barbara Elliott, nieces of the bride, as junior bridesmaids. The flower girls were the Misses Anne and Diane Elliott, nieces of the bride.

The matron of honor was gowned in sapphire blue velvet, fashioned with three-quarter length sleeves, V neckline and short sleeves. She wore a tiara of matching velvet leaves and velvet and short white gloves. Her nosegay bouquet was of white irises and pink Sweetheart roses.

The junior bridesmaids and flower girl were identically dressed alike in short sapphire blue velvet dresses with rounded necklines and short puffed sleeves. The softly gathered skirts were accented with sashes of white nylon organza. Their headdresses were of matching velvet, banded in the bandeau style. They wore short white gloves. The junior bridesmaids carried nosegays of white irises and pink sweetheart roses, while the flower girls carried baskets of white irises and pink Sweetheart roses.

The bridegroom was attended with a brother, Gerald Stirk of Brampton, and the guests were ushered by Mr. Lorne Elliott, R.R. 6, Belleville, and Mr. Donald Sills, of Plainfield.

The reception was held in the Plainfield Orange Hall, where the bride's table was appointed with white damask centred with a three-tier wedding cake topped with a tiny pair of doves holding wedding rings. Red roses encircled the base. The bridal bouquets completed the table decor.

The guests were received by the bride's mother, in a two-piece teal blue double knit wool dress and mink hat. Her corsage was of red roses. She was assisted by the bride's groom's mother in mauve lace with matching hat. Her corsage was of talisman roses.

For the wedding trip to Arizona and the southwestern States the bride donned a three-piece double-knit suit of mink brown with beige and brown accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

Out-of-town guests were present from Brampton; Oshawa; Kingston; Brockville; Orillia; Peterborough and Waterloo.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was honored at two showers: a cup and saucer shower at the home of Mrs. Allan Lott, Holloway; and a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Earl Thompson, Plainfield.

World Fairs, Past, Present And Future

By Zena Cherry

Thomas J. Watson Jr., IBM chairman, has sent a cheque for $100,000 worth of admission tickets to the 1964-5 New York World's Fair. They are to be given to company employees. Beginning March 1, 1964, if we're all still here, prices will be $2. for single adult admission; $1.00 for children 12 years and under.

Orders placed before February 29, 1964, will cost 10 per cent less. If you'd like to buy 50 tickets, you'll get a 25 per cent reduction.

Where did all this Fair business start? Just over 100 years ago the English thought up the idea and produced the Great Exposition of 1851 in London and the Crystal Palace with its high main floor surrounded by balconies has been the model for exhibition buildings ever since.

Two years later the American, in 1853, copied the idea, built their own Crystal Palace and dubbed it the World's Fair. There were over 4000 exhibitors but it lost money.

Ten more world's fairs took place within the next 99 years, mostly in the States. They have done as much as anything to open the Western frontiers to the masses and have helped speed acceptance of new inventions. Take the Chicago Fair of 1893, the Palace of Electricity lit the imagination of the world. Reason were written — perhaps all summed up by the one reporter who wrote, "Why, mamma, say, electricity is almost supernatural." (It still is, to me.)

The Bureau of International Expositions at Paris does not recognize the New York 1964-5 show as a World's Fair, only approved Seattle —and there is a rule against approving more than one a year. The next country within a 10-year period and against a show running more than one season. The 50-odd member nations will not send government exhibits to New York. However, of the 40 nations already lined up, many are from SIX countries. They are circumventing the approval problem of marshalling exhibits under the aegis of business firms.

The exposition in Montreal, 1967, is NOT approved.

The Paris Exposition of 1900 was the most popular World's Fair ever held. Over 50 million visitors. Paid attendance at the New York 1939 Fair was only 26 million. The 1964 New York show is looking forward to 700 million. Why? Because of the 50 per cent increase in the population in the States since 1939, and for the simple reason it will run for six years instead of the usual one season. (C).

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E-Q?

We receive many letters from women asking how they should sign their business and social mail. These are the questions most frequently asked:

1. What signature does a single woman use on letters and invitations that are purely social?

2. What signature does she use on business letters and letters or notes to mere acquaintances?

3. How does a married woman sign her name?

4. What signature does she use on business correspondence and letters to those with whom she's not well acquainted?

5. Should she always sign this type of mail with her full married name in parentheses under her signature?

6. May a married woman ever sign her name with "Mrs." in front of it instead of in parentheses?

7. Is it ever permissible to sign a note with just initials?

8. What form does a divorcee use?

9. How does a widow sign her name?

10. When a couple is legally separated, does the wife make any change in her signature?

Answers:

1. She signs either "Mary" or "Mary Jones," depending on how well she knows the person she's writing to.

2. (Miss) Mary Jones, so her correspondent will know how to address her in reply.

3. She uses her given name, maiden name and married name. If Mary Jones married Stephen Mason, she'd sign Mary Jones Mason. This form is used on cheques and other legal documents as well as on a great deal of her correspondence.

4. Simply Mary Mason or Mary Jones Mason, then underneath add (Mrs. Stephen Mason).

5. It's not necessary to add her married name in parentheses if it's engraved or imprinted on her stationery.

6. This is permissible in a note to a tradesman who knows her only as Mrs. Stephen Mason, and is used only for the sake of clarity so she won't be mistaken for another Mason.

7. A note to a maid or dayworker may be signed this way, but, since it is a memo, in effect, there should be no salutation or closing.

8. A divorcee signs social mail Mary Mason or Mary Jones Mason. When parentheses are used underneath, however, she signs (Mrs. Jones Mason), coupling her maiden and married names. She does not sign (Mrs. Stephen Mason) as formerly.

9. A widow continues using her husband's name as before.

10. No, she continues to be Mrs. Stephen Mason until a divorce takes place.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Genevieve R. — He can't seem to find himself after retirement.

Jerome R. — I feel like a used car nobody wants to buy.

Genevieve R. — My husband was a sea captain. Every job he ever held was on a boat or ship. As a boy he used to do odd jobs on fishing trawlers. Then he stuck to coastering until he got his seaman papers. After that he rose to commanding cargo freighters for shipping companies.

But now he's over age and has been retired. There's no dire financial problem. Maybe he'd be better off if there were. He'd have to get busy with something. He doesn't want to travel any more. So he just sits by the radio doing crossword puzzles, or dozes in front of TV. I'd like to help him get out of this daze, but he says it's no use.

Jerome R. — The first few months of my retirement were not bad. My wife and I got into our car and drove here and there all over the U.S.A., like the landlubbers do. We even took one of those bus tours to California, and some train trips to Canada.

But I know that in the end I must stay put, in one place. And since all I know how to do is run a ship, there's not much for me to busy myself with when I'm aground. What's the use of my forcing myself on others when they're busy with their own interests and I have nothing in common with them?

I'm like the used car left over in the lot, or the fish out of water. It's the end of the run.

The Council: Retirement in the prime of life is so recent a phenomenon in our society that we haven't had time to come to grips with making the best use of it. A generation hence, we'll bet, there'll be Transition Centres (whatever the name may be) where "decompression" takes place. That is, the work horse who has put in his 8-hour day for 40 years or so will be prepared for the slower pace, the freer choice of the retirement period.

So let's just say that Jerome was born too soon for the directional signals to be up and awaiting him. A do-it-yourself job is in order. And Genevieve's role is to encourage Jerome to try one little thing, take one step out of his blue funk of despair. For never was it more true that one thing leads to another when the one thing is a reaching out to serve a fellowman.

What can Jerome offer? Well, he certainly didn't spent his life in a vacuum. He can visit veterans' hospitals and swap yarns. He can talk to Stamp and Coin Clubs, telling them of his visits to the places they know only from their atlases and albums.

If he's a literate man he can offer to help school kids with their reading. What fun to ask him to bound Alaska or name the Dodecanese Islands! Older children, per arrangement with the P.T.A., can bring their tough geography homework to him.

And if his lack of schooling makes this line of endeavor impossible, how about sorting mail in a hospital, running errands and acting as messenger in a home for the aged? Also, they want aids about encouragement. We read one which asked for "teen-agers or retirees" to act as guides in a museum.

All depends upon Jerome's admission that even an old rea dog can learn new tricks. Perhaps it will take a guidance counsellor to eke that admission out of him. Or he may meet a living example of same, like the retired ironworker we know who is now a dextrous hairdresser, turning out fluffy, delicate coiffures!

Readers' Friday Column

by Mary Moore

Letter: Did you know that a combination of oil, vinegar, and blue cheese which has been softened at room temperature, thoroughly whipped in the electric beater, will produce twice the volume of Roquefort Dressing that you can buy ready-mixed for a given price? — just as good too. I store it in widemouth jars because it tends to thicken. Sorry I can't give the exact proportions — I just keep adding oil and vinegar (in a ratio of 2 to 1, I think) until it looks and tastes right. Lots of beating. — Helen P.

Dinner Menus

FRIDAY

Chilled Apple Juice; Baked Salmon Loaf; Tomato-Onion Sauce; Baked Butternut Squash; Spinach; Two-Crust Rhubarb Pie; Cheddar Cheese; Coffee.

SUNDAY

Pot Roasted Blade (see Thursday); Dark Brown Gravy (see Thursday); Fluffy Mashed Turnip; Fresh Frozen Peas; Tossed Greens with Homemade Roquefort Dressing (see Friday); Plain Blanc Mange topped with Apricot Jam and Whipped Cream; Coffee.

Answer: Thank you very much. I made Roquefort Dressing following your suggestion and these are the proportions I used: One 5-oz. piece Danish blue cheese (8oz. per lb.) at room temperature, 1¼ cups cold oil and 6 tablespoons canned lemon juice (or vinegar). I whipped the soft cheese in the electric beater until it was light then gradually added the oil, alternately with the lemon juice. This whipped up to over a pint. I used some for my dinner salad and stored the remainder in a pint jar. The following day it had thickened somewhat as you mentioned. I like it and thank you for this idea which is new to me.

Question: I once ate a dish of baked beans, and bits of bacon with a barbecue sauce baked in the oven. I believe there was pea beans also, but not sure of this now. Would you have any such recipe in your files? — Mrs. N. P.

Answer: I think what follows is it.

BAKED BARBECUED LIMAS
(serves 6 generously)

1 pkg. dried lima beans; ¼ to ½ lb. piece side bacon (or salt pork); 6 cups boiling water; 1 onion, chopped; 3 cloves garlic, chopped; 2 tablespoons oil or margarine; 1 to 1½ teaspoons chili powder; 1 can condensed tomato soup; 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce; 2 teaspoons prepared mustard; ¼ cup light brown sugar; ¼ cup vinegar; 1 teaspoon salt.

Soak beans overnight. Drain. Score the bacon at ¼" intervals nearly through to the rind or chop coarsely, in large heavy kettle pour boiling water over bacon, add drained lima beans and simmer 1½ hours, uncovered. Drain and reserve juice. Heat oil or margarine in frying pan and saute onion and garlic until wilted but not brown. Add chili powder and mix. Stir in tomato soup and 1½ cups of leftover bean juice, Worcestershire sauce, mustard, sugar, vinegar and salt. Turn bean mixture and sauce in alternate layers into large casserole and bake covered at 350 deg. Fahr. for 45 minutes. Remove cover and bake 15 to 25 minutes longer.

Your family's silent partner

Lying there on the doorstep, it can't speak. Or Move. Or Hear. But open it in your hands and it becomes a living, powerful partner in daily living. In the decisions you make, the opinions you form.

It takes you to the highest chambers of government. It takes you to the bloodfest streets of warring countries. It takes you to the heart of history in the making. In short, it tells you what in the world is happening and why.

But people depend on it for needs beyond the need to know. It's where families turn when something's to be bought or sold. It's where hints on health, cooking, religion, amusements, dressmaking, etiquette, marriage are found.

It's where charities first turn for help, and a place where a letter to the editor is published. It's where campaigns are fought and lost dogs are found. It's where criminals are exposed and newlyweds applauded. Where birth and death meet on the same page.

It's your newspaper, silent partner of the family, yet one that says so much, does so much for so many people — every day without fail.

Was Insulted - Walked Out

DEAR DORIS:

"It's not enough to help the feeble up, But to support him after."

— Shakespeare.

The above would seem to be the theme of the only social club I ever had the honor to know, namely You. Now I need help again.

A business acquaintance moved here with his second wife, having divorced the first one. For business reasons I've cultivated her. Then a few nights ago I made a statement about his national background (meant to be complimentary), but she jumped on me. Said I always knew everything. Went on until I told her off and walked out.

DORIS CLARK

My husband said I should have had more patience. But I don't approve of home breakers (which I consider this girl) and to have to associate with her in order to help my husband in his business is a great sacrifice of principles.

What do you make of it?—IMPULSIVE.

DEAR IMPULSIVE—You're human, alert, sensitive! But do you have a right to stand in judgment? This woman doubtless senses your disapproving patronage and is also reacting to a thoroughly human way.

I'd say patch it up. Try again to keep your head. And give your heart some place else.

DEAR DORIS—Ever since I can remember, the standard pay for baby sitters on New Year's Eve has been $5.00 and up. I'm sixteen years old and I often baby sit for these people.

Well anyway on New Year's Eve I baby sit and the same in and offered me $2.00. I don't like to hurt people, so I took it. But I'll never do it again.

I think I should have gotten $5.00 at least. What do you think, Doris?—DIANE.

DEAR DIANE—Are you sure they knew rates were different New Year's Eve? Next time settle on an amount when you're hired—like other workers do. This prevents hard feelings later.

DEAR DORIS—This is for the men who drink. So you worry about money, rent, cars, jobs? It's a strain you can't bear any longer. Then some friend offers a bottle of liquor. That's temptation to drink, then go for another, isn't it?

Some men use it for relaxation. Well, if you truly love your wife, refuse the first drink. O.K., so you lose a few friends. Do friends come first and happiness last? If that's the case, then Brother you are in the hands of friends who aren't really friends at all.

Now men don't be beaten any longer. Start today. If someone offers you a drink, say: "No thanks!"—ONE WHO KNOWS WHAT LIQUOR CAN DO.

DEAR ONE WHO KNOWS—Since alcoholism is Canada's Number Two social problem, your letter speaks for others as well. . . Comments, for or against, are invited.

* * *

(Doris invites letters on topics of general interest and will reply privately when a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.)

FLASH BACK TO 1939 — CARRY ON CANADA!

How corny that old phrase, coined in the heat of the last war, seems now in this troubled year of 1963! Theoretically there is nothing wrong with the phrase, except in its nationalistic limitations. "Carry on Western Powers" lacks succinctness and punch. Tensions over Cuba and Berlin have induced a reminiscent mood. Anyone who was young in the late 1930's must feel as we do now — conscious of having seen all this before.

Glancing through a diary we kept during all of 1939, we read that our first wartime, so-called fashion purchase, was a maternity dress, bought during the first week of the war. We remember turning from the mirror in a fitting room, overlooking Montreal's St. Catherine street, somewhat appalled at having seen what seemed, at that time like a monumental black tent. The diary further reveals that we paid the enormous amount of $8.98 for our tent and topped off the spending spree with $3.98's worth of firming red hat, with feathers. The stiff upper lip was very much in fashion.

CLOTHES OF CONSERVATION

The formation of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, helped to prevent profiteering in severe commodities. Suddenly, the press and magazines were full of self-help articles on the conservation of clothing and lists of regulations to the clothing trade were endless. Some was limited and some useful, the results were both laudable and ludicrous. The standard of chic fashion in Canada was based only on good economics and ingenious dressmaking. Apparel from the stores and good quality in any product was extremely hard to come by.

We learned to conserve what we had, to polish fine old leathers, to patch and darn woolens, to wash and re-block all sorts, to restring beads and pearls, even to match and make our own costume jewelry. Some of these new fashion items appeared, ironically, from nonessential materials. We remember a simple doll-like yoke, in bright clothing trade were endless, gay, but when bundled, had worn the surface of steel wool mixed with invisible burrs.

MADE OVER SUITS

There was no shame in wearing someone else's castoff clothes. In fact, a great many tailored suits for women were made from suits left hanging in closets by departing members of the conservative armed forces. Their white shirts were cut down into women's blouses or little girl's dresses. Some of their trench coats were remodeled for women, even if the buttons couldn't be reversed.

The 1962 crisis has provided one small glimmer of humour—pathetic, but at least an attempt — the shoe industry has decided that Cuban heels will have to be renamed.

Kinette Club Hears Talk on 'Will Making'

TWEED—The regular monthly dinner meeting of Tweed Kinette Club was held at Hotel Tweedsmuir on Monday evening. Kinette Janet Whitfield led the members for the Kinette Queen, and the Kinette song was followed by grace by Mrs. Marlene Spencer.

After a tasty dinner Mrs. Lillian Johnston, first vice-president, was in charge of the meeting. She welcomed all members and three new members, Mrs. Shirley Smith, Mrs. Margaret Bateman and Mrs. Betty Woods.

Kinette Paulina Hughes introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Ray Woolfrey, who chose as his topic, "Insurance in Estate Planning." In his address, Mr. Woolfrey pointed out the intensely seriousness of making your will. "Without making a will there is no way of knowing what will happen to your estate," he said, "whether we think so or not, we all have an estate, everything we own is chargeable in your estate. The Surrogate Court has increased ten times what it was in 1933. We should all review our will at least once made for five or more years."

Appreciation from the Kinettes was expressed by Kinette Muriel Wood.

Mrs. Johnston said the next meeting would be moved ahead one week to March 11th when the district convener, Mrs. Jan Thompson, of Montreal, would be at the meeting.

On February 26th, the Kinettes and husbands are invited to a dinner meeting at Stoco Lake Hotel with dancing to follow.

Director of Nurses' Registry Reports on Year's Work

The annual meeting of the Belleville Community Nursing Registry was held Wednesday evening at the Education Hall, Bellleville General Hospital.

The good attendance listened with interest as Mrs. Ida Campbell, director of the registry, submitted her report, saying:

"To many of you it will hardly seem possible that with the closing of 1962 we have completed our 19th year of organized nursing service to Belleville and district.

"Our special health service, covering the period of 24 hours, allocates calls to The Canadian Cancer Society, The Arthritis and Rheumatism Society, the Victorian Order of Nurses, Practical Nurses and nurses who are in private practice.

EXCELLENT SPIRIT

"Within this health team there is an excellent spirit of partnership, working toward the common goal, which of course is health care to the community as a whole.

"To the Victorian Order of Nurses for Belleville and district, under the supervision of Miss Dorothy Connor, and her staff, we say a sincere thankyou, and at this time express our appreciation to them for their warm devotion to social problems, complete cooperation and harmonious relationship with us in our association in the care of patients.

"The nurses, who are in private practice, merit our sincerest thanks for their patient tolerance of all types of people and a broad conception of the brotherhood of mankind.

"Let us accept the many changes that we may encounter. It is of these changes that we must be aware, so that we may integrate them into our practice in the best way possible, adapting ourselves and our practice to them.

"As your representative I have served on all Registry committees and have been present at all meetings since one in 1962, including R.N.A.O. and Alumnae meetings, as well as social functions connected with these groups.

TRIBUTE PAID

"Afternoon meetings of the Hospital Auxiliary have been attended, and I would like to pay tribute to these gracious ladies. Their program of extensive volunteer service to our hospital, and the many comforts given to the nurses and their patients alike through their efforts are heartwarming.

"Our Community Nursing Registry has, as in previous years, accepted and filled calls requesting qualified nurses for the Hastings County Tuberculosis Association, the Red Cross Home Nursing Course, conducted in Education Hall; the Hastings County Home for the Aged; local industry; filling agency calls; children's camps and emergency calls for nursing homes.

"Allocating numerous telephone requests to the Department of Public Health and to the Red Cross Homemaker Society, is a service given to the community by this organization for which it received no remuneration.

"However, let it be said, that in our field of endeavor, the best possible medical care for patients is always our earnest concern.

"There were 776 calls accepted for private duty, 20 of these were for private residence.

"Calls were filled for practical nurses in homes when a registered nurse was not required.

"Our membership at present is nine single, 18 married on the active list and three associate members.

"There were no new applications for 1962. Two members rejoined but 10 resignations were received.

THANKS TENDERED BOARD

"I would like to thank the Board of Directors for their faithfulness and support; Miss Doris Smith, Director of Nursing for her guidance and interest, Mrs. Marguerite Lucas, our president and Mrs. Doris Morrison for their dependability and lastly the standing committees and general memberships.

"In closing may I say, let each one of us for public understanding and consideration, practise better public relations and as a means of expressing felicitations, aim to increase our efficiency.

"It is said, the most important factor in any one's effectiveness is its ability to inspire each member to make her maximum contribution. To us, it is necessary to implement these principles in all aspects of nursing service.

"May we all be a tribute to 'Our Honorable Profession.'"

The annual meeting of the Community Nursing Registry will be further outlined at a later date.

A career in the clouds looks glamorous to many girls. But Teen - Age Canada today finds it needs a lot of groundwork.

Girls Aiming at Career In Clouds Given Advice

By JACK HUTTON

Every year Trans-Canada Air Lines and Canadian Pacific Airlines both receive between 15,000 and 20,000 inquiries from young girls who want to be stewardesses.

Each hires several hundred.

That gives you some idea of how fierce the competition is if you're a Canadian girl with hopes of entering what looks like the most glamorous job in the world.

R. H. M. Sargeant, supervisor for passenger service of CPA, recently issued some sobering advice for girls who are aiming for a career in the clouds.

"In the first place," he said, "don't think that a pretty face and figure will assure you of a job. There are certain standards of height, weight and general physical appearance that a candidate must meet."

"But the girls who land the jobs must have many more qualifications to offer."

Airline officials realize that few of their customers will meet the company president or the top executives, Mr. Sargeant said. "But they will meet a stewardess — and base their impression of the whole airline on her."

What kind of applicants does an airline want? And what sort of girl makes the best stewardess?

According to Mr. Sargeant, personality and ability to get along with people are more important than looks. "They are at ease with people, they are even of temper, calm and at all times pleasant."

Preferably they will have had some experience in meeting the public. The girls chosen will be representing the company as they meet its customers, and it's essential that they leave the customers with the opinion that they are efficient, courteous and friendly."

Mr. Sargeant also stresses another qualification which must sound familiar by now to readers of this column: education. The better the education, the better the chances of a job.

A girl who is serious about someday becoming a stewardess, said Mr. Sargeant, can start preparing herself years in advance. Airlines are particularly interested in applicants who speak two or more languages.

Not only that, but the stewardess who can handle two or more languages stands a good chance of working on the more glamorous international runs. Just imagine yourself with a year-round tan!

Other hints for being one of the lucky ones chosen by an airline: a charm course or modelling experience is useful; and experience in a dining room or restaurant gives you another advantage.

But Mr. Sargeant and other airline officials have one final warning: Don't hope to be a stewardess because it seems glamorous. Applicants who give that impression are by-passed — no matter how qualified they may be.

Happy flying!

I can't resist a sneaking admiration for Howard Keel, a singer - turned - actor, who teed off the other day on the current crop of singing idols.

Maybe you've never heard of this gentleman, but he's a six-foot-four-inch baritone who made his reputation with a strong, trained voice in Broadway shows such as Annie, Get Your Gun and Show Boat.

At the moment he is relaxing after playing the science-fiction hero of a movie called The Day of the Triffids. (The "triffids" are supposed to be plants that run after you if you pull them out of the ground.)

"The robusto stuff is out," said Keel, referring to his singing. "The vogue's all for the baby - faced crooners and the balding angry young men on the undernourished side."

A lot of people besides the public relations men used to refer to Keel as the modern Nelson Eddy. (You've never heard of him, either?) Let's hope he gets a chance to use his voice again.

No General Opposition Has Shown So Far to Robarts' Plan for Education Grants

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

No general opposition has shown in reaction so far to Premier John Robarts' major outline of a new system of educational grants.

Church, school and political officials met Thursday's 6,500-word speech in the legislature with qualified approval in nearly all cases.

The speech set out a new system of educational grants starting in the 1964 calendar year to provide equality of education for public and separate, rural and urban school students.

It denied a request from Roman Catholic bishops for a system of separate secondary schools and teachers' colleges but a Roman Catholic spokesman said this was not surprising.

The new grants system, to be known as the Ontario Foundation Tax Plan, will increase provincial grants by about $50,000,000, Mr. Robarts said in a round-up Ahead $52,000,000 of this will come in this fiscal year's spending, providing a more equitable distribution.

Mr. Robarts, education minister for three years until his elevation to the premier's position last summer, said provincial grants this year would be $223,300,000 of a total education budget of $395,332,000.

Leslie Dewart, associate professor of philosophy at St. Michael's College, a Roman Catholic affiliate of the University of Toronto, said Mr. Robarts' "speech had some good features to it and it was presented in a reasonable tone." He said it was not surprising that it rejected the separate secondary and teachers' college suggestions.

Roland Berlaiut, chairman of the Ontario bilingual school commission, said of Ontario's plan to provide equality for all school boards was "a step in the right direction." He did not comment on the other aspects.

There was no official comment from any of the Roman Catholic bishops. Roman Catholics make up about 30.2 per cent of Ontario's population, the latest figures from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics show.

A United Church spokesman, Rev. Harold Vaughan, secretary of the church's board of schools and colleges, said the plan "echoes the brief of the United Church and the joint church committee in recognizing the impossibility of there being enough tax dollars to maintain the two systems."

Mr. Robarts said in his speech that cost of a system of separate high schools and teachers' colleges was prohibitive.

Mr. Vaughan said: "I am interested in seeing justice done and I have no objection to separate Roman Catholic elementary schools receiving that kind of help, but one wonders whether this gesture constitutes justice for all minorities interested in educating their children separately."

Mr. Robarts said he was prepared to discuss a system of religious courses as optional subjects in secondary and teachers' colleges, supervised by clergy of the faith.

He stressed the need for "religious and spiritual concepts in our educational system in all levels. . . ."

Ernest E. Long, general secretary of the council of the United Church, said: ". . . we gratefully note the Premier of Alberta is convinced of the necessity for religious and spiritual concepts in our educational system at all levels."

His praise for the offer to include religious options carrying credit standing. He said the report was an honest effort to deal as fully as can be done at one point in history with a highly complex problem.

Most Rev. W. L. Wright, metropolitan of the Anglican province of Ontario, said in Ottario, said at Sault Ste. Marie, that the province's proposals sounded extremely reasonable. It will relieve the situation for local school boards (public and separate) by giving them additional financial support in order to carry on their work on the elementary level, he said.

Ontario Liberal leader John Wintermeyer himself a Roman Catholic, said in the legislature he generally favored the plan. He said it was "materially at variance" with Liberal suggestions.

Kenneth Bryden, New Democratic Party member for Toronto Woodbine and a Presbyterian, called the plan a "bits-and-pieces approach." But he said: "At least the concept of foundation offmce is accepted by all parties in the House."

Mrs. John Cropper of St. Catharines, president of Ontario Federation of Home and School Associations, said the plan sounds "like a step in the right direction."

Need Majority Govt. Says Financial Critic

MILTON, Ont. (CP)—Walter Gordon, Liberal financial critic in the last Parliament, said Thursday night Canada badly needs a government capable of making decisions, regardless of whether the decisions are popular.

"The No. 1 campaign issue that transcends all others is the need for decisive majority government," he told a Liberal meeting in Halton constituency.

"Canada is faced with something of a national crisis. Ever since last June 18 the government has been in a state of paralysis, of shock. It has failed to make any decisions of importance."

Mr. Gordon said none of the major issues facing the country could be dealt with properly without a majority government. Unemployment was a major item.

"Unemployment has been a blight on the Canadian conscience for the last six years," he said. "Our industry and trade were needed to provide jobs."

TRUST EXPAND

Mr. Gordon, member for Toronto Davenport in the last Parliament, said that to balance international accounts and provide jobs, Canada must expand exports and give Canadians confidence to buy.

He said the Liberals also have a responsibility to control investment and loan fund. Prime Minister Diefenbaker's recent economic speech promising more nicipal aid could have been taken from the Liberal program, he said.

The prime minister had said the federal government would provide the full initial cost of eradicating urban plight. The government now pays 50 per cent.

Farmers Likely To Get Payments Before Election

OTTAWA (CP)—Before federal election day rolls round April 8, Prairie grain growers may well be informed of a whopping loan payment on their 1961-62 wheat pool account.

The payment, known to exceed $100,000,000, is strictly the farmers own money. It will go direct to the farmer from the Canadian wheat board, the Crown agency that has served since the 1930s as the compulsory marketing outlet for all Prairie wheat, oats and barley sold commercially.

However, the federal government can be expected to claim credit for the credit-up ground of promotion of wheat exports and prices increased by the devaluation of the Canadian dollar last May in terms of United States money.

It tends to be a political maxim that the government of the day claims credit for cheques when money flows—whatever the source.

Less certainty blankets another feature of Prairie revenue in recent years. This is the deficiency payment—paid for the crop years 1958-59, 1960-61 and 1961-62. It amounts to about $40,000,000 when added and represents $1 an acre for grain growers up to a maximum $2500.

Mr. Diefenbaker last year during the election campaign made a statement in Saskatoon audience that has been interpreted in two ways.

Initially he had promised the acreage payment annually; others that he promised it only in years of need.

PLANE OVERSHOOTS

WELLINGTON (AP)—Thirty-seven passengers and four crew members aboard a Trans Canada Airlines North Star were unhurt when a New Zealand National Airways Corporation Viscount overshot a rain-soaked runway at Wellington airport Feb. 16. The aircraft skipped crazily across the 400-foot greasy turf then slid sideways down a 15-foot bank. It finished with its starboard wing resting halfway across a road, the fuselage listing 30 degrees.

Election Reverberations Roll Through Que. House

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Election reverberations—five by-elections—rolled through the Quebec legislature Thursday.

Premier Jean Lesage told the House he hopes Quebecers will vote for a party that can provide a stable government in the April 8 federal election. Mr. Lesage's Liberal government was elected last November.

Mr. Lesage made his comments while speaking on a new motion—that the Quebec government bypass normal approaches to the House of Commons and ask Governor-General Vanier directly to place a federal-provincial debate before the federal House.

The premier said he is seeking the unusual expedient because his experience with a "moribund government" is so bad he is afraid to risk going through normal channels.

The Quebec government wants authorization to construct a bridge and tunnel combination across the St. Lawrence River in Montreal harbor, Mr. Lesage said the $50,000,000 project is urgent for Quebec and a direct appeal will underline its urgency.

MUST APPROVE

Normally, the federal transport minister would introduce such legislation in the Commons. Bridges over navigable waters must have federal approval.

In other legislatures doings Mrs. Marjorie Cooper (CCF—Regina) at Regina urged construction of a Saskatchewan-government-owned and operated hospital. She said 50 per cent of the patients cared for in the two existing Regina hospitals live outside the city, and pay taxes to the city.

In the Nova Scotia House, Progressive Conservative Premier Robert Stanfield introduced a bill to establish an economic planning commission to coordinate efforts to improve various sectors of the economy.

Canada Needs Stable Govt. Says Martin

TORONTO (CP)—Paul Martin said Thursday night Canada has political instability similar to that existing in France before Charles de Gaulle brought unity to that country's government.

The Liberal member for Essex East in the Parliament which dissolved needs stable government. This would come when New Democrat and Social Credit supporters voted Liberal in the April 8 federal election in the interests of majority government.

He addressed a nomination meeting in Toronto Trinity Liberal association that Jim Hellyer, who represented the riding in the last Parliament, to contest the seat.

Mr. Martin promised a Liberal government would establish an economic advisory council made up of labor, management and government representatives to study methods used in Western Europe to cope with unemployment.

Disabled Shrimp Boat Thought Aid Come, Then Cuban Planes Sprayed Forth Bullets

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — A plane dipped low over a leaking, disabled American shrimp boat and its two - man crew thought help had come at last.

Moments later, as the fishermen waved frantically for assistance, the pilot opened fire.

"We thought it was an ordinary plane," said Benjamin Washington, 27. "We tried to signal them down."

Faris Jackson, captain of the 72-foot Fort Myers shrimper, Ala, and Washington, its mate, told reporters Thursday about the attack by a plane identified by the U.S. defence department as Cuban-based MiGs.

It happened about 5 p.m. Wednesday on the high seas about 60 miles north of Cuba.

A MiG appeared, passed by, circled a nearby island and returned.

"We thought he was landing. Then he made one spray."

BURST OF FIRE

The "spray," the shrimpers said, appeared to them to be a burst of machine - gun fire. The defence department said rockets were used. The Cuban government denied there was an attack of any kind.

Three more jets appeared and one of them joined in firing, said the crew fishermen. The shots went into the water about 200 yards from the Ala's port bow, they reported.

Both men said they were certain there were no rockets.

"It sounded to me like machine-guns," said Jackson. "I don't think it was rocket-guns."

Washington said: "They didn't fire any rockets. We could have seen them spraying. The bullets went straight down in the water. It couldn't have been a rocket. If it had been, it would have hit the boat."

SEE PILOTS' FACES

The fishermen said on deck while the MiGs circled for 15 minutes, passing low enough for the men to see the pilots' faces and to spot an emblem which "looked like a big round thing with an eagle in it."

"No use to go in the wheelhouse," said Wa shington. "They'd have thought we had weapons and they'd have sunk us right then."

Were they scared?

"Yes, sir!"

Jackson said he still hadn't recovered from the fright.

Neither man was sure if the attackers wanted to hit the Ala or were toying with the craft.

The boat's engine failed Sunday. That made its radio and pumps useless and all the fishermen could do was wait for help.

Indirectly, the MiGs brought the engine back. When they were detected by radar at Key West, U.S. jets flashed to the scene. The MiGs departed and within an hour a navy vessel arrived and took the Ala in tow.

HAVANA (Reuters) — Cuba has strongly denied U.S. charge that Russian-built Cuban Air Force MIG planes fired on a disabled American shrimp boat in the Florida Straits two days ago.

The Cuban denial was issued after the U.S. state department asked the Swiss embassy here to protest against the incident in which it alleged two Cuban planes fired rockets near the boat sailing in international waters.

The Cuban armed forces ministry said the U.S. allegation was "another lie," and gave in a communique what it called the "true story."

GIVE THEIR VERSION

The ministry said two Cuban reconnaissance planes, searching for two missing Cuban fishing trawlers seized off the Cuban coast last week, spotted the small American vessel and made a low pass over it for identification.

The communique said the Cuban planes left the area immediately as soon as they saw the boat was not Cuban.

It said no shots were fired, and it was "ridiculous to assert that a small fishing boat could be attacked by two combat planes and the ship and crew come out unhurt."

Labor Minister Tries to Explain Resignations

TORONTO (CP)—Labor Minister Michael Starr suggested Thursday night some of the recent cabinet resignations may have been the result of frustrated objectives.

Differences of opinion and possibly, resignations are bound to occur in government, he told a nominating convention in Toronto-Greenwood riding that selected John D. Hilton to contest the April 8 federal election.

Mr. Starr defended Prime Minister John Diefenbaker and attacked the party leader's critics.

"All his life, he has fought for things that were not necessarily politically popular, he said

"Hey! What do we want, Alfie—returns or singles?"

Some Politicians Want To Sweep Nuclear Arms Issue Under the Carpet

OTTAWA (CP)—Some politicians say they'd like to sweep nuclear arms under the rug as a campaign issue for the April 8 election. But some others keep standing on the rug.

Chief among these is New Democratic Party Leader Douglas who has called the election a "referendum on the nuclear issue. Mr. Douglas—whose party stands alone with a straight anti-nuclear policy—in a campaign kickoff speech in Toronto last Friday challenged other party leaders to a national television debate on the issue.

Only the day before, Social Credit Leader Thompson called nuclear decision-making a "bipartisan parliamentary committee and said that "if we make defence the basic issue, we will be doing the country an injustice."

He blamed Prime Minister Diefenbaker and the press for making defence a partisan matter. And it was Liberal Deputy Leader Real Caouette's stated opposition to any nuclear arms that "something he said in Quebec."

Less than a week previously, Liberal Campaign Chairman Walter Gordon told the Canadian Manufacturers' Association that issues ranked in this importance: The need for decisive government, more jobs, better understanding of bicculturalism and — fourth—defence.

Trade Minister McCutcheon told a Winnipeg press conference Wednesday that he doubts whether nuclear arms will become a major election issue. "It's a highly emotional issue and I don't think people understand it. A lot of people are confused."

However, the nuclear arms issue has been raised.

On Monday night, the new defence minister, Gordon Churchill, made a defence policy statement to his Winnipeg nominating convention.

On Tuesday, before the Ontario Progressive Conservative Association, Mr. Diefenbaker reiterated his contention that the original plan for the Bomarc missile anti-bomber defence degenerates steadily in effectiveness.

On Wednesday Liberal Leader Pearson issued a statement accusing the prime minister of misrepresenting what Mr. Churchill had said.

Mr. Pearson then set out his own position: The Liberal government would lose no time in keeping . . . (nuclear) commitments and honoring those weapons armed as long as they are useful to defence.

Meeting Called To Iron Out Difficulties

KINGSTON (CP) — Harry Blacklock, expelled from the Ontario Liberal party Thursday by Leader John Wintermeyer, says he is not sure Mr. Wintermeyer "can get rid of me."

Mr. Blacklock, a 79-year-old Kingston area cattle drover, said Thursday night he has called a meeting of Frontenac-Addington riding executives for Monday and "we'll see then what happens."

Mr. Wintermeyer said he no longer recognizes Mr. Blacklock, a riding executive for 25 years, as president of Frontenac-Addington Liberal Association.

His announcement came after Mr. Blacklock publicly attacked Mr. Wintermeyer Wednesday following a dispute over the nomination Dec. 15 of Mrs. Theresa Chippendale, 37, mother of two, as the riding's Liberal candidate in the next provincial election.

In a prepared statement, Mr. Wintermeyer said Mr. Blacklock had attacked him as "leader of the Liberal party in Ontario" and referred in W. J. Henderson of Kingston, chairman of the provincial campaign committee, as the "real power" in the party.

Mr. Blacklock Wednesday described Mr. Wintermeyer as "just a figurehead at the head of the party."

FEELS TOO SOON

Mr. Wintermeyer said he had been told many Liberals in Frontenac - Addington felt the nomination convention was called too suddenly, without opportunity for all constituents to attend.

He said he had sent his special assistant Harold Greer to Kingston in an attempt to reconcile the split in the riding association.

"In view of Mr. Greer's report to me that the usual procedures were not followed at the nomination convention, I have no alternative but to declare my lack of confidence in him (Mr. Blacklock) . . ." Mr. Wintermeyer said.

Mrs. Chippendale said conflicting interests in the riding could be settled without involving Mr. Wintermeyer, the party or herself.

She said she would continue to support Mr. Wintermeyer and the party's platform.

CONVICT EX-CONSTABLE

WOOPSTOCK (CP)—Former police constable Donald A. King of Norwich, Ont., was sentenced Thursday to nine months definite and six months indefinite at a special session of county police court. King was convicted ol, breaking and entering with intent at a drug store Dec. 23.

Parliamentary Notebook

OTTAWA (CP)—This month's cabinet crisis, in which three ministers resigned on a matter of principle, started a month of observers talking about 1896.

That was the year senior ministers quit the Conservative cabinet of Sir Mackenzie Bowell and later crossed the floor with Bowell as a nest of traitors.

Manitoba had done away with the province' separate schools and Bowell was under pressure from his Quebec ministers to pass legislation through Parliament re-establishing them. Exasperated by Bowell's delays in this, a Quebec minister, A. R. Angers, resigned.

When neither problem had been solved, seven ministers, led by Finance Minister George Foster, left the cabinet. In a statement in the Commons, they said they were doing so in order to force Bowell's resignation and the formation of a new government under another leader.

In a final compromise the seven ministers returned to the fold. Bowell remained prime minister and Sir Charles Tupper entered the cabinet as secretary of state. Tupper was remarked as Bowell's successor. The Quebec cabinet gap was filled by appointment of Alphonse Desjardins.

Parliament was prorogued, Bowell resigned and Tupper became prime minister. Tupper called a federal election on the issue of the Manitoba school remedial bill but was defeated by the Liberals under Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

New Labor Leader Names Balanced 'Shadow' Cabinet

LONDON (CP) — Opposition leader Harold Wilson patched over internal Labor party difficulties Thursday night by announcing a balanced "shadow" cabinet with the accent on industrial experience.

George Brown, defeated candidate for the party leadership, was named to the key post of leader. A spokesman said Brown and Wilson now are in "close consultation" on policies and parliamentary tactics.

As it stands, Brown filled to the top job of "shadow" foreign secretary, a post he badly wanted. Instead he will handle home affairs.

The foreign affairs position goes to Patrick Gordon Walker, who was foreign secretary in the last Labor government.

Denis Healey, 45, receives the defence portfolio. He formerly was the party's spokesman on international affairs.

Arthur Bottomley, 55, replaces Healey as colonial spokesman. Other appointments are:

Douglas Houghton, 64, treasury; G. R. Hitchison, 72, pensions and national insurance; Charles Pannell, 60, public building and works; R. H. S. Crossman, 64, housing; Niall Noel - Baker, 73, disarmament matters.

All other front-bench duties remain unchanged. Houghton will deal with expenditures and taxes and his position will not conflict with the shadow chancellor, James Callaghan.

The shadow cabinet is well balanced, taking in the left, centre and right, and makes the best of the abilities available.

Witness Claims Man Admitted Killing Officers

MONTREAL (CP)—A 26-year-old redhead testified Thursday that Ge.rge Lemieux told her: "I have just killed two policemen."

Mrs. Real Fournel, mother of three, said she was stunned when Mr.crotte told her of the concentrate on the radio and to listen.

She was testifying at the murder trial of Marcotte, 34, accused of being the man in the Santa Claus suit who slayed two policemen with bullets from an automatic rifle Dec. 14 when a bank in suburban St. Laurent was robbed.

Mrs Fournel is the sister-in-law of Jean Paul Fournel, 40, the Crown's main witness. Fournel and Jules Reeves, 29, are charged as of capital murder in the case and their trial is scheduled for March 25.

Fournel is to give testimony identifie' Marcotte as the man who fired the shots that killed the policemen.

Earlier, Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet suggested to defence lawyer Trajan Constantin that "in all decency" he should withdraw from the case and said Mr. Constantin had been Fournel's lawyer and now was acting for Marcotte.

Fournel testified Wednesday that Mr. Constantin "insisted" on his lawyer last September at the same bank to obtain money to buy a hairpiece, revealing the same bank was robbed three times, with the policemen being killed the last time.

Mr. Constantin did not with Mrs. Fournel said he to testify to contradict the charges.

School Teachers Form a Club To Get Liquor

LONDON (CP)—Teachers at Roedean, one of England's most exclusive private girls' schools, still have a dry common room. The school's 47 mistresses formed a club last November and applied for a licence to serve alcohol under the 1961 Licensing Act.

The purpose of the move was to buy gin and sherry at wholesale prices rather than pay the retail duty for their cocktail and after-dinner drinks.

Miss Dorothy Butcher, secretary of the club, said none of the 400 girls at the school would have access to the liquor cabinet and no wild parties were planned.

"It's really an economy measure," she said. "The licence will make it easier for teachers and their guests to enjoy a glass of sherry now and again."

A spokesman for Roedean said today that no licence has been granted and it is unknown whether one ever will be.

BELLEVILLE FAMILY Y.M.C.A.

1893 — 69th ANNUAL REPORT — 1962

Bruce G. MacKenzie
President Y.M.C.A.

President's Message

Your new Y.M.C.A. building is now underway — While still $175,000.00 short of our requirements, the building will be completed by the Spring of 1964.

It probably should be better known that your Y.M.C.A. is strictly autonomous and responsible only to the people of Belleville and district. It is a recreational facility that does not draw on taxes to operate and maintain it. However, the decaying condition of our old building soon would have changed this. Here in Belleville we are truly democratic processes in action when so many citizens and firms are donating so generously to get our new building finished. The only time that Canadian Y.M.C.A.s obtain assistance from their municipality is for funds for capital additions. Recognizing the unique advantages of good Y.M.C.A. facilities to train our youth to take our places, 10 Canadian municipalities have donated $50,000.00 or better to their local Y.M.C.A.s in the past decade.

The outstanding administrative leadership of our own "Di" Diamantides has been assisted substantially this past year by Miss Norma Hunter-Duvar, our new Women's and Girls' Secretary, as evidenced by the growing interest in our Ladies' and Girls' activities and our new series of courses commencing this month.

I want to thank sincerely the 23 Belleville citizens who comprise our Board of Directors for their active help and support, as well as all those people who serve so ably on our committees and as leaders in our physical and program activities. It is ample reward for everyone to know that our Belleville youths can be served so well.

BRUCE G. MACKENZIE

Y'S MEN PROVIDE SERVICE, LEADERSHIP . . .

The Senior Club in the Y.M.C.A., the Y's Men's Club, under the presidential leadership of John Hayman, continued to render valuable service as a club and through the participation of its individual members in committee and program work of the Association. This Association is grateful for the unselfish devotion of its members.

This year, they again assisted at the Y.M.C.A. Day Camp doing more improvement to the site; assisted in sending four leaders to the Leaders' Training Camp at Geneva Park; contributed generously to the Y.M.C.A. Building Fund and to World Service; bought uniforms for the Y's basketball team; helped in the transportation of teams for out-of-town games and provided leadership to the Ski Club.

The Belleville Club has been instrumental in the formation of a new Y's Men's Club in Peterborough, Ontario.

A distinct honor came to the Belleville Y's Men's Club in 1962 with the election of Hugh Watson as International Director Elect for the Ontario Region of the International Association.

Aquatics Program . . .

Pioneered by the Y.M.C.A. in 1888, aquatic sports have become one of the most important contributions of the 'Y' in every community with a swimming pool. Ours is no exception. With the "SWIMMER, AND EVERY SWIMMER A LIFE SAVER", thirty-five swimming classes were held for instruction, to pass tests, and for practice regularly each week.

- 492 boys and girls passed Beginners swimming tests.
- 28 boys and girls passed Life Saving tests.
- 870 boys and girls passed various Intermediate Level tests.
- 13 passed Y.M.C.A. Skin Diver's and Scuba tests.
- 210 boys and girls and 21 adults enrolled in the June and July "Learn to Swim" program.
- Teaching swimming to "non-swimmer" campers was again emphasized at our Day Camps at Oak Lake.

Day Camp . . .

Sponsored by the Y's Men's Club, the day camp at Oak Lake experienced an outstanding season under the direction of camp director, Dennis Julian. To accommodate a big waiting list after both camps were over-subscribed, we added a third camp by experimenting with a mixed group which proved very successful. A total of 195 campers and counsellors participated. Total camper days were 1,945, up from 1,165 in the previous year.

The program was designed to teach camperaft and outdoor skills and to meet the physical, cultural, and spiritual needs of the boys and girls attending.

The site of the day camp was also used for winter sports under the leadership of Doug Archibeck. The Y.M.C.A. Ski Club enjoyed a very successful season. Between twenty-five and thirty skiers were taught the fine art of skiing every Saturday during the last season.

Leadership Training . . .

The training of leaders is one of the Y.M.C.A.'s most important functions. The need for the development of leaders presents a continuous challenge. Volunteer leaders still remains as the most important area of concern to the Y.M.C.A. in general, and to the boys' and girls' activities in particular.

To meet this need, the Y.M.C.A. Board has appointed Clarence D. Fraser to head a leadership development committee whose function is to promote and train a continued supply of leaders for the various Y.M.C.A. programs. This committee has plans already underway, to sponsor a leadership development course not only for Y.M.C.A. leaders but also for leaders of other youth organizations.

- During 1962, 14 members of the leaders' corps met regularly each week for theory and practice.
- Numerous individual interviews have been held with program leaders towards this end.
- 15 camp counsellors and staff had a one day training conference at Oak Lake.
- 4 members of the leaders' corps attended a two week leaders' corps training camp at Geneva Park.
- 15 members of the Industrial Management Club, Quinte Chapter, attended a training seminars at Geneva Park, Ottawa, and in Toronto.
- 16 Y's Men participated in training sessions at the Ontario Regional Convention, the Eastern District Conference and at District Council meetings. One member attended the International Convention of Y's Men at Banff, Alberta.
- 12 members of the Hi-Y Club attended Hi-Y conferences in Woodstock and Montreal.
- 15 members of So-Ed attended the National So-Ed Convention at Geneva Park.

YOUTH PROGRAM . . .

In addition to an extensive physical program for boys and girls, a variety of programs aiming at youth's total growth were planned and conducted in 1962.

HI-Y CLUBS

Hi-Y stands for High School and the Y.M.C.A. These clubs of high school boys and girls conduct programs designed to develop Christian attitudes in school life, in relationships with others, and in citizenship responsibilities. Two Hi-Y clubs, a boys' and a girls' with a membership of fifty members met regularly during 1962. A third club for boys is in the process of being formed.

The Hi-Y purpose is to "Create, Maintain, and Extend in the Home, in the School, and throughout the Community, High standards of Christian Character".

GRA-Y CLUBS

A beginning has been made in 1962 to organize Gra-Y club activities for boys and girls of grade school age. "Gra-Y" is an abbreviation of grade school and the Y.M.C.A. Two Gra-Y clubs, one for boys and one for girls are at present functioning satisfactorily.

Gra-Y are friendship groups which plan their own program, have club meetings, do helpful things at school and in the community and sponsor events with parents under the guidance of a competent leader. Gra-Y means: Friends-Fun-Adventure-Sports-Hobbies-Camping and Christian Fellowship.

Fun nights, induction ceremonies, Father-and-Daughter, and Mother-and-Son Banquets, peoples' nights, dancing, conference participation, movies, winter sports and crafts are but a few of the varied youth activities sponsored in 1962. Ornamental swimming and square dancing for youth are two newly introduced activities in 1962.

Further efforts are required to develop more club programs for youth. Leadership is our primary concern. More leaders are urgently needed.

Health Through Exercise . . .

Health through Exercise was again fostered in the 'Y' program. Adult physical fitness classes for men and women met twice weekly starting in the Fall. Basketball leagues, Hi-Lo contests, gymnastics, body building, trim and boys and girls gym and swim classes were other physical activities.

A high honor was bestowed on Gordon Oliver of the 'Y' Judo club, when he was graded Shodan (1st degree Black Belt).

Adult Program . . .

All adult clubs — both physical and non-physical — enjoyed a rewarding experience in a wide variety of activities. The Ladies' "Day Out", a new program for ladies which started in the fall, the Y's Menette's Club, Industrial Management Clubs of Canada, Quinte Chapter, (formerly Foremen's Club), So-Ed Club, Judo, and Weight Lifting Clubs, had full and successful years.

A new program for adults, a "Learning for Living" series is being presently studied by the program committee under the chairmanship of J. Bryson Leslie.

Our Thanks and Appreciation . . .

The accomplishments in 1962 were made possible by the splendid support of many groups and individuals. RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

If you want a change of pace and action from the usual Hockey Night in Canada fare tomorrow, say about 10 p.m., shift the slides on the family magic lantern to beak-bouncing brawling.

I've an idea it will be just that if the past performances of Dick Tiger of Lagos, Nigeria, the world's middleweight champion and the erstwhile king of the middles, one Gene Fullmer from West Jordan, Utah., can be judged a criterion.

Their first fight, a bloody brawling battle was fought at San Francisco on October 29 and telecast to theatres and arenas on closed circuit.

Tiger, a fierce fighter from the edge of the African jungles, met the Mormon bulldozer with his own tactics in the early part of the fight. For four rounds they stood toe-to-toe slugging it out with rights and lefts with the dusky battler having a slight edge.

After that, Tiger dominated the fight. The 31-year-old pride of Utah rallied strongly in the last round but there was no question when the bell rang that Tiger was the victor and new champion.

The popular Nigerian champion knows what he is up against tomorrow night. Previous to his winning the title he worked hard and diligently for the biggest fight of his life.

He is in fine shape for the return fiesta, but is not selling the bull-dozing Mormon short. "I'm the champion," he says, "and I think I'll stay the champion." But looking back on the first fight he says, "After three or four rounds I knew I was tangling with a champion."

Tomorrow night's battle is being staged in Las Vegas Convention Hall. And reports from the Monte Carlo of the Golden West have it that the gorgeous show-girls and "one-armed bandits" will get a respite while the gloved gladiators have at it in the local arena.

When the fight was announced the boys in the back rooms influenced, no doubt, by Tiger's fine showing in the first title bout, installed the African a 4-1 favorite.

It will undoubtedly be the favorite when he enters the ring tomorrow night but not, mes amigos, at any 4-1 odds. No senors, the boys who twiddle the odds strings are finding their hands shaking a little bit.

For the under-cover men who visit the training camps of both fighters daily, reported duly what they saw in the Fullmer set-up with the result a distinct trend has set in on behalf of the Mormon in his bid to regain the crown.

Las Vegas, the glittering gambling jewel of the Nevadas, has no heart underneath her brilliant facades. There is no more sentiment attached to the forthcoming fight than there is to a bulldozer ditch-digging along a highway. Any battling conversation is "said with music," the jingling rhythms of silver dollars.

The music is the same but the lyrics have changed slightly. They lean toward love ditties for the Mormon. Tiger has trained hard for the fight, just as he did for the first one. But the undercover boys have it that Fullmer has looked far more impressive in the daily training matinees.

So much so that the odds have dropped to the vicinity of 3-1 and as one betting tycoon says, he would not be surprised if the price was about 2-1 at ringside come 10 p.m. tomorrow.

Fullmer says he has changed his crushing, bull-dozing style and will make Tiger come to him. Be that as it may. The way this pair exports leather there should not be a dull moment over the 15-round exchange of fistic amities—if it goes that far.

Tiger has a winning streak of eight for the last 27 months. His record is 47-12-2, including 21 knockouts. Fullmer's record is 55-5-2, including 34 kayos. The muscular Mormon had an unbeaten streak of 17 until he was outpointed by Tiger.

The Dotted Line League

NEW YORK (AP)—Manager Birdie Tebbetts of Cleveland Indians says his itinerary for the 1963 baseball season includes hopping into a few nightclubs.

Unusual? No, it happens every spring as players begin sifting into the spring training grounds. Thursday was no exception.

Tebbetts, new chief in the Indians' trepee, put his foot down right at the start, warning he didn't want any players complaining about fatigue caused by night games or cross-country travel.

Disdaining the use of bed checks, Tebbetts said:

"I'll tell them the rules, then it is up to them. I'll also tell them they had better not be caught by me. I'll be popping up here and there in various spots. I'd better not find any of my players."

Wynn hopes to find elusive career victory No. 300 this year. At 43, he has no contract with the White Sox after a 1962 season in which he posted a 7-15 record that brought his lifetime mark to 299-243.

"This is no SAG" assured Wynn. "I wouldn't want to go through this training grind if I didn't think I could make it."

Retzer took his walkout on salary discussions with general manager George Selkirk of the Senators. He said he'll check out of his motel unless there's a change by today.

Farrell who brought his dogs and five guns, said he's going big-game hunting in the mountains.

'Dynamo' Scores Three, Bobby Gets 29, 30 ★★★★★
Mikita, Hull Zoom In Hawks' 5-3 Win

By RON ANDREWS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Chicago Black Hawks' National Hockey League opposition is finding out it can stop Stan Mikita or Bobby Hull some of the time but it can't stop both of them all of the time.

Mikita and Hull, with some strong support from goaltender Glenn Hall, gassed up on the Red Wings at Detroit last night and led the first-place Hawks to a 5-3 victory in the loop game played. The win gave Chicago 70 points, five more than the second-place Toronto Maple Leafs, who lead Montreal Canadiens by a point. Detroit is fourth with 50.

Mikita, the centre whom Chicago coach Rudy Pilous calls the dynamo that keeps the Hawks churning, scored three goals and assisted on another. Hull scored twice—his 18th and 19th in the last 17 games—and also had an assist. And Hall kicked out 42 shots, the most saves he's made in a game this season.

The scoring output by the two Hawks twisted the NHL's individual scoring race into a tiger knot as Mikita and Hull remained the top seven players. Gordie Howe scored one of Detroit's goals—Val Fonteyne and Andre Pronovost added the others—and picked up an assist to take the lead with 80 points, including 29 goals.

LONELY PURSUED

But six players are snapping at Howe's heels, Hull, who scored into a tie with Frank Mahovlich of Toronto Maple Leafs for the goal-scoring lead with 29, Mikita and Boston Bruins' Murray Oliver and Johnny Bucyk each have 59 points.

Until last night's game, Detroit had held Mikita to only one goal in 10 games. And in the four wins and three ties the Wings have against Chicago this season, neither Hull nor Mikita had scored a goal. Conversely, Hull has scored at least once in each of the four victories Chicago has against the Wings.

Detroit grabbed the lead at 14:46 of the first period, just 10 seconds after Chicago's Bill Hay had been sent to the penalty box. But less than two minutes later the Hawks were ahead 2-1 on goals by Mikita and Hull. Detroit's Larry Jeffrey was serving a penalty on Hull's goal.

GETS TWO MORE

Mikita made it 3-1 early in the second period and, after Pronovost's goal 78 seconds later, completed his second three-goal performance of the season. Howe narrowed the margin to 4-3 a minute later.

The Red Wings benched goalie Hank Bassen in the last minute of play for an extra forward but the strategy backfired when Hull drilled a puck into the empty goal at 19:19.

While Detroit is 11 points behind the Hawks, it has two games in hand over each of the first three teams. The Wings get a chance to move up on Montreal and Toronto this weekend when they play twice at Chicago and New York while Canadiens and Leafs have only one game each.

Both Montreal and Toronto have doubtful starters for their Saturday night games.

Defenceman Jean-Guy Talbot of Canadiens has a charleyhorse and bruised right knee, which he suffered Wednesday night at Toronto when Leafs defeated Montreal 2-1. Club doctors have limited Talbot as a doubtful starter for the game Saturday at Montreal against the fifth-place New York Rangers.

Canadians, however, hope to have centre Henri Richard back in action. Richard missed the last three games because of pulled groin muscles.

Mahovlich is the injured Leaf. He also picked up a charleyhorse in Wednesday's game and club doctors are doubtful that he'll be able to play against Boston Saturday at Toronto.

Juniors Meet Kingston Here Tonight

Belleville "B's" face the power-packed Kingston Frontenacs in a crucial OHA Eastern Junior "B" hockey league playoff game here tonight at nine o'clock.

Belleville, Peterborough and Kingston are involved in a round-robin series and only two teams will come out of it alive. The two top clubs will clash for the group championship and at the present time Belleville is the only club without a victory.

Earlier games saw Peterborough blank Belleville 8-0 and Kingston dump the Petes 7-1.

The Belleville players are confident that they can beat the Frontenacs but are also fully aware that they must play better hockey than they did in Peterborough to turn the trick.

Coach Don Barclay is expected to use his strongest club for night with instructions to skate, skate and skate some more in an attempt to upset Danny McLeod's boys.

Belleville's next game is one week from tonight here against Peterborough and that is one contest that Belleville must win to grab a berth in the finals.

However, a Belleville victory tonight would make the "folks as good as in the semi-finals." It should be a thriller, beginning at 8:00 p.m.

Minors Play OMHA Games Tomorrow

Belleville Midgets and Juvenilles, tottering on the brink of elimination, will have tough tasks on their home ice tomorrow in the second game of their O.M.H.A. home-and-home goals-to-count series.

The Midgets play host to Oshawa in a 10.30 game. Saturday morning. Oshawa won the first game of the series in Oshawa 10-1.

Thus the Midgets must win by ten goals and the Juveniles by six in order to continue down the playdown trail.

Fan support could go a long way in helping the home clubs at least give Oshawa and Peterborough a run for their money.

Game times, once again, are 10.30 a.m. and 1.30 p.m.

Quebec Kids Win Peewee Classic

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebec defeated Peterborough Thursday night in a game that undoubtedly will rank as a classic in the annals of the Quebec international peewee hockey tournament.

More than 15,000 roaring fans watched Quebec come from behind twice to win 3-2 on Gilles Duclos' goal at 1:52 of the third overtime period.

Peterborough, last year's champions, were expected to win and the hometown crowd went wild when the 12-year-old Duclos scored. The scene in the Coliseum recalled the days when Jean Beliveau played here before an idolizing crowd.

Randy Decarlo and Ricky Olmstead twice put Peterborough ahead only to have Marc Chouinard and Michel Laverdiere tie the score, Laverdiere's goal coming with two Petes in the penalty box.

Today Quebec will have a chance to go into the tournament finals, which will be played Saturday. Only 14 teams now are left in the competition out of the 64 that started.

Other games Thursday also produced thrillers. Saint Jean, Marie, Ont., finally defeated Ville Lasalle, a Montreal suburb, 1-0 on Gary Holmes' third period goal.

More than 63,000 fans have paid since last Saturday to see the peewees play and the figure is expected to approach 100,000 when the tournament ends.

Lions Open With Argos

VANCOUVER (CP) — When Jackie Parker takes a quick look around before stepping up behind Toronto Argonauts' formation in his first test in eastern livery, he'll see a familiar sight—the battered landscape of British Columbia Lions.

Lions' general manager Herb Capozzi, just back from the Canadian Football League's annual meeting in Hamilton, said Thursday night the Lions will meet Argonauts in Toronto July 6 in the first pre-season game of 1963.

Miami — Jack Gilbert, 188, Knoxville, Tenn., outpointed Eddie Pebba, 185, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6.

This is the question asked most often at the Canadian schoolboy curling championship. And the rink wanting the answer most is a classy Quebec City outfit.

It was boiled down to two rinks Thursday—unbeaten Quebec and Alberta—and they meet tonight.

Alberta was expected to be strong but the Quebec boys are trying to dispel a feeling that Rink has carried them this far.

"Sure we're lucky," Hammond said Thursday night. "But we also play for lucky shots. If you make those it's the best way to demoralize your opposition."

Some folks had said the Montreal High School rink was undefeated only because it hadn't met another rink of consequence. But the Montrealers have beaten them all except the Alberta foursome, a precision rink from Bonnie Doon Composite High School at Edmonton.

In three rounds of action Thursday in the round - robin competition Quebec defeated Ontario 10-8, Manitoba 14-8 and upset the mighty Saskatchewan, winning 13-7.

Alberta protected its record with three victories—4-2, 12-4 against British Columbia 12-2 over Nova Scotia and 7-2 against Prince Edward Island.

Quebec was to face winless Newfoundland in this afternoon's 10th draw and Alberta was scheduled to play Northern Ontario.

The man who made up the draw did the promoters a favor. In tonight's final game of the 11-round tournament will be dominated by the Quebec-Alberta clash.

CAN FORCE PLAYOFF

No matter what happens in their afternoon games, the two teams will have to settle it tonight. If one of them loses, the rink can force a playoff by defeating the one tonight.

The big thing seems to be the ice.

The championships are being played on comparatively new ice in Guelph Memorial Gardens and temperatures tonight are expected to play a big part in the game.

"If the ice is hard and fast," said one rival coach, "Alberta will win it. Quebec's front end can't make a takeout shot. But if the ice is warm and suitable to draw curlers, watch out for Quebec."

Hammond seemed reluctant to comment on his chances. His rink has already eclipsed anything done by former Quebec representatives.

"But we love to beat those western teams," he said.

MANITOBANS WIN

In other seventh-round games, Manitoba edged Northern Ontario 9-5, Nova Scotia downed Newfoundland 11-5 and Saskatchewan took a 10-6 win over Prince Edward Island.

In the eighth round, it was Prince Edward Island 10 Newfoundland 4, New Brunswick 9 Ontario 8, and Northern Ontario 10 Saskatchewan 6 in an upset. The ninth-round matches saw Nova Scotia down British Columbia 10-8, Northern Ontario beat Newfoundland 8-6 and Manitoba defeat New Brunswick 9-7.

Fight Saturday In Vegas

Tiger Favored 3-1 Over Fullmer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Underdog Gene Fullmer is plotting strategy for regaining the world middleweight boxing title Saturday night on a movie he can't stand.

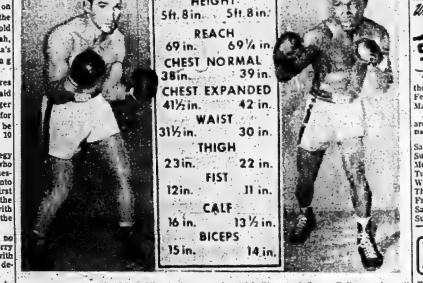
"We studied those pictures for six weeks," Fullmer said Thursday after he and Tiger wound up their heavy drills for the scheduled 15-rounder, to be televised by ABC starting at 10 p.m. EST).



Although Fullmer's strategy wasn't disclosed, observers who watched him in sparring sessions figure he won't rush into Tiger as he did in their first bout. Although Gene got in the first blows, Tiger beat him with speedy counter-punches to the body and head.

The 33-year-old Tiger has no movies, but it doesn't worry him. He nodded agreement with trainer Jimmy August, who declared:

"Dick will do the same as he did in San Francisco. He'll wait and see. Fullmer is supposed to have new strategy. Whatever it is, we'll meet it. Fullmer has been around too long to be much changing at this point."

Tiger added: "I think this will be a tougher fight than San Francisco. Fullmer is going to come all out. He's already said he'll retire if he doesn't win this one. That kind of a fighter is especially dangerous."

The champion is a 3-to-1 favorite to successfully defend the 160-pound title which is recognized everywhere but in Massachusetts, where Paul Fender is listed as middleweight champion.

HOW THEY COMPARE — Here is the comparison chart on weights and measurements of World Boxing Association middleweight champion Dick Tiger and Gene Fullmer, who will meet in a 15-round title fight in Las Vegas, Nev., tomorrow night. (AP Wirephoto Chart.)

Petes Beaten, Habs Win

Flyers Whip Red Wings

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Third place Peterborough Petes lost a chance to gain ground on Hamilton Red Wings when they blew a 4-2 decision to St. Catharines Black Hawks in Ontario Hockey Association Junior A play Thursday night at Toronto.

The Petes, with 48 points, remain one point ahead of Hamilton, which lost to front-running Niagara Falls Flyers 5-2. Peterborough has five games left and the Red Wings four.

At Montreal, the junior Canadiens stayed five points behind the Flyers by whipping last place Guelph Royals 9-3. The Canadiens need one victory to sew up second place.

At Kitchener, the Petes took a 1-0 lead in the first period, but wilted as the Black Hawks came back for a pair in the second and third for the win.

Paul Popell led St. Catharines with two goals and Dennis Hull and Ken Hodge scored one each. Dale Watson and John Vanderburg tallied for the losers.

PENALTIES LOPSIDED

The Hawks drew eight of the 11 penalties but goalie Jim Horton helped keep the Petes from taking advantage.

In Hamilton, the Flyers scored four unanswered goals in the first period and then coasted to the win with the help of outstanding netminding by George Gardner.

The Canadiens spread their scoring among eight players as they sent the Royals down to their 32nd defeat in 46 games.

Other marksmen for the Canadiens were Andre Lagueux, Norm Dennis, Bill Inglis, Yvan Cournoyer, Bob Lemieux, Andre Boudrias and Jerry Clancy. Doug Davidson led Guelph with two goals and Trevor Fahey, Oscar Allen and Len Bazay tallied once each.

Bob Plager, Guelph's scrappy defenceman, was ejected from the game in the second period for protesting a Montreal goal too loudly Plager grabbed referee Bill Roberts by the arm and spun him around.

In a Metro Junior A game, Toronto Marlboros outscored Brampton 3-1 in the last period to take an 8-6 win.

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gordie Howe has been around a long time and he's still showing the youngsters how it should be done. Detroit's, magnificent right-wing veteran took over the National Hockey League scoring leadership Thursday with a goal and one assist.

His team lost, and his performance was overshadowed by that of Stan Mikita, who scored three goals and got one assist as Chicago beat Detroit 5-3, but Howe picked up just enough points to move ahead of a flock of comparative youngsters now tied for second place.

Howe has 29 goals and 31 assists for 60 points. Bobby Hull of Chicago, with two goals and an assist Thursday night, moved up behind him along with Mikita and Boston's John Bucyk and Murray Oliver. All have 59 points.

Hull becomes the NHL's second player to score 30 goals this season, joining Toronto's Frank Mahovlich, who has a total of 34 points.

Peewees Caretakers Have Man-Size Job

They are handling players' equipment in the international peewee hockey tournament in which 64 teams were entered when it started last Saturday.

Barsetti's assistants say it is enough "to drive you mad" though Barsetti himself appears calm.

About a dozen games are played daily, starting at breakfast and ending by 10 p.m. Checking equipment in and out becomes a gruelling task.

Four dressing rooms are always in action.

Immediately after each game, Barsetti's team must see that the dressing rooms and showers are thoroughly cleaned and that the right teams use them following the cleanup.

Buses, dressing rooms and benches must be checked for gear left behind by the boys, all 12 or under. Barsetti says gear has never been stolen.

This equiping, checking, cleaning, re-equipping and re-checking must be done 70 times this week—the number of games played.

Nevertheless, Barsetti enjoys it. And it makes his regular job with Quebec Aces of the American Hockey League seem orderly and unhurried.

Smoke Eaters Swamp Czechs

PRAGUE (Reuters) — Trail Smoke Eaters, Canada's representative in the world hockey championships swamped Czechoslovakia's B team 9-3 Thursday.

The official Czech news agency, CTK, said the Canadians played "with gusto and enthusiasm" in this third match of their current Czech tour. The Smoke Eaters had beaten the B team 9-1 in their first start and lost 3-2 to the top Czech team in their second.

The Smoke Eaters led 2-0 after the first period and 8-2 after the second in a game in which CTK said they made use of their assets, especially in plotting offensives. They showed clean, quick work in the defence and uncomplicated attacks on the goal," the agency said.

Forward Frank Peacock led Trail with four goals. Centre Howie Hornby scored twice and Gerry Ehman, Harold Jones and Ad Tambellini scored singles. Czech scorers were identified as Barta, Hrbaty and Skopal.

The game was marred by one incident CTK described as an "unsportsmanlike scene." Trail defenceman Harry Smith and Czech player Cristofoli were sent off the ice with penalties after a skirmish and the referee then assessed Cristofoli a 10-minute misconduct for abusing the official from the penalty bench. Smith was thrown out of the game with a match misconduct.

Kelso Tops Field in Widener

NEW YORK (AP)—The 1963 $100,000 season in United States racing continues Saturday with renewals of two major handicaps—the Santa Anita at Santa Anita Park and the Widener at Hialeah.

Between the two, each at 1¼ miles, most of the top older horses will be in action. Crimson Satan, once again in the hard-hitting form that took him to the 1961 two-year-old title, heads a field of 15 in the $145,000-guaranteed Santa Anita race.

Kelso, U.S. horse-of-the-year the last three years, tops a probable field of 10 in the Widener, which carries an added value of $100,000.

Crimson Satan will carry top weight of 128 pounds. Top contenders include Crozier, Decidedly, who last week won his first race since the 1962 Kentucky Derby. Olden Times, Physician, surprise winner of the rich race last year, and the Axe II.

Kelso is a stickout in the Widener. His only serious contention likely will come from the Hobeau Farm's Beau Purple, a swift runner making his first start of the year and packing 125 pounds.

Beau Purple whipped Kelso twice last year.

Canadian Second in Ski Event

Among the top 10 in the cross-country were: Donald A. MacLeod, Ottawa, second, 2:13.3; Franz Portmann, Lake Louise, Alta., sixth, 2:19.28; Martti Raudtio, Winnipeg, 2:21.28, eighth.

Martha Benjamin, 25-year-old Yukon Indian woman bidding for place on Canada's national cross-country ski team, and Ben Charlie, son of an Indian chief of Big Cross in the Yukon, arrived Thursday night and will compete today. They are members of the Louchsez tribe of the Vantakuthin Indians.

Finn Eyes 17-Foot Mark

NEW YORK (AP) — Pentti Nikula, the pale, frail-looking Finnish bank clerk who has pole-vaulted higher than any other human, believes he has a good chance of reaching the 17-foot mark during his United States indoor campaign in the next three weeks.

"It may happen Saturday night or it may come later at Cleveland or Chicago," he said in an interview through an interpreter Thursday. "I am in perfect shape. If all the little things come together at the right time, I am sure I can do it."

Nikula makes his season's U.S. debut Saturday night in the National Amateur Athletic Union championships here, meeting such other 16-foot vaulters as Ron Morris, Dave York and Rolando Cruz. If he misses here, he gets other chances in the Knights of Columbus meet at Cleveland March 2 and The Daily News Relays at Chicago March 8.

The 24-year-old farmer's son soared 16 feet 8¾ inches—more than five inches higher than any man had vaulted before. He accomplished the feat three weeks ago in Pajulahti, Finland, a small town some 130 miles south of Helsinki.

SETS SWIM MARK

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Satako Tanaka, the great Japanese swimmer, broke all listed women's records for the 220-yard and 200-metre backstroke with a time of two minutes 28.5 seconds in a special solo swim during the Australian championships Thursday night. The 20-year-old Japanese was four-tenths of a second under the 220 record she set during a qualifying heat in the 55-yard heated Perth outdoor pool Monday. The equivalent of 200 metres is 218 yards two feet two inches.

Sugar Seeks 'Sugar' in Global Tour

The former world welterweight and middleweight champion showed up at boxing agent Dewey Fragetta's office Thursday and signed for a series of fights in Rome, London and South America.

Fragetta, who books fighters around the globe, said Robinson will fight in Rome March 29 against either Bruno Visintin or Nino Benvenuti. Then he will go to London for an April 30 bout with Briton Terry Downes, a former shareholder in the world middleweight title.

At Fragetta's office Sugar Ray met Abraham Matterson of Brazil, the manager of world pantamweight champion Pone Jofre, and signed to box in Sao Paulo, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Uruguay, Peru and Venezuela, in May and June.

Ducks Show Increase in 2 Flyways

WASHINGTON (AP) — Duck hunters got good news from the United States Interior department Thursday in figures on winter waterfowl populations in the Pacific and Mississippi flyways. The Pacific data are new and the Mississippi flyway data revised.

The U.S. fish and wildlife service reported the annual Pacific winter count showed an increase over 1962 and was better than the 10-year average.

The service said the waterfowl population in the Mississippi flyway was better than 1962 and above the 10-year average.

The department said: "A recheck of the 1963 midwinter waterfowl survey date for the Mississippi flyway reveals an over-all increase in the number of ducks, geese and coots of 14 per cent above the average for the last 10 years—not below the average, as calculated earlier."

Otherwise, the department: stuck with the summarizations on individual species which it reported earlier. These included an indicated 37-per-cent increase in the number of mallards over last year, but this most popular duck in the flyway was still reported to be 27 per cent off from the 10-year average.

Knudson Tops At Caracas

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP)— George Knudson of Toronto, still beaming over a course record of 64, entered the second round of the Caracas open golf tournament with a two-stroke lead today.

Knudson, winner of the Panama Open, first stop on the Caribbean professional tour, fired his sensational six-under par score in the opening round Thursday. He went out in 34 and had five birdies on the back nine for a 30.

"I couldn't do a thing wrong," the slim Canadian said. "Everything was going like a dream. The longest putt I sank all day was an eight-footer."

The Caracas Open is the third leg on the Caribbean circuit. The player with the most points after the five Caribbean tournaments gets an additional $1,000 prize.

Dick Stranahan of San Leandro, Calif., posted a 32-34—66 for second place, one stroke ahead of Art Wall of Pocono Manor, Pa.

Jay Dolan of Leicester, Mass. and Tom Paladino of Scarsdale, N.Y., were tied for fourth spot with 68s.

FINE PRIZE OFFERED

LONDON (AP)—The English Derby at Epsom Downs in June will be worth about $210,000 to the winning horse this year, more than double last year's value, the announcement Thursday. English horse racing circles moved ahead of the Irish in the rivalry to produce the richest derby in the British Isles. The Irish, who switched their sweepstakes from Epsom to their own derby at the Curragh last year, paid $140,000 to the winner last year. The English Derby paid $97,404.

Says 10-Pin Bowling Tough On 'Joints'

LONDON (Reuters) — A specialist in physical medicine said today that 10-pin bowling could possibly be a cause of early rheumatoid arthritis.

B. A. Latham cited in a letter to the British Medical Journal the case of a West Indian youth who was a "fanaticall" keen 10-pin bowler" and suffered from pain in the knuckles of the middle finger of his right hand.

"The bowl used in the sport is a heavy object," Latham said. "When it is released the fingers are bent backwards."

"There seemed to be little doubt that this repeated bending of the joints was the cause of the patient's trouble."

Latham suggested that when a patient presents similar signs confined to one hand it is worth inquiring if he is a 10-pin bowler.

Will Pick Hoop Team At Tourney

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP)— Coach Bob Hamilton of Lethbridge Nationals says he is happy that the problem of selecting Canada's basketball representative in the Pan-American Games is settled.

M. W. Leeson of St. Catharines, president of the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association, said the team will be picked at a tournament here March 14-18.

Canada's representative will be the nucleus of the winning team, filled out with the best players of other teams. Earlier it had been claimed that it had been decided to have Lethbridge represent Canada.

Hamilton said Thursday: "Now it's up to our ball club to go ahead and win the thing, and win the thing in such a manner that our ball players will be on this team.

"I'm sure the winning coach will have a say in the matter because it should be done that way."

Recreation Highlights

By Jarrah, Assistant Director

Outdoor rinks, winter carnivals, and summer playgrounds can indeed offer a great deal of enjoyment and pleasure to the people living in their immediate vicinity. But, do you realize just how much more pleasure and self-satisfaction may be obtained when you, and your neighbor activity participate in the above-mentioned program?

By "active participation" however, we do not necessarily mean volunteering to keep rink free of snow all season, or working each day on the playground in your area. What we do mean, is that you should take an active interest in these projects if they exist in your neighbourhood and be willing to devote time and effort to their advancement.

Recently a group of interested citizens held a meeting, at which the prime purpose was to arrange for skating time and hockey time on the outdoor rink in their area. I say, this was the original purpose, because now it appears as if they are well on their way to forming an active "Neighborhood Association".

You might ask, "what is a neighbourhood association"? This basically is a group of interested citizens, living in one general area, who wish to form an association, to better the recreational and social facilities in their area.

Usually "Neighborhood Associations" form around a park area. Thus usually because in this area is the focal point for the children's summer interests and all persons are interested in the welfare of their children.

Usually a few individuals become concerned about some specific problem and as a result, may find a common objective — to rectify this problem.

The Neighborhood Association should in no way be connected with politics. It should not be a Ratepayers' Association.

The Neighborhood Association can involve many people. It offers a common ground where all would be involved — public and separate schools, high school, and all religions. It offers the members of a given area, a true sense of belonging, because they possess common interests.

The Recreation Committee is appointed by Council to fulfill the needs of the entire community and who would know better what the needs and desires of each area in that community are, than the people themselves.

In Oshawa and Sudbury and numerous other communities, Neighborhood Associations take an active interest in area recreation, every year round. In summer, they for softball teams in the area, sponsor corn roasts, wiener bake days, etc. In the winter season, they plan winter carnivals, supervise outdoor rinks and sponsor hockey and generally make their community a much better place to live in, and for their children, a much better place to play in.

Neighborhood Associations serve to bring residents in an area together. They offer a democratic means of expression which the residents can freely express their opinion re: recreation facilities, play areas, outdoor rinks, etc.

Much can be accomplished by residents of an area, when they together and there is no better common ground to better recreational facilities in an area than a Neighborhood Association.

A Neighborhood Association is an Association in which all members have a free voice and an Association which will enable the residents in an area, an opportunity to work together for a common cause — the cause of Recreation in their area.

Why don't you take the initiative? Talk to your neighbors — and your neighbor's neighbor. Form community interest in your area. The Recreation Dept. and its resources are yours to help you — so why not make full use of them — now!

Kennedy Hunts for Facts As Hotheads Want Attacks

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once more many members of Congress are emotional about Cuba without knowing all the facts. And once more President Kennedy has to stay cool to learn the facts in order to make intelligent decisions.

The American shrimp boat Ala. drifting with engine trouble in international waters between Cuba and the United States, was attacked late Wednesday by two Russian-built MiGs from Cuba. Neither the ship nor the two-man crew was hit. Rockets or machine-guns were used.

Kennedy told his press conference Wednesday he wants to learn:

Whether the MIG pilots were Russians or Cubans; whether they attacked on their own or were ordered to by the government of Cuba; and whether this was an isolated case or part of a Communist policy.

SEEKS INFORMATION

To prevent this whole business from getting out of hand — and leading through "hot pursuit" to an incident which could mean war — Kennedy has done two things until we can be sure of the facts:

1. He ordered American military planes to shoot-if-necessary against MiGs making any similar future attacks on U.S. vessels.

2. He will try to find out why and by whom the attack was made on the Ala.

In 1961, U-2 reconnaissance American planes were seized and landed in Cuba. The last of the commandeered planes was an airliner with 31 persons aboard. Castro returned the plane and the passengers.

But, before they knew what he was going to do, senators from Thurmond (Dem. S.C.) and Barry Goldwater (Rep. Ariz.) wanted Kennedy to order the planes returned within 24 hours or, although Castro had nothing to do with the seizure, send U.S. forces into Cuba to see if Castro stayed calm. There have been no more plane seizures.

SHOOT FIRST

Similar demands were made in Congress Thursday before it was learned whether the MIG pilots were on unmarked shrimper was an American boat or why the attack was made. Some of the demands were for "hot pursuit."

Kennedy orders "hot pursuit," American planes which came upon a similar incident in the future would pursue and shoot down the MiGs even if it meant chasing them into their bases in Cuba to do it.

As Defence Secretary McNamara demonstrated recently on television — with aerial photographs — the Cubans have not been bothering U.S. planes which now are flying over Cuba to take pictures.

But if U.S. fighter planes went in over Cuba to shoot down Cuban planes, they probably would be fired on and so would the U.S. fighter U.S. planes on photographic missions. Then what?

Yet Senator Richard Russell, Georgia Democrat who is one of the most important men in Congress as chairman of the armed services committee, was one of those advocating "hot pursuit" although he admitted he didn't think the MIG pilots knew they were attacking an American boat.

SASKATOON (CP)—If Western Canadian hockey fans are wondering why the West isn't producing more major league players, they need look no further than the empty open-air rinks during a cold spell, says Vic Lynn.

"When it gets cold the kids just don't come out the way they used to," he says. It takes the edge off a depression to make hockey players out West.

"I think we are tough hockey offers the kids a way to make a living. Once they get that bug they've got that hockey blood and they seldom leave it."

He started in the peewee ranks during the hungry '30s and moved through the amateur and minor pro leagues until he made it with Toronto. Maple Leafs of the National League in 1946-47.

Lynn stayed with Leafs five years, including three Stanley Cup championship clubs, then completed his NHL stay with two years with Boston and two at Chicago.

AMBUSHED IN EUROPE

A forward in the 1930s, the rugged veteran drifted back to the blue line upon his return to the minors. His first crack at coaching was with Prince Albert Mintos of the Saskatchewan Junior League. Three years ago he moved into the coaching ranks in Saskatoon and still takes a turn as a defence man when his team runs short of players.

He still has hopes of returning to the NHL as a coach, but the prospects are bleak. "NHL clubs just don't take western amateur coaches when vacancies appear."

Lynn, now 38, says his Quakers were ambushed by the national teams of Europe during the early stages of a 13-game exhibition tour this winter. They lost six, including the first four starts.

"Our players who saw previous service in Europe said the game overseas had improved more than 60 per cent. Playing on national teams can skate, pass and let go with booming slap shots. They're also adept at deflecting pucks into the goal.

"But while they can hand out the tough checks, they still can't take them. Once we got over their style of play and began hitting, we began winning. We wouldn't have taken a beating if we'd been on the tour if we had done this sooner.

"Europeans also back pass too much. Some of the passes are made without looking and as the tour progressed we intercepted more and more of them. Their netminding leaves something to be desired, too."

SMOKIES SHOULD WIN

Lynn said he would be surprised if Trail Smoke Eaters don't win the 1963 world hockey championships next month in Sweden. Trail has the netminding and the defence needed to get by. "It will be tough, but they should do it."

He added that few NHL teams would have trouble beating the Europeans. "Once the NHL clubs get on to the rules, it would be a question of only how much they would win by."

Quakers left with a commanding 14-point margin in the league standings. The night they returned second - place Moose aw Pla - Mors moved into the No. 2 slot. Last week, Saskatoon again opened the eight-point bulge.

Quakers are heavy favorites to win the SSHL crown and represent Saskatchewan in the Allan Cup chase. Only Wilkie peg Maroons, who play a partial 12 - game schedule with SSHL clubs, appear powerful enough to upset their drive to the Allan Cup final this spring.

Reporters Can't Talk, Mingle With Guests

WASHINGTON (AP)—Reporters have been told they no longer may mingle or talk with guests at official receptions given by President and Mrs. Kennedy.

Press Secretary Pierre Salinger Wednesday outlined changes in the setup which has been followed for the two years of the Kennedy administration. He said they were made after an examination of the news coverage policy, but did not go into details about what led to the decision.

Reporters covering such receptions hereafter may only watch the guests arrive and the Kennedys pose for pictures and watch guests on the receiving line, Salinger said.

But the Kennedys have made it a point to eliminate the formal receiving line. In such a case, Salinger said, the reporters would have to leave after the guests arrive.

In effect, Salinger said, the White House is returning to what he said was the procedure followed under the Eisenhower administration. The reporters who covered the social scene during that period protested that the Kennedy policy permitted reporters to mingle, talk to guests and cover the receptions.

OUT FOR SEASON

MONTREAL (CP) — Claude Ruel, coach of Montreal Canadiens of the Ontario Junior A Hockey League, said Thursday centre Jacques Madore will be sidelined for the rest of the season. He said Madore suffered three concussions this season. The last one occurred when he was hit on the head with a stick by defenceman Len Beaty of Guelph Royals three weeks ago. Madore said the station is impaired and that the doctor told him to stay off his skates for the rest of the season.

Hibbard - Callow Combines took a 3-0 lead in their best-of-five Prince Edward North Shore Hockey League semi-finals last night with a 7-3 win over Rossmore Merchants while Stinson Construction evened their set with Batch Construction at 1-1, taking a 3-1 victory.

A great game in goal by Gerrard Genereaux sparked the Stinson decision while Bill Genereaux, Barry Porteous and Gary Genereaux scored a goal apiece. Don Wood potted the lone Batch goal.

Hibbard-Callow paced the Hibbard-Callow attack with three goals and one assist while Bob Williamson had two goals and two helpers. Ab Wright got two and one while Bill Hurst also scored.

Jack and Bernie Boulter tallied for Rossmore.

City-Peewees Ousted At Oshawa

Bellerville Peewees bowed out of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association playdowns in Oshawa last night when they dropped a 5-1 decision to Oshawa.

The Oshawa crew grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first period and made it 2-0 at the end of the second. Oshawa's lone marker in the Belleville nets by Ron Jury prevented the score from mounting any higher. Finally Oshawa crew time and again before they got through for three more thirty-second goals.

Bellerville finally broke the goose egg late in the third on a goal by Terry Meagher. The same player was awarded a penalty shot later in the game but was stopped by the Oshawa goalie.

Larry Lupel scored twice for Oshawa while Ron Horton, Tony Flonlet and Les Minaos also scoring.

BELLEVILLE — Ron Jury, Greg Burkett, Ron Lowen, Andy Slapkauskas, Allen Jones, Bill Bullock, Dave Cass, Ted White, Daryll Demers, Terry Meagher, Mark Acquafredda, Dennis Meszaros, Gary Sero, Ron Mitchell, Brian James.

'My Three Sons' May Soon Get a New Father

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Danny Thomas has had a couple of television wives. Lassie has had two masters. Even Flipper, though My Three Sons may soon get a new father.

The ABC comedy series has been renewed for another season starting next fall—but without Fred Macmurray, the film star who has been playing the widower father of three boys.

One solution for their situation is that which is sometimes used in the daytime serials when a member of the cast departs. The writer sends the character on a long journey. And when he returns weeks, sometimes months, later, he has changed. Macmurray's character, Steve Douglas, is an ideal candidate for the long journey treatment. He's a engineer, so an assignment of long duration — perhaps building a dam in a remote nation—would be logical.

The series is comedy, so that favorite device of soap operas —killing an irreplaceable character—obviously is out.

(My own solution would be to have Steve marry at the end of this season. Loretta Young, with all those television children of her own, would be a happy choice. Then next season the show could come back as My Three Stepsons.)

Western Hockey

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

There isn't much doubt that the Western Hockey League's Southern Division is considerably stronger than the northern circuit.

The top three clubs in the south have picked up more than 30 victories each in the interlocking 1962-63 campaign. No team can make that claim in the north.

Seattle Totems lead the north with 29 victories and a tie for 83 points. Spokane Comets have 25 wins and a deadlock for 51 points in the south, yet are mired in last place.

The Comets took on the Totems Thursday night and emerged with a 4-3 victory. Meanwhile, Los Angeles Blades in third spot in the south with 53 points, edged Vancouver Canucks 3-2. The Canucks are second in the Northern Division.

Brent Hunnichuk, Bob Solinger and Marc Boileau scored for the Blades at Los Angeles. Phil Maloney and Buddy Boone were the Canuck marksmen.

Anne Baxter Says Her Life Has No Pattern

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "My life has no pattern, and that's the way I like it," says Anne Baxter.

Here is a patternless life indeed, and a unique one for a movie star or anyone, for that matter. She alternates between the career of an actress in Hollywood and the pioneer existence at Giro station on the Australian plain.

"I think I've managed quite a bit in the last three years," she commented. "I've traveled 45,000 miles, had three pregnancies (one miscarriage), made three movies, done numerous live and—I won't say dead—filmed television shows, toured Europe and spent a large part of each year doing all the household work at our ranch."

Anne was here to await the birth of her third child, an event that may happen any day now. Having had two difficult deliveries, she chose to return here to be returning to Giro, where doctor.

BACK TO THE RANCH

In a month or two she expects to be returning to Giro, where her husband Randolph Galt raises Hereford cattle on a 34,000-acre ranch.

"There is no such thing as help in Australia," she explained. "A man would rather wash a car for nothing and join the owner afterwards for a beer be paid for the job. That's the way the Australians are.

"So I do all the work myself. And I mean everything. I wash a mean diaper, I'll have you know. When I hang out the wash, you'd better put on your dark glasses."

What does she like about the winter life?

"The freedom. There is something wonderful about doing work yourself. Everyone comes to call on you, you can see them coming 20 miles away."

But she admitted that after four or five months the ranch life begins to pall.

"By that time I get pretty tired of menial work," she said. "Also, we have the desire to see old friends and familiar places. We have made many good friends in Australia. But no matter how much you like your new friends, there is always that urge to see and talk to people you have known for years."

Her one subject Anne is something of a zealot: The position of the Australian woman.

"I have the utmost admiration for them," she commented. "Out on the ranches they do everything, from boiling laundry in a copper kettle to educating their own children.

"But I cannot get used to the way they are treated by their husbands. The average Australian has only two relations with women: domestic and sex."

Trapped Beaver Dies Hard But Trapper Also Faces Possibility of Grim Death

Verne Davis of Selby is shown measuring beaver offered for sale by Ice Keyhoe of Actinolite. Mr. Davis will ship the fur to Montreal, for export or to be made into fur coats.

A beaver's trip to market begins when the animal nibbles poplar bait, arranged in a figure-8 shape about a trap. The trap closes on a leg, and the beaver drowns under the ice. In the picture, Jack Gordon, who traps the Lingham Lake area, has just pulled a trap, complete with beaver, through the ice hole in the foreground. This trap was set in a swampy area, just beside the beaver's house.

After the beaver hide has been stretched in the famous oval pattern, the skin is cured. The fat is scraped off, water is rubbed into the flesh side of the skin, and the hide is scraped again. Finally, the skin is dried at near freezing temperatures. The skill used in curing the skin is reflected in the eventual sale price. In the picture, Jack Gordon, a local trapper, is scraping a hide.

JAIL NATIONALIST

BULAWAYO, Southern Rhodesia (Reuters)—Tobias Mazonga, a freelance journalist said to be the local organizer of the banned Zimbabwe African People's Union, today was jailed for seven years for illegal possession of weapons.

A trapped beaver dies hard. Held usually by one foot, the animal struggles in near freezing water below the ice until its lungs burst, and it drowns. Beaver can remain submerged for about ten minutes at a time, just long enough for the animal to leave its house for a short feed, under the ice, and return to breath again. If it has chosen to feed on the popler sticks surrounding a trap, the trip may be its last.

But the same fate awaits the trapper if he makes a mistake. Trusting the wrong ice, losing his way, or merely twisting his ankle on a fallen tree can cost a trapper his life. The bush, especially in winter, is at best potentially hostile. It supports life for some, but only on the condition that some die.

About 500 trappers have been licensed this year by the Department of Lands and Forests, and about 150 of these operate registered trap lines. Recently, an Ontario Intelligencer reporter spent a weekend with Jack Gordon, operator of a registered trap line.

15 MILES FROM ROAD

Mr. Gordon has been trapping since 1927. His present territory covers 92 lots in Grimsthorpe township, around Lingham Lake. He lives alone in the bush for weeks at a time, fifteen miles from the nearest road, covering his trapline on snowshoes or by Skidoo an average of once a week. Occasionally he comes out for supplies, to visit his son in Belleville, or to sell his furs. Sometimes, he meets another trapper or hunter passing through.

Time passes quickly though. During the daylight hours, he visits his traps, spending about an hour at each pond. To check the traps, he chops a hole in the ice to free the bait, and checks each stick for traces of beaver. Then he checks the trap and re-sets it. Each pond will support about three traps, and he takes a maximum of three beaver per year from each colony.

During the evenings, sometimes, there are beaver to be skinned and hides to be cured. Each takes more than an hour of work before the skin is stretched to dry, in the famous oval shape. Often, there is other work to occupy the evening hours, repairs to snowshoes or traps. A battery radio helps fill in idle hours.

In return for his work, the trapper makes a living, and not much more. A beaver pelt may be worth anything from five to thirty-five dollars, depending on the size, the condition, and the skill employed in curing it. Muskrat brings in about one dollar each now, and are caught only by accident in beaver traps.

But most trappers trap for more than money. Alone in the bush, they can avoid the sometimes senseless rush and the artificial values of civilization.

Trappers in Madoc District Now Using Snowmobiles

Mechanization is catching up with trappers in the woods north of Madoc this winter. Miniature snowmobiles, powered by two-stroke motors small enough for a chain saw, are stretching trap lines over more and more miles, and giving the trappers an easier life as they do it.

Snowmobiles are nothing new, but most are too big to manoeuvre in heavy brush, and too heavy to travel over the thin ice of fast area. More important, perhaps, they are too expensive for most trappers.

But within the past five years, lightweight snowmobiles for sportsmen, have been marketed. Costing less than a thousand dollars, they weigh only a few hundred pounds and can go almost any place a man can walk. Usually with one crawler track and two skis, they can go about 30 miles per hour; but the original models were not powerful enough for commercial use.

NEW MODEL

This winter, a heavy-duty, lightweight has come out. With two tracks, it has the traction to travel almost anywhere, and lower gear ratios give it the pulling power the early models lacked. In good snow conditions, these twin track models can haul more than a ton of freight on a sleigh or toboggan.

Jack Gordon was one of the first users of the new vehicles. He has trapping rights over 92 lots of Grimsthorpe township, including most of Lingham Lake. He spends the winter in his camp, on the east side of the lake, with 15 miles of bush between him and the nearest open road. He has trapped beaver over the area since 1927, but on foot he has never been able to cover the whole area regularly. A trapped beaver will spoil, beneath the ice, after about nine days, and trap lines are limited to the traps a man can check regularly within a week. Jack is now 61 years old, a bit slower on snowshoes than he was, and his lines have been slowly shortened, and his incomes reduced, by the hard facts of those years.

About mid-January, he bought a snowmobile, one of the light ones. Now he is stretching his trap lines again, in keeping with the new mobility, and he can still spare the time for a weekend trip to civilization.

OTHER BENEFITS

He is finding other benefits from the snowmobile too. As long as an eight horsepower motor is doing the work, for instance, there is no need to skin beaver out on the ice, before the trap. The skinning takes time: about an hour in the cold, and it is not comfortable after he has spent about fifteen minutes in sub-zero weather, lying on the ice with his arm shoved into the water, feeling for the trap. The motor is also a good source of heat, to warm and dry hands that have been working in and around the water, Jack finds.

Skinning a beaver is a long and delicate process, since one slice in the skin could cut the value in half. Jack Gordon, operator of a registered trap line, is skinning a beaver's head in this picture.

Prime Minister In London To Accept Honors

Canadian Leader Plans To Hold Trade Talks

LONDON (Reuters) — Canadian Prime Minister Diefenbaker arrived here by air today for a visit combining ceremony and business.

Diefenbaker drove from the airport to the house of the Canadian High Commissioner George Drew.

The ceremonial part of the visit will come Monday when he receives the freedom of the City of London. He will be the eighth Canadian prime minister to receive this honor.

The ceremonial was the official reason for Diefenbaker's visit, but the Canadian leader also plans to hold trade talks with Prime Minister Macmillan.

Diefenbaker's visit was arranged long before the current Defence policy crisis came to a head in Canada. The crisis has led to the dissolution of the Canadian Parliament to pave the way for general elections April 8.

ACCOMPANY PM

McCutcheon and Churchill will have talks Monday with Reginald Maudling, chancellor of the exchequer, and Defence Minister Peter Thorneycroft.

As for Diefenbaker, he will open his discussions here at a "working supper" tonight with Macmillan.

It was assumed the breakdown of negotiations on Britain's bid to join the Common Market will be the main topic.

Observers said the situation caused by the negotiations has opened new perspectives for Commonwealth trade which Diefenbaker will be eager to see exploited to the full.

QUEBEC WILL LOWER VOTING AGE TO 18

New Electoral Law To Be Introduced

MONTREAL (CP)—The Quebec government plans to join Saskatchewan in admitting 18-year-old voters to the polls.

The announcement of the government's plans to lower the voting age to 18 from 21 was made Friday by Youth Minister Paul Gerin-Lajoie, in a luncheon address to the Students' Liberal Federation. The meeting preceded the opening of the Quebec Liberal Federation's annual convention.

Mr. Gerin-Lajoie said a special committee of the legislature will meet to consider a new electoral law "within the next 12 days."

Loud applause from some 75 students greeted the announcement, which the youth minister said was made because the government felt that youth today was accepting a responsible role in society at an earlier age than previous generations.

Saskatchewan is the only province that now has a minimum voting age of 18. British Columbia and Alberta have set the limit at 19 and the other provinces 21.

STRESSES YOUTH

Quebec Premier Jean Lesage also stressed the importance of youth to the party in his opening address to the convention.

"Youths represent an avant-garde movement necessary to our party," he said, "because they look less to their personal interests than to the existence of a government which responds to their aspirations."

The premier said it was "high time to make important changes" in the distribution of legislature seats, since the Liberals elected only 63 members to the 95-seat legislature last November on 56.4 per cent of the popular vote.

In 1956, the Union Nationale had only 52.1 per cent of the popular vote but had won 82 seats.

Mrs. Claire Kirkland-Casgrain, Quebec's first and only woman cabinet minister, said the government's main goals are the economic emancipation of Quebec, the education of leaders in all fields and the flowering of cultural life.

Political foes for Quebec "totally lacks realism," she told the Liberal Women's organization.

A group of Morgan College students, jailed for trespassing when they tried to gain admittance to a white-only movie theatre in north Baltimore, crowd around to read a newspaper account of their plight. Shortly after the picture was taken at city jail, where the students were being held on bond up to $600 each, the theatre announced it would admit Negroes and a Municipal Court judge ordered the students released on their own recognizance. More than 400 students have been arrested since the demonstrations began a week ago. (AP Wirephoto)

CIVIL DEFENCE EFFORT SAID WASTE OF TIME

Liberals Attack EMO Programs

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's Emergency Measures Organization has failed to provide any "real protection" from nuclear attack and could be either smothered up or scuttled, Vernon Singer (L—York Centre) told the legislature Friday.

Mr. Singer said that until the "sham and nonsense" are removed from EMO programs, its 1963-64 allocation should be "reduced from $408,000 to zero."

"The civil defence effort in Ontario is a complete and thorough waste of time," he said during debate on the attorney-general's estimates.

T. D. Thomas (NDP — Oshawa) said the public is "disinterested" in EMO projects because of lack of leadership from the federal and provincial governments. Without this leadership, the 1963-64 appropriation was "money down the drain."

Ray Edwards (L—Wentworth) said that although national survival is generally regarded as a federal responsibility, "it's the EMO job to tell the public that it is in favor either of a system of public fallout shelters or private shelters."

JUST DON'T KNOW

Attorney-General Cass said governments are faced "not only with a major problem—lack of knowledge of what would happen in a nuclear attack.

"We know that some of us would not survive long enough to care whether or not there is a plan," he said. "But we do have a survival plan in this province."

Mr. Cass said the government approves both public and private shelters, but it would be difficult for people to build private shelters which would give adequate protection.

He said the EMO's 1963-64 budget this year is a 75-per-cent federal allocation for provincial emergency measures. Architects were working on a possible shelter to be built into a new building at Queen's Park and a study had been made of possible locations for emergency shelters in existing buildings.

In other business, Robert Nixon (L—Brant) asked that legislature members be paid their statutory indemnity and expenses by monthly instalments, instead of in a lump sum once a year.

DUKE DIES

LONDON (AP)—The Duke of Westminster, 63, one of Britain's richest men, died Friday in Kent. The duke was a member of the Grosvenor family, which owns large blocks of downtown London property, including much of Grosvenor Square.

Diefenbaker 240th Person Made Freeman of London

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker, following in the footsteps of the six previous Canadian leaders, rides in the ancient Guildhall Monday to receive the freedom of the City of London.

Shortly before noon Monday, weather permitting, he and his wife will drive through the City to the Guildhall in an open, semi-state landau loaned by the Queen.

Adding a flash of color to the already glittering proceedings will be a mounted escort of four Royal Canadian Mounted Police along with the usual four mounted City police. If it rains, the Diefenbakers will use a closed car.

At the ceremony, H. P. Greenhill, principal clerk to the City's chamberlain, will read the traditional declaration that the prime minister "is a man of good name and fame."

The declaration, later signed by Diefenbaker, adds:

"He does not desire the freedom of this City whereby to defraud the Queen or this city of any of their rights, customs or advantayes, but that he will pay his scot and bear his lot; and so they all say."

The Canadian leader, 240th person to be so honored, then receives a copy of the freedom enclosed in a casket and signs the roll of fame. Others on the roll include Lord Nelson, Florence Nightingale, Lord Baden-Powell, Sir Winston Churchill, and

Martin Gives Liberal Stand

WINNIPEG (CP) — Liberal Paul Martin said Friday his party's stand on nuclear weapons for Canada is unequivocal and simple.

The member of Parliament for East Essex told a press conference "we believe at this time it is obligatory for us to accept nuclear weapons."

He outlined his nuclear position when asked to comment on claims that Defence Minister Hellyer, former Liberal health minister, said there is "no equivocation" in the party's stand that Canada must acquire nuclear weapons now for its forces in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the North American Air Defence Command.

Police Seize Invalid After Bouquet Nearly Hits Queen

MELBOURNE (Reuters) — The Queen was almost hit today by a bouquet of flowers thrown by an invalid ex-convict who was taken into custody by police and later released.

The flowers bounced harmlessly off a policeman as it looped through the air in the direction of the Queen's car after riding in an open car through the crowded streets of Melbourne.

The thrower was grabbed by police after the Queen passed.

A police official said the man was a 48-year-old invalid who was subsequently released because of his disability, but will be summoned. He did not specify the charge.

The Queen and Prince Philip spent the afternoon in brilliant sunshine watching racing at Flemington Park after their arrival by sea from Sydney on the latest leg of their current Australian tour.

More than 40,000 persons crowded the park, brilliant with summer flowers, as the Queen and her husband drove on to the track escorted by mounted police and then by grey horses.

The Duke of Edinburgh one mile stakes was won by Australia's champion race horse Aquanita. New Zealand-bred Aliadin's Lamp won the Queen's Cup for three Australian professional golfers, Kel Nagle, Norman Von Nida and Peter Thomson, who lease the horse.

Macmillan Says Canada Has Duty To Arm

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Macmillan of Britain has told Canada it has a duty to arm with nuclear weapons, Conservative Leader Diefenbaker said Friday.

Mr. Diefenbaker told the Commons that Mr. Macmillan had made the statement in a speech to the British House of Commons.

Mr. Diefenbaker said Mr. Macmillan had also said that Canada's refusal to arm with nuclear weapons would be a blow to the Commonwealth.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he had not seen the speech and could not comment on it.

Battle of Bottle and Barrel Pits Scotch Against Bourbon

WASHINGTON (CP) — The battle of the bottle and the barrel opens before the U.S. Tariff Commission Tuesday as American bourbon-makers seek to smash the expanding U.S. market for Canadian whisky. But the defendants say they've got a secret weapon—scotch—that will make the attackers tremble.

Alarmed by the spreading popularity of Canadian whisky, the Publicker Industries of Philadelphia and its subsidiaries are demanding that American tariff concessions to be set aside and

Socred Member Suggests National Deal for Party

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

An Independent Social Credit member of the Alberta legislature suggested Friday that the national SC party could make a deal with another political party in Ottawa if it fails to form the next federal government.

Out of such a deal, said Earl Ansley of Cardston, could come a policy of "banks of Alberta" that would allow the province's Social Credit government to substitute monetary reforms which are part of Social Credit's basic philosophy but which must await action at the federal level.

In another legislature, the Saskatchewan House at Regina, Industry and Information Minister Ross Brown said the CCF government is planning to expand programs and introduce new measures "to put Saskatchewan in a position to continue to compete with other provinces" for the establishment of private industry.

Referring to new industries locating in Saskatchewan, Mr. Brown said: "We don't get them all. Sometimes it just isn't profitable for them to locate here." Attracting new industries required more than Liberal party breast-beating, he said.

Wilf Gardiner (L — Melville) moved the opposition's traditional want-of-confidence motion in the throne speech debate, and the spring election in the province is "the only way the socialist government in this province can rectify the situation that exists and save the province of further damage to the province.

The Quebec legislature went into special committee to work on their drawing of Quebec's electoral map despite protests of Daniel Johnson, Union Nationale opposition leader, that debate on unemployment was more pressing.

At Halifax a prepaid medical care plan and a portable pension plan for Nova Scotia were recommended by Michael J. Macdonald, New Democratic Party leader.

He said a pension plan to cover every citizen would increase individual consuming power by putting into circulation money now in banks. The medical care plan, should be similar to one introduced in Saskatchewan last year.

FEARS RUN HIGH OF NEW SHOCKS IN BARCE AREA

New Tremors Felt In Disaster Area

BENGASI, Libya (Reuters)—Fears ran high here today following new tremors Friday night at the disaster area of Barce, shattered by an earthquake Thursday that killed about 300 persons and left 12,000 homeless.

Friday night's tremors caused no further casualties or damage at Barce, a town of 10,000 persons about 60 miles from here where almost all buildings have been destroyed.

However, seismologists predicted Thursday's quake was only the forerunner of others predicted for February.

Barce is centred in the same North African earthquake belt where the Moroccan town of Agadir was destroyed four years ago with the loss of hundreds of lives.

A Libyan government communique issued Friday said rescue operations at Barce have been completed and that a report on the situation will be issued following a visit to the province Sunday by Premier Mohammed Othman.

PRAISE AIR EFFORT

The government praised the work of the RAF and the United States air force, which swung into action to fly in medicines, supplies and personnel into Barce immediately after the earthquake struck the region.

The RAF ferried in tons of supplies and evacuated hundreds of refugees while planes from the USAF base at Wheelus, near Tripoli, flew in a complete field hospital.

More than 200 bodies had been removed from the rubble of houses in the centre of the city, and British observers estimated that "some 50 to 100 bodies are still to be found." As troops worked, tremors of Libya's worst earthquake could still be felt in the rubble-filled main street.

A member of a rescue medical team said: "The scene was beyond belief. Whole families were found in the same room just as they sat down to eat."

British troops sprung white tape across the main shopping streets of Barce to mark off areas of possible danger, ous task of combing the ruins.

Rescue workers said nearly 80 per cent of the town's buildings were destroyed. The only public structure still fit for use were a church and a police station.

Near a fallen wall of the local government headquarters in an old Turkish fort, a police station clock was stopped at 7:18—the time the earthquake hit the town Thursday.

One or two families crouched patiently in doorways near their ruined homes but most of the homeless were housed in tents and American army tents.

Bar Russians From Entering West Berlin

BERLIN (AP)—United States authorities today ordered four busloads of Soviet military personnel from entering West Berlin. The move apparently was to bar Communist wall dividing the city.

The Russians were on their way to the Soviet war memorial in West Berlin for a wreath-laying ceremony in connection with Red Army day.

A U.S. spokesman said the buses were stopped at the request of British authorities, who would not allow the Soviets through the Russians that military personnel going to the war memorial would have to pass through bridge checkpoint in the British sector.

The British sector checkpoint provides the shortest and most direct route to the memorial near the Brandenburg gate.

The buses were held up by American military police at the checkpoint and the four buses turned back, drove to the Sandkrug bridge checkpoint and were allowed to pass through.

Tension Lessens, Now Is No Time To Take A-Arms

— Green

External Affairs Chief Defends Govt. Policy

VANCOUVER (CP) — External Affairs Minister Green says it would be unwise for Canada to rush into nuclear arms at a time of lessening world tension.

Addressing a Vancouver Gordon Progressive Conservative nominating convention Friday night at which he was unopposed as the party's candidate in the April 8 federal election, Mr. Green made a far-ranging defence of Prime Minister Diefenbaker's "wait and see" attitude toward nuclear armament and asked:

"At a time when there is less tension in the world, what sort of a lead would Canada be giving if it rushed to get nuclear weapons?"

If 10 or 15 more countries got nuclear arms Green would be 10 or 15 times more chance of nuclear war.

"The Canadian people must decide in this election whether the decisions affecting Canada are to be made in Canada or somewhere else," Mr. Green said.

Canada was recognized as a leader in trying to bring sanity back to the world.

Mr. Green accused national Liberal leader Pearson of doing a "flip-flop" over defence. A few months ago Mr. Pearson had said Canada should be against the spread of nuclear weapons."

"Now, just five weeks ago when he thought it would get him a few more votes, he was trying to get Canada to take nuclear weapons with the assistance of the U.S."

Mr. Green denied charges that Canada is not living up to its commitments. Canada was one of the most heavily armed 10 countries in the world, spending hundreds of millions of dollars on defence each year.

Pearson had been forced by government had never hesitated in seeing that the country's defences were advanced "and that will be the position after the election."

ACCEPTS CHALLENGE

VANCOUVER (CP)— T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, Friday accepted a challenge to a television debate from Tom Kent, an aide to Liberal Leader Lester Pearson who has been brought into the Vancouver-Burnaby riding to contest the federal seat. Mr. Douglas, recalling that he had defeated Mr. Pearson's challenge to Mr. Pearson, said I am accepting Kent only with the understanding that it does not let Pearson off the hook."

Drew Contracts To Show Money Owed to Firm

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A former bookkeeper for Mid-Erie Acceptance Corporation Limited, a firm placed into receivership Nov. 17, 1961, testified Friday that a number of fictitious contracts were drawn up to show the firm was owed money.

Norma Martin appeared at the trial of Harold Arnold Williams of London, president of the acceptance firm. He has pleaded not guilty to five charges involving forgery and false statements.

They include a charge of circulating or publishing a prospectus that he knew to be false, with the intent to induce persons to become shareholders of Mid - Erie Acceptance Corporation Limited.

Miss Martin described as fictitious two cheques totalling $48,353, drawn by Williams furniture House from the Bank of Montreal Aug. 18, 1958, payable to Mid-Erie. She said the cheques contained the signature of Williams, who was also president of the furniture house.

She said other transactions the same day included a $48,353 cheque drawn by Mid-Erie from the Bank of Montreal, payable to Gladstone Motors, and three cheques totalling $48,353, drawn by Gladstone Motors from the Bank of Montreal, payable to Williams Furniture House.

Miss Martin also testified she transferred a total of $62,259 in fictitious individual accounts to a car lot and two auto brokerage firms, although none owned Mid-Erie money. She said she turned the information over to the Ontario Securities Commission.

SEEK CUBAN SUGAR

JAKARTA (Reuters) — The trade ministry said today the Indonesian government is holding discussions with a Cuban official here concerning the possibility of importing raw sugar from Cuba. If an agreement is reached it will mark the start of trade relations between the two countries.

Washington Shrugs Off Threats As Usual Red Army Day Bluster

WASHINGTON (AP) — Official Washington has shrugged off Russia's new missile flexing over Cuba as "blast and bluster" propaganda.

The usual Reds from Soviet Defence Minister Rodion Y. Malinovsky on a march world war and nuclear devastation for the United States.

The usual type of oratory "you expect on the 45th anniversary of the Soviet armed forces," said State Secretary Dean Rusk. But speech-making, he added, isn't going to change "the combination of forces in the world."

Meanwhile, behind the closed doors of the Senate armed services committee, Defence Secretary McNamara outlined U.S. methods for carrying out American policy toward Cuba.

Afterward, Committee Chairman Richard B. Russell, Georgia Democrat, said McNamara "made it very clear that we are pursuing a policy that will result in the elimination of Castroism and communism from Cuba." But Russell declined to go into details on the grounds that it was classified.

McNamara also assured the committee, Russell said, that U.S. planes will shoot down any Cuban-based MiGs that attack U.S. planes in international air space.

"There is no doubt that in the future the American planes, if attacked, will take arms, will retaliate," Russell said.

He said the question of retaliation came up in a discussion with McNamara of the Cuban MiG attack on an American shrimp boat.

Malinovsky claimed that Russia has missiles in the earth all targets, industrial and administrative-political centres of the United States. He said, in fact, "destroy completely the countries which have made available their territories for American war bases."

Russell called it "blast and bluster" and said Soviet Premier Khrushchev's decision to withdraw missiles and bombers from Cuba proved "we now have superior nuclear delivery systems."

Radio Engineers Hear Talk on Millimeter Waves

The latest developments in the field of "Millimeter Waves" was the subject of an address by Dr. F. G. R. Warren to the Institute of Radio Engineers (I.R.E.), at the Northern Electric Belleville plant last Wednesday evening.

Dr. Warren showed, by means of graps and photographs, how millimeter waves differ in their behavior from longer electromagnetic wavelengths. The present major problem in the use of millimeter waves is the severe absorption of power which occurs when the transmission path is through moist air. It was demonstrated graphically that attennuation due to this approaches 1000 decibles per kilometer at one millimeter wavelengths. However, the attennuation curve does not follow a consistent pattern and there are gaps in the absorption pattern where it is found to transmit a band of frequencies over significant distances without severe losses of power.

Experiments have shown that the amount of absorption decreases as the density decreases. Hence, at high altitudes, attennuation would become less severe and permit the practical use of millimeter waves between high flying aircraft and also space vehicles. This fact should prove most beneficial in the future as more present use is made wavebands are becoming overcrowded and the millimeter portion of the frequency spectrum opens a large range of new frequencies.

WILL PENETRATE

By means of slides, Dr. Warren showed pictures of typical millimeter equipment which has been used to investigate properties of various materials and gases. Many waves have the ability to penetrate fairly dense plasmas and have unique reflection properties in certain materials. These reflective properties are different from those of longer wavelengths and visible light waves. Thus the unique nature of millimeter waves enables scientists to employ them in the analysis and development of materials and is another important use for these waves.

Dr. Warren described some of the components which have been developed. Antennas, feeder systems and klystrons are of extremely small size, which decreases the need for careful, precise construction. On the other hand, their small size becomes a great advantage in airborne and possible space applications.

An important problem which remains to be solved is the low power output obtained from present-day generating devices. In the region of one to four milli-meters, less than one watt of output power is being realized. More research is necessary to develop much needed high power generators.

MAKES PREDICTION

Dr. Warren predicts that probably within the next decade frequency for space vehicle communication will be found in the millimeter wareband and the design and development will make this possible.

Dr. F. G. R. Warren graduated from the University of Manitoba in 1941 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Physics and Chemistry. He entered McGill University in 1945 to study Nuclear Physics and obtained his Ph. D. in 1948. He assumed direction of RCA Victor Electronics Research Laboratory in 1952 and has specialized in development of microwave antennas and system aspects of Radar and aerial navigation. From 1954 to 1956 Dr. Warren was loaned to the Department of National Defence, RCAF where he was in charge of the Systems Engineering Group which, under the Design Authority for the Mid-Canada Line.

Since his return to RCA Victor, Dr. Warren has been responsible for the systems engineering group on the ASTRA Project and holds a number of patents in the scanning antenna field.

After an interesting and informative question period, the members and guests gave the speaker a hearty vote of thanks.

The chairman, Mr. E. V. Burkett, announced at the conclusion of the meeting that the March meeting, on March 20 will be Mr. R. E. Freeman of Computing Devices of Canada, who will speak on the subject "Exploration in Space Research".

Police Testify Accused Was Badly Injured

TORONTO (CP) — Patrick Garrity, 17, charged with non-capital murder following the stabbing of Gary Graham, 19, following a high school Christmas dance, was badly injured when arrested, police testified at a preliminary hearing Friday.

Detective David Saunders said Garrity had a scalp cut which had been mended by about 10 stitches when he first saw him in the same Toronto hospital in which Graham died from a neck wound.

He said one of Garrityx eyes was swollen and bruised and there were patches of dried blood behind his ear and under his nose.

The court was told Thursday that two of Graham's friends, Richard Lemieux, 18, and Fergus O'Connell, 20, had punched and kicked Garrity for about five minutes after he stabbed Graham.

The hearing was adjourned to Feb. 27.

Canada Made Unreliable Ally in Defence

WINNIPEG (CP) — Judy LaMarsh, Liberal member of Parliament for Niagara Falls, says indecision on the part of the Progressive Conservative party is putting Canada in the dangerous position of being an unreliable ally in the defence of North America.

She spoke Friday night at a Liberal nomination meeting which chose lawyer Barry Knowlton to contest Winnipeg North Centre in the April 8 federal election. Stanley Knowles of the New Democratic Party held the seat in the last Parliament.

Miss LaMarsh said even some of Prime Minister Diefenbaker's cabinet ministers have accused him of having a defence policy contrary to the security of Canada.

"Surely we elect a prime minister first of all to make sure we are protected," she said.

Premier Castro Denies Forces Attacked Boat

By GEORGE ARFELD

HAVANA (AP)—Cuban Premier Fidel Castro today denied that his forces had attacked an American shrimp boat. He charged instead that the United States was creating artificial incidents to justify future seizures off Cuba unsafe for navigation.

As thousands cheered, Castro read extracts from Soviet Defence Minister Rodion Malinovsky's Moscow speech Friday in which the Russian chief also warned that a U.S. attack on Cuba would touch off a third world war.

"Fidel, Khrushchev, we are with you both," roared the crowd at the mass rally—first meeting of the United Party of Socialist Revolution.

This is a Soviet-style monolithic organization which Castro has created to sustain old political parties and to rule Cuba.

Castro disclosed his new party's strength by listing members in western Cuba and that new ones are being chosen from the ranks of his regime's militants.

HITS AT PRESIDENT

During a three-hour speech which began late Friday night, Castro also charged Venezuelan President Romulo Betancourt was a "traitor . . . the partner of such chimerical puppets as (Puerto Rican Governor Luis) Munoz Marin."

Betancourt was in nearby Miami, Fla., as Castro spoke.

Castro denied U.S. charges that there had been indirect attack are the main Communist threats in Latin America.

"We do not practice subversion nor export revolution,' he told the crowd.

Santa Claus Murder Trial Interrupted

MONTREAL (CP)—The Santa Claus murder trial has been abruptly interrupted by the illness of a juror.

Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet adjourned until Monday the trial of Georges Marcotte, 34, accused of being the man in the Santa Claus suit who slew two policemen during a bank robbery, after learning that Jury Paul E. Gaudreau had suffered an attack of numbness in the right hand.

In another twist to the case, defence lawyer Trajan Constantin died a petition in superior court for summonses against Mr. Justice Ouimet, Crown Prosecutor Claude Wagner, and Crown witness Jean-Paul Fournel.

Mr. Constantin represented Fournel in the early stages of the trial, but has since switched to act as "consultant" to Marcotte's lawyer-of-record, Yves Mayrand.

Fournel, 40, and Jules Reeves, 29, are accused along with Marcotte of capital murder in the shooting of the two policemen in suburban St. Laurent Dec. 16, when a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce was robbed. Their trial is scheduled for March 28. Fournel has testified under protection of the court that Marcotte was the killer of the policemen.

Sadly remembered by Earl, Mabel and family.

McDONALD — In loving memory of our dear father and grandpa, who died accidentally February 24th, 1961.

God, a good, but not forgotten,
That day will never be forgotten,
Memories linger ever thinking,

And every time we think of him,
We may think the more.

But they little know the sorrow,
That lies within our heart concealed,
Sadly missed and ever remembered by Mom, Dad and family.

LOCK — In loving memory of a dear wife, mother and grandmother Minnie Lough who passed away February 24, 1962.

God saw that she was suffering,
That she suffer hard in climb,
So He closed her weary eyelids,
And whispered peace divine.

Now in the happiness hills of God,
By the valley of rest,
Some time we know we know not when,
We will meet our loved one again.
—Lovingly remembered by husband, sons, daughters, sons-in-law and grandchildren.

AKEY — In loving memory of a dear father and grandpa Percy Wellington who passed away February 23rd, 1962.

Time has not dulled the longing,
Nor healed the sore heart-wound,
We shall say our grief is lessened,
Though the smile of sympathy and sorrow
Opens Deeply the pain of years.
—Ever remembered by his wife Lena, son Max, Flo and family.

AKEY — In loving memory of Percy Akey who passed away February 23rd, 1962.

Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Tears of sorrow fall unseen,
For memory keeps you ever near us,
Though you have died one year ago.

And Still, Motorists Hit Them

The warning features noted by the lines and special lettering are only those which were added for the 1962-63 winter maintenance operations of the Department of Highways, Ontario. A host of other warning lights have been standard equipment for a long time—Photo by Department of Highways, Ontario.

"People are killed every winter as the result of striking departmental snowplows, despite the many precautions taken expressly to avoid such accidents", states Highway Minister MacNaughton.

Commenting on some of the extra warning features added to the snowplows for this winter's operations, the Minister observed: "The lengths to which the Department has gone to safeguard motorists from colliding with its vehicles engaged in winter maintenance would be amusing if it were not so deadly serious — in the literal sense."

Over the years, more and more warning lights have been added to the snowplows, the most noteworthy being the Flashing Blue Light, adopted in 1954. This winter, on most of the more heavily travelled sections of King's Highways, a motorist overtaking a plow from the rear is faced with no less than 10 warning lights: a flashing blue light mounted high, an amber light mounted low, and eight other lights.

"I don't see what more the Department can do to keep people from striking the Department's snowplows," Mr. MacNaughton commented. "We can only appeal to motorists everywhere to use ordinary care and common sense in the winter months and to Watch For The Flashing Blue Light! Instruct motorists do so these needless accidents, many of them fatal, will continue to happen".

United States Still Trying To Work Out Nuclear Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. disarmament chief William C. Foster leaves for Geneva tonight and an apparently forlorn attempt to bring about an East-West treaty to outlaw nuclear testing.

Although the United States offered another concession on its stand, Russia refused Friday to increase its offer of two or three on-site inspections, and broke off the three-nation talks. The United States had banked most of its hopes for progress in three three-way discussions.

Thus the stage was set for an expected propaganda battle in the full 17-nation Geneva disarmament conference. Foster plans to present the U.S. case there.

Friday night, the United States disclosed it had told the Russians it might agree to only seven on-the-spot inspections a year provided the Russians agree to "meaningful" inspection procedures.

Even if the Russians do an about face and agree to the latest U.S. demands, a test ban treaty could face rough going in the U.S. Senate. A two-thirds Senate majority is required to ratify American adherence to a treaty.

Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, assistant Senate Democratic leader and chairman of the Senate disarmament subcommittee, has served notice that any treaty providing fewer than eight inside-Russian inspections a year could face difficulty ratifying in the Senate. A number of senators say the figure should be higher than that.

Friday night, state secretary Rusk issued a conference on international affairs in Cincinnati that the U.S. continues to press for a test ban treaty because "we believe that the leaders of the Soviet Union—if not of Communist China—recognize a common interest with the rest of us in avoiding a nuclear holocaust."

Firemen Raise $867 to Fight Dystrophy

Firefighters in Hastings and Prince Edward counties successfully joined in recent weeks to fight a different kind of battle.

The mutual aid organization — the firefighting complex which includes every fire department in both counties — rolled out to canvass funds for the Ontario-wide campaign against muscular dystrophy.

Yesterday, Belleville fireman Ted Wessels, who organized the local fund-drive with Firemen Norman Wessels also reported plans were being made already for next year's campaign.

"We are hoping next time to organize a tag day", he said.

Twenty Facing Murder Charges Out on Bail

HAILEYBURY, Ont. (CP)—Twenty independent settlers held here on charges of non-capital murder were released Friday night on bail of $5,000 each in the form of two sureties for $2,500.

The men were charged with three counts each of non-capital murder after a clash near Kapuskasing, 111 miles north, in which three striking loggers were killed and nine others wounded.

Insp. Herby Purdy of the provincial police said the bail was provided by "farmers from Hearst to Kapuskasing"—communities along the Trans-Canada Highway in Northern Ontario.

The strike, one of the roughest in Canada in years, ended last weekend when some 1,500 members of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers Union (CLC) voted to return to work at Kapuskasing, Smooth Rock Falls and Longlac, Ont., while arbitration boards settle the issues at stake.

The fatal clash occurred at Camp Six Siding, 37 miles west of Kapuskasing, when a mob of strikers raided a settlers' camp in an apparent attempt to knock over piles of logs stacked by the settlers.

BLOCK ROADS

The strikers had earlier blocked roads leading to the Kapuskasing mill at Opasatika, Fails Power and Paper Company, preventing settlers from delivering wood they had cut on Crown land for sale to the company.

Most of the men charged with murder are members of the Valiquette family, one of several co-operative settlements of farmers in the area who supplement their harvest income by cutting logs on Crown land in the winter for sale to the pulpwood company.

Friday, two more union members were charged with rioting at Kapuskasing, bringing to 242 the number of strikers charged as a result of the Feb. 11 raid.

The two were Dave Tremblay of Val Rita, who were arrested at Opasatika and Leo Dulmette when they left a hospital Friday after being treated for gunshot wounds.

They were released on $200 cash bail. The loggers will be back April 18 in the theatre at Kapuskasing, about 85 miles northwest of Timmins.

POPE VISITS SEMINARY

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John left Vatican City today and spent 90 minutes visiting the major Roman seminary of St. John in Lateran. It was his annual visit on the feast day of the Madonna of Faith to whom the pontiff is especially devoted.

No Trade War, Six vs. Seven, Is Foreseen

BRUSSELS (AP)—The Common Market does not anticipate a trade war with the British-led European Free Trade Association commonly known as the Outer Seven.

Rather, the impression prevailing among six Common Market countries is that the Outer Seven are moving toward Inner Six's way of operating.

The Outer Seven—concerned originally with a tariff system that has turned to agricultural problems, and are beginning to pay attention to a co-ordination of economic policy. It is clear the Outer Seven—Britain, Austria, Denmark, Norway, Portugal, Sweden and Switzerland—are keeping tariffs in line with those of the Common Market.

The Common Market countries cut their tariffs with one another 50 per cent July 1, 1962, and have proposed a common outer tariff, and no more tariffs among themselves by Dec. 31, 1966.

Common Market members are France, West Germany, Belgium, Italy, Holland and Luxembourg.

PLAN TO END TARIFFS

The Outer Seven members also plan to end tariffs on trade inside the group by the end of 1966. As yet they have no plans for a common tariff on trade outside the group.

The Outer Seven's internal tariff cuts will mean only a small part of their trade problems. For instance, Switzerland's foreign trade is more than 60 per cent with Common Market countries and less than 20 per cent with Outer Seven members.

Austria, which has 10 per cent of its foreign trade with Outer Seven members and more than 50 per cent with West Germany alone, is seeking associate membership in the Common Market.

France favors further trade-easing measures within the Common Market before opening the door to additional members. This seems to exclude for the present any British bid to market with part or all of the other European trade bloc.

KENNEDYS PLAN TOUR

ROME (Reuters) — President and Mrs. Kennedy will visit Rome, Florence, Naples and Milan in May, the Roman Catholic newspaper Il Quotidiano says. President Kennedy was invited to visit Italy by Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani who was in Washington in January.

Belleville Student Selected For Special Work in Jamaica

MISS DIANE BURROWS

Miss Diane Burrows, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Burrows, has been selected by the Canadian University Service Overseas for a year's voluntary social service work in a reform school in Jamaica. Diane spent last summer studying mental illness at the Ontario Hospital in Toronto, and plans to complete her post-graduate work in the School of Social Studies at the University of Toronto upon her return from Jamaica.

The Canadian University Service Overseas (CUSO) is sponsored by private citizens and business organizations and is at present conducting a fund-raising campaign to provide travelling expenses for qualified college graduates who have volunteered their services to aid underdeveloped countries. The university student candidates are carefully selected by staff selection committees within the universities, who forward their choices to CUSO headquarters in Ottawa, who in turn recommend the students finally chosen to the requesting country who makes the final decision.

CUSO works through foreign governments in many cases, also in co-operation with agencies such as the Africans Can Institute, International Voluntary Services, Medico, etc., to assist in the placement of personnel. Volunteers are given an orientation program in Canada before leaving for their jobs.

"The students serve and learn at the same time," says Dr. Geoffrey Andrew, executive director of Canadian Universities Foundation. "From the Canadian point of view, it is an investment in experience. When our young people come back from a year or two of living and working in an underdeveloped country, they will be far more valuable citizens at home."

Thirty-eight young people will go from Ontario universities for foreign service in Ceylon, India, Jamaica, Trinidad, British Guiana, British Honduras, Dominica, St. Vincent, St. Kitts, and Africa.

Canada Facing Serious Crisis Says Martin

REGINA (CP)—Paul Martin said Friday the federal election must give the Liberal party a House of Commons majority because the Canadian parliamentary system is equipped to handle only majority government.

The Liberal member for Essex East in the last Parliament and a former health minister said in an interview that Canada is facing "the most serious crisis in Canadian political history apart from wartime."

He said the great issue in the election campaign is the need for stability in government. The Liberals could provide this.

The Progressive Conservative party, showing what he termed political bankruptcy unmatched in parliamentary history, had discredited itself in the eight months of government leading up to its defeat in Commons.

"The people of Canada will discredit them too," said Mr. Martin.

He said the people of Quebec are no different from people in the rest of Canada and they want strong government. They would not stand for minority government.

In the absence of progress on world disarmament the western nations, Canada included, must maintain deterrent forces balancing those of the eastern block, he said.

to the commission, likely to be supported by at least a part of the U.S. bourbon industry, that the U.S. tariff on Scotland's finest is to be reduced to $1.02 from $1.25 a gallon next July. If Canadian whisky is hurting American bourbon producers, what about a lowered tariff on scotch whisky?

The Canadian charge is that many of these U.S. whisky-makers have a finger in the import trade of scotch and therefore won't attack this competition, concentrating all the artillery on imports from Canada, produced mainly by Distillers-Corporation-Seagram's Ltd. and Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts Ltd.

First some commission staff experts are wondering about the merits of the Publicker petition, particularly in the light of the commission's findings in the lumber issue. The commission rejected American lumber industry demands for higher tariffs on the grounds that the industry didn't prove their troubles were "in major part" the result of American tariff concessions to Canada.

This proof is essential for escape-clause tariff relief under President Kennedy's Trade Expansion Act which went into operation last October. Publicker says its trouble results "in major part" from tariff concessions to Canada, but its petition emphasizes it has a lot of other troubles.

Never Wanted To Bear Any Children

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Supreme Court was told Friday a woman who is suing her husband for custody of their three children told a friend before the marriage break-up—she had never wanted to bear children.

Dr. Joseph E. Gendron, a Cobourg surgeon, testified that Elizabeth Mary Moloney said she didn't know why they had married. Dr. Gendron has known the husband, John Patrick Moloney, of suburban Etobicoke, since they were in university together.

The doctor said he later told Mr. Moloney he thought Mrs. Moloney was not well and might have delusions of persecution.

Mrs. Moloney, a Sarnia high school teacher since her separation, told the court she left her husband because he insisted she undergo psychiatric treatment to heal their marital differences.

Mrs. Moloney has the children—three girls, 9, 8 and 6—with her in Sarnia. A housekeeper looks after them while she teaches.

In his countersuit, Mr. Moloney is seeking custody of the children. He told the court he wants his wife to return and establish a home for the children.

He claims she would rather become a teaching contract than a marriage contract.

Lions Would Give Village Arena Site

FRANKFORD—Reference in a report of a meeting of Frankford Village Council, in Thursday's issue of The Ontario Intelligencer, to be held for which the Lions Club is asking $7,500 left an erroneous impression. This is not the land on which it is planned to build a new arena, but adjoining property. If the village agrees to take over the site for the arena, it will be turned over to the village for nothing. It is proposed to use the adjoining property, for which $7,500 is being asked, for a housing development.

An error also occurred in reference to the cost of "artificial lights" being $40,000 to $50,000. These figures are the estimated cost of installing artificial ice equipment.

A Reasonable Solution

The proof of the pudding is in the eating thereof, but Premier John Robarts appears to have served a nourishing, if not a mouth-watering, dish in his proposals for revision of the province's educational grants.

Most people, Protestants as well as Catholics, will be pleased to learn that separate elementary schools are to get a better deal in connection with their share of school taxes paid by corporations. Relating the division of this tax to the division of residential and farm assessment between public school and separate school supporters makes good sense. Premier Robarts admits that there will be "inaccuracies" in this system, but his plan seems to make ample provision for adjustment of inequities.

It is in the best interests of society as a whole that separate school students should enjoy facilities equal to those provided for public school pupils.

While Catholics will welcome this new policy, they may be disappointed at Premier Robarts' rejection of extending the separate school system to secondary schools. Nevertheless, if they can bring themselves to forget their own personal desires, we think they will be forced to admit Premier Robarts has taken a logical, and indeed the only practical, stand.

The Unconverted

There has been a mass exodus of Negro students from Bulgaria, one of the communist satellites.

"We categorically declare there is more racial discrimination against Negroes under communism than there could be in a capitalist country," asserted one group of students, on reaching the West.

Ken Pritchard, Canadian Press writer, calls the development "a fortuitous but considerable ideological victory" for the West.

This is true, but the nature of this victory may be misinterpreted.

We would be deluding ourselves if we regarded this as an indication that communism fosters, or even officially tolerates, racial discrimination.

We would be closer to the truth if we concluded that the Bulgarians, after long years under the yoke of a communist dictatorship, have not assimilated the ideology of the ruling clique. This may be unfortunate in this single field of race relations, but definitely encouraging in its other facets.

Another Cuba?

President Kennedy has promised President Romulo Betancourt of Venezuela full co-operation in the fight against the "all-out campaign of international communists, aided especially by their Cuban allies" who apparently plan to depose the present Venezuelan government. The promise was offered at the conclusion of a two-day visit by Betancourt to Washington.

It may be true the communists are represented, or even dominant, among the group threatening to oust Betancourt. But it is also true that Venezuela, a wealthy country, has some of the wealthiest and some of the poorest people of the world, living side by side. In these circumstances, no law except that of a government determined to effect a redistribution of the wealth, will be willingly tolerated by the people.

One would have more faith in the future of peace, and of capitalism, in Venezuela if President Kennedy had promised aid to the rebels, or to Betancourt, on condition that drastic measures be taken to build in Venezuela a better balanced socio-economic structure.

Gulp

A Chinese medicine man operating in Bankok is selling fresh cobra livers as a general cure-all and tonic. Apparently a bit of a showman, he wears the snakes about, and extracts the liver from the living snake under the eyes of the person who is supposed to eat it.

The normal treatment begins with a good shot of local rice whisky. Then the patient holds his mouth open while the medicine man throws the fresh liver in, like a basketball player scoring points. The final phase of the treatment is another shot of whisky.

One is hesitant to comment, of course, on the practise of medicine in Canada or elsewhere. But one might suggest that this sounds like a pretty effective treatment. The equivalent of shock therapy, perhaps.

Fiction lags after truth, invention is unfruitful, and imagination cold and barren.—Edmund Burke.

Cannot Change Horses In Midstream—Diefenbaker Says

By RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — What does political betrayal do to a man?

What scars have been burned into the heart and mind of Prime Minister Diefenbaker in these past three weeks when he so desperately fought for his political life against conspiracy of deceit and double-dealing?

These are some of the questions being asked by those men who remained loyal to the Prime Minister and closed ranks around him in the grim political cloak-and-dagger blood feud over the Federal Conservative leadership.

Some of them are concerned that the Prime Minister, overwhelmed by the ingratitude of certain of his colleagues whom he led out of the obscurity of Parliamentary Opposition, might suddenly, at any moment, turn his back on the whole sorry mess and walk away from it.

If it had not been for him and whatever it was he had in 1957 to break the Liberal 22-year winning streak, and then go on, incredibly, to win those record 208 Commons seats in the '58 election, and then never have reached their positions of power from where they could plan the "second revolution" for his destruction.

THE MARTYR

If they don't know that everything they are — or were — politically, they own to him, then he did.

Those who have talked to him in recent days will tell you that he is acutely aware that, without him, they might have been nowhere.

And that they may be headed back now to the same nowhere of the political wilderness is perhaps more their fault than his.

Or at least, that is the way he sees it.

Having ridden his coattails to the High Places of political power, they are in the particular peril than they know of suddenly finding this free ride finished.

The final realization that the Prime Minister perhaps emotionally crushed by what he almost certainly must regard as treachery by the trusted, in a bleak and desolate moment might simply say: "Very well, I made them in the first place . . . let's see what they can do without me."

And with that bitterness in his heart, simply take his leave into political retirement.

They asked for his resignation — even contemplated it in the tactical enemies, according to self-confessed co-conspirator Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson, to drive him from public life — so why not let him leave?

Nobody — most of all the Prime Minister himself — has suggested that he is some coldly lonely moment he will throw up his hand and simply quit.

But there always remains the possibility that if pushed too hard, it could happen. And that is keeping even the conspirators awake these nights.

EMOTIONS REVERSED

In the last few weeks there has been almost a complete reversal of the field.

The men who plotted to "Dump Dief" in the belief that he was possible only to lose with him, are now convinced that it is all but impossible to win without him.

It is too late to switch leaders — time for that ran out on the Conservatives at the February rally here in the Capital when they gave the Prime Minister the ringing, unanimous endorsation.

And anyway, the voters are so utterly confused perhaps resentful and even alarmed at the uncertain election prospects ahead, as to be incapable of rallying around anybody but a nationally known political figure.

And there are only two of those in the room.

John Diefenbaker and Mike Pearson.

So like it or not — and the party's still restive "rebels" most certainly do not — the Conservatives have no choice.

It's John Diefenbaker or disaster.

It might even be John Diefenbaker and disaster.

For it is now far too late to run in a substitute. And if they tried it, possible disaster with Diefenbaker would be certain destruction with any eleventh hour emergency conscript.

THE YOUNG MAN

It must be a painful irony to the conspirators who organized that suicidally naive "palace revolution," that the man they plotted to destroy has now become indispensable in any hope of salvaging anything in the election.

It turns out that the man they did not want is running as the underdog, with who-can-guess how much public sympathy behind him.

The detractors went too far overboard.

Criticism turned to ridicule.

Those who wanted to "Ditch Dief" — and they have had help on and off Parliament Hill and on both sides of the border — made the astounding error of lampooning some of his physical aspects.

In crashingly bad taste that could only have been expected to arouse deep resentment, aside reference to Mrs. Diefenbaker's health — emotional well as physical.

The whole world — and he once looked so to be on top of it — seemed to crash down on his shoulders.

It was one man, it seemed, against all the rest.

And so, out of sympathy for the underdog, people moved into his corner.

There is a small and growing cheering section rooting for him now — for the man, if not the politician — on the basis that in defeat he has found he has had enough of "shabby abuse."

Funny, too, isn't it, that the men who wanted to hound him out are scared silly now that it might be possible that he will go and leave them in the lurch.

Letter to The Editor

Supports Objection To Wrecking Y

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

I read with interest Taxpayer's letter to the editor and the answers to it. I agree with Taxpayer and Mr. Gibson in regard to the tearing down of the Y.M.C.A. on Campbell St. when it most certainly could be put to good use. According to the editor's answer and that of Merchant, I think the original meaning of Taxpayer's letter has been misconstrued. He is protesting the fact that the "Y" is going to be torn down, not the fact that we require more parking space.

The remarks on Front St. have been compaining bitterly about business being driven to the Plaza. This is quite possible although I don't think the lack of parking space in the downtown area is the reason for this. I think if the merchants would look about their sales methods they might find one of the problems.

I have been horrified at the way some of them treat a person handig a customer. My husband and I had occasion to enquire at a furniture store about a particular make of furniture. This store sells that particular make, so the sales clerk proceeded to run it down. We left the store wondering exactly what that was the type of furniture we wished to purchase.

I had been misled in the goods store last week, and the impression I got from the sales clerk was that I wasn't Mrs. Gotrocks so why wait on me. One time I went into this store and waited twenty minutes while the clerks waited on a customer whom they knew, while I stood being ignored. If Merchant feels I have an axe to grind, he is wrong.

I don't expect the sales clerk to fall over me, but I do expect to be treated as a customer should. So, merchants, maybe the business problem is right under your nose and you can't see it.

In regard to the Y question, perhaps it is too late to do anything about it, but I feel it is a waste to tear down a perfectly good building when there are so many old eyesores around that should be torn down. Granted we need a bigger Y, and it will most certainly service the east end of the city but what about the west and north ends? I am sure there are many in these areas that use the wonderful facilities of the present Y, but will they continue to use these facilities once the new Y is built? I would be very hesitant to let a small child go such a distance on a bus, supervised or not, and I am sure there are many families with the same way. Also, I am sure that parents can't be driving up to the new Y, as some of them possibly don't have cars. Until such time as facilities can be provided for the north and west, why not leave the old Y alone, and then probably it could be turned into a YWCA.

It seems to me there are properties on Front St. and vicinity that could be used for parking, if there is really a parking problem. The old fire hall on upper Front has been condemned for years, as well as the building on 1 W. Moira. Also the old Foley foundry which was burned out two years ago is left standing, and for what purpose? What is going to happen to these places. I do think these things should be cleaned up and put to use before a useful building, in good shape as the present Y is, demolished.

Belleville, is supposed to mean "Beautiful City." With the above mentioned eye sores around, I hardly think beautiful is the word for it. Actually, all the new modern buildings in the world won't bring beauty back to Belleville. It is the people who live in Belleville that will do it.

An Average Citizen.

20 YEARS AGO

February 23rd, 1943

Interesting index, of conditions will always be found in the reports of police departments, and the 1942 statement of Chief Constable R. Walter Probert for the city of Belleville naturally contains a number of enlightening facts. This is his first report since his appointment to the position of Chief Constable following the death of former Chief Constable Jas. Kidd.

Chief Constable Probert is able to present a statement of which should be encouraging to the citizens. The report shows a marked decrease in practically all offences, there being only 28 cases under 16 years of age coming to the attention of the police court. As well, it shows a slight fall in the number of all cases coming before the court, a total of 756, or 14 less than in 1941.

Last week the winners of the Poultry Project sponsored by the Kiwanis Club, were awarded their prizes when they were guests of the local club. The school children were brought to the city and entertained at a theatre party following which Cathy Theatre, after which they were taken to the Kiwanis Centre on Dundas Street, where light refreshments were served and a social hour spent. The Kiwanis Queens ably assisted the male members by preparing and serving the delicious lunch. There were 10 schools which took part in the project and 10 pupils from each school were provided with 25 chicks, ten pounds of brooder mash, a brooder house and other accessories for the raising of the chicks.

The Hon. Harold Parliament was in town today.

The supper served by the Women's Parochial Guild of St. Thomas' Church in the Parish House was largely attended and a most enjoyable affair. The supper was served in the lower assembly room, and those in the upper assembly room enjoyed a social evening.

40 YEARS AGO

A $100,000 fire occurred in Trenton last night when the Wesley Saylor block at the corner of Elgin and Front Streets was completely gutted in a fire which spread down Dundas street ravaging some 20 stores and dwellings. The Belleville fire department was called and rendered good assistance. The fire was discovered by Mrs. R. Anderson, a blind woman, whose cries awakened neighbors who carried her to safety.

Miss Jean McIntosh made her initial professional debut as an elocutionist before a highly appreciative audience in the city hall last evening. Miss McIntosh was assisted by Mr. Frank Oldfield, baritone, and Mr. Ernest Wheatley, pianist. Miss McIntosh's mastery of dialects and adaptation of masculine impersonations were outstanding. Belleville is indeed fortunate to be able to claim Miss McIntosh as one of her daughters.

This is an increase in attendance over last year. A motion prevailed that the matter of building a new arena be left over till spring and the preparation of plans be given attention by the Sites and Building Committee.

Reheating Fat Can Cause Very Unpleasant Flavor

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Sir: What harm can come from using bacon grease for cooking, such as in frying eggs or potatoes?

My husband doesn't like the taste or odor of oil and I don't like vegetable shortening. I do very little frying, but when I do, I use bacon grease which I keep refrigerated.

My sister says bacon drippings are dangerous to health.—Mrs. J. B.

Personally I don't like bacon grease and we don't use it at our house but I can't say that it is dangerous to health. I'll give you both sides of the case, so you do as you like.

Your sister might have two points in mind. First, the reheating of fat can cause rancidity and unpleasant flavor — but this applies more to oils, since I presume you would use the bacon drippings only once anyway.

Second, there's the matter of saturated fats, as opposed to polyunsaturated, and the effect, still open to plenty of questions, on hardening of the arteries. The saturated (mainly animal) fats seem to have more influence in raising blood cholesterol levels.

Aside from these points, I don't know why you shouldn't use bacon drippings. The cholesterol problem could be well applied, for example, to butter, and I gather that frying food in butter or lard remains a gastronomic favorite whatever the cholesterol aspect may be.

Finally, your husband is healthy, has no heart trouble, no high blood pressure and isn't obese. I'll just have to leave it to you and your family tastes as to what you use for frying.

Dear Sir: Is it really true that only avoid the cholesterol issue entirely, but also suit our taste buds to perfection by using these greaseless frying pans, the metal being permanently coated with material that eliminates the need of any kind of oil or fat for frying.

Dear Dr. Molner: When I am away from home I use an electric hot plate but would prefer a small electric sterilizer for my insulin needle and syringe. Where can I get it?—Mrs. F.E.

From medical supply houses. Another suggestion for travel is the use of disposable syringes and needles which are inexpensive and also available at supply houses.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The reason women live longer than men, that wives as a rule outlive their husbands, is pretty generally admitted to be the greater and more constant activity of women. The normal daily life of a woman is one of fairly steady motion from the time she gets up to the time she goes to bed. The meals, the tidying, bedmaking, house cleaning. Upstairs, downstairs, dozens of times a day. No matter what great changes have occurred in recent times in the conditions of living and working conditions, they haven't done much to reduce the burdens that weigh on the housewife. With all the appliances, she is still hopping from one appliance to another.

Men, on the other hand, have been liberated from steady physical activity in vast areas of the economy. They sit down to their work, in their cars. They sit down at desks. They sit all day at work benches. They sit beside computers and tools of near automation. To get some action, they bowl, or play golf. All these are considerable explosions of energy, not the steady activity for which cruel nature designed them, a million years ago, and which design fitted them until quite recently.

The men who live longest, it appears, are those who lead busy-bee lives, like the ladies.

MOVE OR NOT MOVE

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

We think of nests being built in last a few days, or a few weeks at most—and then abandoned. But a number of birds are quite devoted to their homes and as loath to give them up as some people who fight city health authorities when their tumble-down quarters in a slum district are destined to be razed to the ground. Eagles and great blue herons are noted for resisting the march of time and refusing to budge from their old homes even though the disturbing nests of their relatives have been destroyed and a skyscraper is being built on the site. Ospreys and red-shouldered hawks also keep the same nests for years, merely adding material each spring to bolster up the ancient structures. Summer after summer chimney swifts use the same chimney, barn swallows the same beam, and screech owls the same hole. In fact, as far as we can learn, most birds prefer the same location every year even if the actual home itself is a new one.

OBLIGED TO MOVE

However, for good reasons, birds are often obliged to move — sometimes right in the middle of housekeeping. When a cowbird deposits an egg in another bird's nest, the owner generally accepts it because there seems to be nothing else to do. But a few are smart enough to outwit the lazy cowbird that tries to foist baby-sitting responsibilities on to another bird. Yellow warblers frequently build a second nest right on top of the original one so as to cover up the unwanted egg. If another objectionable egg appears in the new nest, as is sometimes the case, these clever warblers occasionally put a third storey on top in order to hide it.

A timid bird will desert home if a supposed enemy (possibly a human being) is known to have discovered the nest. One of the first to move if at all interfered with is the catbird. Unless the season is too far advanced, it will start all over again in a more secluded spot. The majority of birds give up immediately if one of their eggs has been punctured by a squirrel, chipmunk, or house wren; many will move and start anew.

Quite a few kinds bring up more than one family in a season, most of them moving their location somewhat for the second nesting. The song sparrow prefers the first nest on the ground, hidden by dead leaves and grass; the later nest is generally a few feet up in a conifer or a bush with plenty of foliage.

Canadian Fashion & Fad

By pegg rogers

WHAT TO LOOK FOR AT FASHION SHOWS

Well, here we go again, with another round of Fashion shows. Many of us will attend at least one, either as invited guests, or as part of our contribution to our favorite service organization or charity. Fashion shows, as money-raising projects, are now part of the Canadian scene. They are more fun than bazaars and, except for the committee members, far less work for the whole sponsoring organization. A number go to the show wearing blinkers. Usually, most of those attending learn very little, because they don't know what to look for.

Whether the show you attend features fashions from a small specialty shop or a large departmental store, generally you can be sure that the styles shown will be interesting and well-accessorized. This is the store's opportunity to really show you their very best fashions. Most retailers realize that all this "public" costs money. They are prepared for reductions on the fashions shown after all the major clothes have been worn. They spend time and money fitting the models. The fashions, if shown outside the store, must be covered by insurance in case of loss or damage. In order to give a professional background to the show, the store has spent money on setting the stage.

What do the fashion stores expect to get out of this? They hope to hold your undivided attention for at least one hour. They hope that you will be caught in the spirit of buying their fashions. They hope that one coat, or dress, or suit, will snare your memories so that when you next go shopping you will visit their store. They would like to teach you, and to show you, what to look for in this season's offerings. They also hope that the general picture of fashion, at its best, will remain in your mind long enough to influence you in choosing becoming fashions.

In order to learn something from fashion shows, the audience must contribute more than a glassy-eyed stare and a patter of polite applause. It is necessary to watch, with new fashion in mind, while listening to the commentary. The showing may emphasize color, silhouette or fabric. By listening intently and looking closely you can spot quickly the real point.

Each fashion show has a "gimmick" or two. These are the "fun" fashions, such as avant-garde sportswear, or an odd-ball silhouette, presented to enliven the show, or to attract to show that the world of fashion is not static, but subject to change and outside influence. Don't ignore the "gimmicks." Look what happened to stretch tights or man-tailored shirts, both "gimmicks" at one time, but now considered classics.

If you have a question on fashion, write to Pegg Rogers care of the Ontario Intelligencer Front Street, Belleville.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

YOLANDA R. — It's my life and my sister doesn't understand it.

MRS. D. I. — She's making a terrible mistake, wasting her charms,

YOLANDA R. — My sister has a lot of old-fashioned ideas about men and she seizes upon every opportunity to lecture me. She knows, I don't agree that a girl must "save herself" for the one she intends to marry. On the contrary, I believe I'll make a more successful marriage if I have a few premarital sex experiences.

Right now I'm seeing two fellows. One of them appealed to me so strongly that I've accompanied him to his apartment. With the other I'm much further than some heavy necking. In this way I'll really learn all about love before I marry, and neither my husband nor I will be disappointed the way many newlyweds are.

MRS. D. I. — After the careful upbringing our parents gave us, Yolanda must be out of her mind to think she'll find happiness by living an immoral life.

The trouble is she's been listening to those artists and beatniks. Yet she can't show me one of that bunch who has wound up really happy and healthy, surrounded by a loving family, the way my parents did, and the way I hope to turn out myself. I keep nagging Yolanda while there's still time for her to stop her madness. Even now, I wonder whether a really fine young man will ever look at her as his wife. Wouldn't it serve her right if the fellow she likes best should be one of the "old-fashioned" ones who wants to marry a virgin?

THE COUNCIL: Those who condemn the "old-fashioned" codes justify their stand by claiming that — choose one or more — times, values, codes, viewpoints, practices have changed. Our overall and overall rebuttal: True, but people have'nt.

And in particular men still have the old primeval urge to roam, women, the natural home-makers and mothers, have an old built-in yearning to settle down. Marriage, as we know it, insists on the "old-fashioned" idea that man and woman must stay put, and must concentrate upon each other until they become, as the Bible puts it, "one flesh."

Yolanda is been listening to the wrong drums. As Mrs. I. indicates, the one man Yolanda may be contemplating like her fine as a fun-pal, but when it comes to marrying he may look out for a girl just like the gal who married dear old Dad." And that girl waited for him, not for a few premarital sex experiences.

We don't mean to go bluenose here. But we add our warning to Mrs. I.'s that it's fundamentally wrong for a girl, and the odds are against her.

In the first place, despite the testimony of the psychiatrists, any resemblance between fundamentals and sex-relating is coincidental. One form may satisfy, but the other cements! The relationship established and wife is compounded of more than desire. Also present is the sort of friendship which looks many years ahead. It is loveinked as part of a strong marriage, not a disconnected lighting-flash.

Furthermore, what's the personal feeling in Yolanda's friend's apartment, Yolanda, there's none of the relaxed and right! privacy of a bedroom for tributes to the best sex experience. Won't you be left with guilt feelings, and with a distorted idea of the sexual part of marriage? Above all, won't you be just left? We hope not. "Saving" yourself would be safer, to say the least.

INDIVIDUAL SIZED cereal boxes (empty) can be converted into playpen toys. String a few of them together and tie them across a corner. Or, for more action, tie them individually to hang down between the bars so they'll swing like miniature punching bags. Boxes are colorful, and quite different from normal playpen fare.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

QUESTION: Can you tell me what the groom's mother should wear for a 1:30 Saturday afternoon wedding in February in Norfolk, Va.? Would a pastel shade in dressy wool with matching shoes and hat and a white coat be proper? Or would it be better to wear a brocade with fur? I thank you in advance for your courtesy in considering this matter. — B. D., Belmont, Mass.

ANSWER: I'd vote in favor of the brocade, but, actually, either would be appropriate and attractive. The weather is really the deciding factor, so I'd pack both and let the weather make the final decision.

QUESTION: My husband and I are planning an Open House. We're really celebrating an anniversary, but will not mention this —to avoid having friends bring gifts. Of course, close relatives will realize this, and the time I'm wondering about is: If some should bring gifts, what is the proper thing to do? Should the gifts be opened as they're presented? I don't want to embarrass anyone. — E. H. R., Fort Erie, Ont.

ANSWER: Open the gifts privately sometime during the party. Avoid verbals! Thank the donors. This might be done while refreshments are being served in the kitchen, when guests are stashing away their coats. Gifts shouldn't, be stacked or displayed prominently and opened with any kind of fanfare. As you say, only close friends and relatives will be in connection, so the opening of gifts might be reserved for late in the evening, after most of the guests have left and only those close to you still remain.

QUERY: We are planning a 30th anniversary party for my parents and have been told it is incorrect to have a party other than on the 25th and 50th anniversaries. It will cancel my plans if it is incorrect, but would like to know for sure. — M. S., Little Ferry, N.J.

ANSWER: The 25th and 50th anniversaries are usually celebrated formally and with large parties. However, these are quite family affairs. But I still see no reason why an important milestone like the 30th anniversary shouldn't be fussed over to some extent, especially when the married couple is getting along in years. In this day of high divorce rates and marriages, it's still an anniversary worthy of thought. Why not celebrate?

Question: I am the German bride of an American, and am having difficulty with social calls made by the U.S.O. and other such agencies in the U.S.A.

In Germany, it is good manners to eat with the left hand after cutting food with the knife held in he right hand. The fork is then put down after each mouthful of meat. We also keep the left hand at the side of the plate when it is not being used to eat meat.

I have been told that in the United States it's proper to put down the knife after cutting a piece of meat and transfer the fork to the right hand to eat. While eating, the left hand is kept under the table.

Is the method I've always used wrong? — Mrs. C.Z. Fitchburg, Mass.

Answer: No, although it may seem strange to American eyes, your method here is to place the knife, blade side in, on the right of the plate and change the fork from the left to the right hand. The food then is taken on the fork and lifted to the mouth with the tines pointed up, as opposed to the European way of bringing the fork to the mouth in the left hand with the tines facing down. Either method actually is "correct," considering what we have been told and is used to. Many Americans who have travelled in Europe have adopted the Continental way of eating as more practical. Now, with so many Europeans visiting the United States as tourists, many more Americans are becoming familiar with Continental table manners. As a result, they don't seem so "strange" any more. However, the American method, with the left hand in the lap while the right does most of the work, is still standard here. Whether you want to adopt it, or continue in the European style, is a personal decision I you'll have to make yourself.

Note: Our readers send us, at 350 deg. Fahr, in buttered loaf pan. such good and tested recipes that I want to pass some on to you. Emen.

Letters: I discovered a cookie tin half full of shortbread made in 1960. It was as good as some made a week previously — E. R. W.

SCOTCH SHORTBREAD
(courtesy A.R.W.)

1 lb. (3½ cups unsifted) flour 2 oz. (½ cup) fruit sugar, ¾ lb. butter (or butter and margarine mixed).

Work all together on board until flour is absorbed. Flatten with hand to desired thickness, cut into shapes. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 15 minutes (approximately).

Answer: Thank you very much. Shortbread keeps very well if cold and tin is airtight.

Letter: I saw the request for Lemon Loaf and thought I had one — but it turned out to be orange! Could you substitute the same amount of lemon? It is a lovely recipe, almost a cake. Also Peanut Butter Slice which your grandchildren will adore - and so do grownups.

Lillian F.

ORANGE BREAD
(courtesy Lilian F.)

1 cup white sugar, ¼ cup butter, grated rind and juice of orange (lemon?), 2 eggs, ½ cup orange juice (or less lemon juice), 1½ cups flour, 1¼ tsp. baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt. Cream butter, sugar, and egg yolks. Add rind. Then add dry ingredients alternately with juice. Beat egg whites stiff and fold into mixture. Bake about 1 hour

PEANUT BUTTER SLICE
(courtesy Lilian F.)

One cup peanut butter, ½ cup brown sugar, ¼ cup corn syrup. Mix well and heat in double boiler - then add 2 cups cornflakes and 1 cup rice crispies and stir well. Put in buttered 8 x 8" pan and pat down. Top with: One cup brown sugar, 3 tablespoons cream (or top milk), 2 tablespoons butter, vanilla, salt. Boil 1 minute, beat until thick and will spread.

Answer: Thank you too, Lillian.

Letter: I see you are looking for suggestions for stew made from leftover roast meat. The main problem this presents to me is that the diluted gravy from the slices cooked meat desperately needs seasoning. My own solution is a package of one of the dry soup mixes. I particularly like the varieties of chicken soup with leftover fowl, pork or veal. The tomato vegetable soup is my own favorite and I use it not only in stews but in rice or noodle casseroles. Some extra salt is needed when using the soup mix.

Irma B.

Answer: Thanks for your resourceful idea.

XI Beta Zeta Names Executive

At a recent meeting of XI Beta Zeta held at the home of Mrs. John Pringle, the new executive was introduced as follows: president — Mrs. W. McCormick; vice-president — Mrs. G. Sine; treasurer — Mrs. H. Hosmer; recording secretary — Mrs. E. Drury; corresponding secretary — Mrs. E. James.

Mrs. D. Bateman was the speaker for the evening, her subject being, "Easy and informal" in which she discussed the importance of relaxing through various methods such as reading, listening to music, watching television, or group association which would include business contacts, social clubs and cultural organizations.

The speaker pointed out that human behavior is influenced by these "relaxation periods" to the extent that one is more composed and ready for whatever life has to offer.

The program for the next meeting, held at the home of Mrs. D. Boyce, was conducted by Mrs. B. Bishop and Mrs. W. McCormick. Their theme, "Learning to Live," showed Francesca at herself to cooking, sewing or crafts added so much to the enjoyment of life and "that anyone can love, or delight in; what we appreciate, we learn to love." The importance of physical exercise was stressed, along with the need to cultivate new interests, stimulate enthusiasm and avoid boredom.

While refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. D. Boyce, plans were finalized for the bowling party to which all chapters have been invited.

A Lift For Living

Man Has Need for Practice In Order to Live Good Life

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Our professional league baseball players are now practising in preparation for the grueling months ahead. However, most of them have "kept in practice" since the end of last season and wisely so because their playing days in a highly competitive sport are all too brief.

Eternal life is the prize of skill and co-ordination of eye and hand. "Practice makes perfect" is the old maxim which I had to copy over and over in school. Such handwriting is proof that practice does not always produce perfection. Nevertheless, in spiritual as well as athletic fields we cannot hope for more than perfection.

A once-a-month golfer is stymied when he attempts to compete with a once-a-week player. He need but glance at the fork to the right hand to eat. While eating, the left hand is kept under the table.

Answer: No, although it may seem strange to American eyes, your method here is to place the knife, blade side in, on the right of the plate and change the fork from the left to the right hand. The food then is taken on the fork and lifted to the mouth with the tines pointed up, as opposed to the European way of bringing the fork to the mouth in the left hand with the tines facing down. Either method actually is "correct," considering what we have been told and is used to. Many Americans who have travelled in Europe have adopted the Continental way of eating as more practical. Now, with so many Europeans visiting the United States as tourists, many more Americans are becoming familiar with Continental table manners. As a result, they don't seem so "strange" any more. However, the American method, with the left hand in the lap while the right does most of the work, is still standard here. Whether you want to adopt it, or continue in the European style, is a personal decision I you'll have to make yourself.

When we keep practising, there comes a point at which we gain from the drudgery of it to the joy of it.

The beginner in music would like to forego those finger exercises, but if she perseveres in trying to get the hang of those lessons, the day will come when the music "gets" her.

Simple little tunes we can pick up without much practice if we have any ear for music, but great symphonies require much living with to be enjoyed. Is it not true that our liking for the best things is usually an acquired taste? And acquired, mind you, by much practice.

But the very own pleasure but the very own pleasure is at stake in this matter of practice. Who would feel safe on a ship if the crew did no drilling and waited only the time we fire to heavy? Life bets under the berth and print rules on the walls are for the times of fire to heavy? Life bets under the berth and our property to sailors and soldiers and firemen who are trained in daily practice to do the right thing in an emergency.

MAKE GOODNESS ATTRACTIVE

The time calls for citizens to put their ideals into practice, and then keep practising them until they carry their virtues with such easy grace that they make goodness attractive to others.

My belief is that the high school youth of today have better social ideals than in my boyhood. They have more knowledge and concern fn matters of world peace, race relations and industrial co-operation. Yet we are bedevilled by juvenile delinquency, crippling strikes, war perils and other ills too numerous to mention.

One basic trouble is that we are not bringing our ideals down to earth as standards of action. An ideal is a goal toward which we push; a standard is a rule by which we walk. We preach about them. But we do not try hard enough to practise them.

If I listened just to forums on our social problems, I would fall into despair. But when I hook up my spirit is to see what good things are done in church or YMCA or YWCA or Young Peoples' Union or in community situation. Emma Sperry Carlyle said that if we do the duty next to us, and then the duty next to that, it is surprising how the light begins to break out on the distant problem.

We must preserve and improve our local community civil grounds where we can develop our ideals into standards of action through practice. O u r health and strength depend on our community practice.

Home Heating Hints

by Moira-Schuster

Housekeeping will be a lot easier in the winter months if you follow these helpful hints:

1. Keep your basement clean. Heat generated by your furnace rises through the house. If there is dust in the basement it can be carried on the rising hot air. 2. Keep your radiators or heat registers clean; especially if you have warm air-heating. Remember, if your furnace is not working efficiently or if you need emergency service, call WO 2-4504. Moira Schuster service is on duty 24 hours every day.

A BRIEF FROM BELFAST

"Today we unite giving honor and praise to him to whom honor is due." — Martha Martin.

Here is a rare and interesting letter from Belfast, Ireland, describing the ceremony at Buckingham Palace, when the writer's (Mrs. A. A. Willis) mother, Mrs. Eileen Mary Glendinning, 188 Malone Road, Belfast, received the O.B.E. last fall for her outstanding charitable and municipal work.

Were indebted to the Belleville recipient friends who formerly spent several years in Belfast, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Pugh, 111 Palmer Road, and generously share with us the following:

". . . . I meant to write to you as soon as I got back from London to tell you about our exciting trip . . . London was fun. There were my Robert, my aunt (mother's only sister), two of my sisters and myself — only one of the four of us was missing, my youngest sister, Scylla, and she was coping with half-term holidays for three of her family.

"We were there for two weeks and the highlight of the trip was, of course, the visit to Buckingham Palace for the investiture. Mother had invitations for two people to attend with her and asked my sister Francesca and myself to come.

"We got to the Palace early on a lovely autumn day and were at once surrounded by photographers who took lots of photographs (including my aunt and sister Ehtne, who had come too, to "peep through the railings").

"We went in and walked through two courtyards to a large waiting room where the officials in magnificent scarlet and gold palace uniforms scrutinized our invitations and took mother off to another door where she went in, in company with eight other ladies and gentlemen (morning coats and grey top hats, etc.) — Mother was delighted.

"Francesca and I went up white marble stairs and down long passages, lined with red, white and gold, with portraits of all the Georges, their wives, families and some other relations lining the walls.

"This led to the Throne room where the investiture was to take place. This was a wonderful room over 50 feet long and about 30 feet high, all decorations were white and gold, the ceiling domed with crystal pillars, and the walls hung with superb tapestries.

"The Throne stood at one end of the room under a crimson and gold canopy and above it, on white velvet cushions on which several rather scantily draped nymphs (also marble) were disporting themselves. The other end of the room (about 30 feet up) was a white marble balcony where the band was playing and continued to play so (very gently) throughout the investiture.

"Francesca and I were given seats on one side of the room and not more than 10 or 12 feet up from where the Queen stood. We had a perfect view of everything.

"After a short time, the Queen came in accompanied by about 20 gentlemen and officers (no ladies-in-waiting) and followed by 2 pages (both West Africans) in cadet uniforms, who stood directly behind her on the dais. Behind them stood 4 Yeoman of the Guard, in their brilliant uniforms, with spikes in their hands."

(To be continued next week)

Belleviensite: The other evening Mrs. White, wife of the Deputy Minister of Social Welfare of Saskatchewan called her sister in Belleville from Regina, to say that their son, Michael White, a student at the University of Saskatchewan, had just appeared on Regina TV to sing (with his group) "The Hammer Song" which he composed and dedicated to "My Aunt Gina" - Mrs. T. J. McQuaid, 22 Willow Drive, Belleville Ontario.

"It was one of the nicest things that's ever happened to me," says Mrs. McQuaid. "I remember Michael sang it for me when I last visited them, and how impressed I was. I'm very happy over his success."

STRAWBERRY PANCAKES:

Set out a griddle or heavy 10-inch skillet. Wash and remove blemishes from 1 quart fully ripe strawberries. Set 18 berries aside to garnish serving plates; hull and slice remaining berries. Place in refrigerator. (When using frozen berries, thaw and store in refrigerator.) Sift together into bowl and set aside 1¼ cups sifted flour and ¼ teaspoon salt.

Beat with rotary beater to blend 2 eggs, well beaten; ½ cup milk, and ½ teaspoon vanilla extract. Set griddle over low heat.

Make a well in centre of dry ingredients. Add egg mixture. Stirring lightly until blended. Set batter aside. Beat until frothy 2 egg whites. Add gradually, beating well after each addition. Fold in strawberries.

Test griddle; it is hot enough for baking when drops of water sprinkled on surface dance in 3 small beads. Lightly grease griddle if manufacturer so directs. Fill griddle back and forth to spread batter. Cook until pancake is fluffy, full of bubbles and golden brown on underside. Turn only once and brown other side. Transfer pancakes to warm platter and keep them warm by placing between folds of absorbent paper in a 350 degrees oven. When all pancakes are cooked, remove strawberries from refrigerator. Mix half of sliced berries with 2 tablespoons sugar.

Spoon about ¼ cup of sweetened strawberries onto each pancake and roll. Place pancakes onto individual plates. Sprinkle each with confectioners' sugar. Arrange remaining sliced strawberries over top of pancakes. Garnish plates with leaf lettuce and the whole strawberries over top of pancakes. Serve immediately. Yield: 3 servings. This is one of the 151 recipes in the Hungarian Cookbook.

The Experts Say

Baggy Pants, Padded Shoulders for Men Out

By PATRICIA RUSAK

TORONTO (CP) — The man who always plays it safe with a grey flannel suit is just as dull, fashion-wise, as the woman who goes everywhere in a little black dress, says fashion consultant Joy Davies.

Today men's fashions are changing almost like women's, though not quite as quickly. And men should not be afraid to experiment with the new looks, colors and fabrics."

For the past two years Miss Davies has been giving what she laughingly calls "a charm course" to many of them young executives.

"Men don't realize that their appearance is so much a part of their projection and personality," Miss Davies has discovered.

And in the first of five one-hour sessions, she frankly assesses a client's appearance and decides how it may be improved. Mannerisms and bad habits are checked to be noticed them during the course.

THREE MAIN STYLES

Miss Davies says that in men's suits today are the Edwardian look with high buttoned jackets and tight pants; the sportier tweedy look; the "middle of the road" look with the looser fitting one- or two-button jacket.

"Baggy pants and heavy padded shoulders are out."

The Edwardian look is considered extreme and generally avoided by executives, but too many have gone to another extreme—the calculated drabness and uniformity of Madison Avenue grey and white, says Miss Davies.

Shirts in shades of pearl grey and beige, or with small stripes, often complement skin tones and brighten a man's appearance, she says.

Waistcoats both colored and matching, "complete with watch chain," are also back in style.

"Lots of men are color blind when it comes to ties," says Miss Davies. They should choose ties in complementary rather than sombre colors. And although a bow tie does not suit every man, it will give many an air of jauntiness.

Miss Davies "loathes" the little three-pointed white handkerchief with cardboard bottom. "A man's handkerchief should be a real one in either linen or silk."

A flower or boutonniere in the lapel is also "a nice touch—it's indicative that there is a gentleness about the man."

Socks should be an extension of a suit, and should not be lighter, more pointed Italian look is the latest fashion in men's shoes.

Miss Davies always checks her clients' hair styles. "Sometimes you think a crew cut will make them look young, whether it suits them or not, and this is ridiculous."

Today, men's hair should not be cut too high and should be allowed to grow a little around the ears and temples.

Miss Davies teaches her clients how to sit and stand properly, to practise good diction and encourages them to exercise regularly.

She also advises them to use some sort of fragrance with a leather, lemon or spicy base. "Men always want women to smell, since so why can't women expect men to smell nice—there's nothing sissy about wearing fragrance."

Miss Davies' course for men is the counterpart of another course she gives to women on etiquette and charm.

Going Places

Back in Time to 18th Century Via Old Sturbridge Village

By SHIRLEY AND BOB SLOANE

STURBRIDGE, Mass. — Pass the sillabub, bub, we're going on a Yankee Winter Weekend. We'll sit by a roaring fire and virtuse us with venison stew, lobster pie and Indian pudding. Then, before tramping out in the snow to sugar off, we'll warm the spot with a spot of mulled cider and sharpen our skills at skittles.

While the Publickan of the Publick House summons the sleigh to horse drawn us, we will explain for the benefit of those who weren't with us in 1776 that sillabub is a kind of colonial milk shake concocted of brandy, cream and white wine. Sugaring off is the New—England equivalent of making Tom-boy when children blend a lemon — turning snow into candy by pouring maple syrup on it after it's boiled when it's stabbed with a hot poker, while skittles is what the boys played in the days before the days of pinball machines.

And a Yankee Winter Weekend is the excuse for it all, and two nights and days under the beamed ceiling of the Publick House, plus a round of visits to Old Sturbridge Village under conditions that are not for the summer soldier or sun sunshine patriot.

Old Sturbridge Village is a meticulously constructed replica of a New England community dating to the turn of the century — the century before the last, that is. Laid out according to tradition, dotted with shops and houses transferred from all over New England, and stocked with antiques in their natural habitat, it is as real as a Grandma Moses painting come to life.

The Village lies in a 330-acre tract just off the Massachusetts Turnpike near the Connecticut state line. It is dedicated to preserving, as reverently as paintings in a museum, the contributions to America civilization of people who must have felt as remote from their ancestral traditions as the first settlers on Venus will.

Nearly all country people in colonial days were farmers, even the minister, doctor, and lawyer. But industrialization was yet to come, and there were no roads for railways to the city. Everyone was forced to be an artisan of sorts in his spare time, a maker of his own goods. The village blacksmith, cooper or glass, and whatever was needed by the community was made for his fellow citizens. Though lacking the skill of city professionals, he invested a love in his work which was never again to be duplicated in mass production factories.

SELF-SUFFICIENT COMMUNITY

It is this kind of remarkably self-sufficient community that is reproduced in Old Sturbridge Village. Within easy strides around a green dominated by a meeting house and stately Meeting House. Each shop, mill and home is attended by a modern day actor or guide in traditional dress — including Yankee Franklin glasses — and is fully functioning or furnished.

In the print shop of Isaiah Thomas, Worcester County's first newspaper publisher, you can buy a copy of the Massachusetts Spy of May 3, 1775, drawn right off a hand press for you. "Americans! — Liberty or Death! — John or Die!" cries the headline. Inside is a story covered by Thomas himself a few weeks earlier. It begins, "Americans! forever bear in mind the Battle of Lexington . . ."

Miser Grant's General Store is a delight to all the senses. Heat from a blazing wood fire is at odd iron angles astraddle the wintry air, and there is nothing surprising about the barrels standing around — including the one with a checkerboard on it.

A bell rings as you enter, and the nostalgic scents of ginger cookies, peppermint and cinnamon balls fill the air. Jugs, bottles, baskets, jars and crates line the weathered wooden floors and shelves. Rolls of gingham are stacked, and mason jars full of penny candies, soap balls, sachets and chewing tabacco cover the counters.

Dangling from luxurious mansions to modest farm houses, several authentic homes line the green and its cobbled roads which curve off into the woods. There were no subdivisions then, and each man built according to his needs, his tastes and his pocket book.

It is easy to see why the living room hearth was the symbol of security and the centre of home life. Each was wide enough to hold the better part of a tree trunk, and deep enough to warm all of a man. Above most in the village hangs a clock; rifle and some of the hundreds of herbs used for the colonial housewife for cooking and medicine.

Furnishings are stenciled and painted, or sponged and mottled to produce a wood grain effect. Wallpapers are hand decorated and varitieus, and clocks and mirrors are bright with hand colored landscape panels.

Elsewhere around the village, the forgotten arts of blacksmithing, weaving, yarn dyeing, candle making, forging and milling go on as they did when there were no tourists to marvel, only neighbors served by those crafts.

Short of going back in a time machine, you can't get any deeper in atmosphere than that.

Henry invites letters from readers. For the most interesting letter he receives each week, he will award a copy of his best-selling book, "Ask Henry," published by Prentice Hall, Inc. This week's winner: Kathleen Kenny, Whitby, Ontario.

Dear Henry: I have no friends that live near us. The only friends that I have are at school, and I can't go over to their house and they can't come to our house every day as we-live in the country and far apart. I am 11. — Lonely Girl.

Dear Lonely Girl: I know lots of friends that you can play with and you'll never get tired of them and you can play with them whenever you wish.

Let me see, there's Dave Copperfield and Nick Nickleby, and good old Oliver Twist, but if you don't like playing with boys, there's always Lorna Doone and you can read about Helen Keller. So you see, you have got tons of friends, and there's lots more that you can meet in any book. — HENRY.

Dear Henry: What should you do if you like a girl but you are afraid to tell her? — Gary.

* * *

Dear Gary: Don't tell her. Make it so that she can tell—HENRY.

* * *

Dear Henry — If you had any wish in the world, what would it be, I'd pick peace, wouldn't you?—Linda Welgand.

Dear Linda: My parents too pick peace. I wish that every kid in the world is given the opportunity to make something of himself. My brother wishes that I forget to collect the bet he owes me, and my cunning sister wishes for 10 more wishes!—HENRY.

Dear Henry: Any advice for the parents of a 13-year-old boy who's sarcastic and rebellious. — Rebel's Mom.

Dear Rebel's Mom: Your son is like a train without tracks to guide it in the right direction. You and your husband have got to be those tracks; you have to be firm and loving tracks; tracks which your boy can put his full weight on.

You have to be strong and when your boy is sarcastic or rebellious the tracks have got to steer him right to bed. Don't let him jump the tracks even once. He'll soon get accustomed to the tracks and he'll be happy that they are there. You'll be new parents and you'll have a new son. — HENRY.

Dear Henry: I am a real dope. I never get anything right in school. I don't get good marks at all. I think that I was born with very stupid brains. — Stupid Brains.

Dear Brains: You're brains are as good as anyone else's, and don't listen to anyone that says that they aren't. Your friends' remarks, your parents' remarks and your plain marks have burned into you.

You think that you are nutty and that there is no way out of it. Wrong! Through a little hard work you can be the brains of the class. Work at it and all you'll hear will be remarks about good marks! — HENRY.

Dear Henry — My problem is getting a boy to even look at me. I am not pretty by any means. I try very hard to look my best, but I just can't impress anyone. I curl my hair, four to five times a week, dress to the best of my ability but I just can't impress. I even go as far as brushing my teeth and fixing my nails. I am only 15 but I would like to go out with a boy at least once a month. — S.D.L.

Dear S.D.L.: There are two main reasons that a boy would like a girl: you've thoroughly explored the first.

I think the second reason is more important. I would like a girl who is smart, gets good marks in school, works hard, and knows what she is speaking about.

Now thoroughly explore the second, and you'll be back in the race. — HENRY.

Bishop Cody Approves New Grant System

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of London Friday termed "a step forward" the announcement by Premier Robarts that the province's system of school grants will be revised.

"The biggest single difficulty seems to have been solved by the prime minister's proposal," said Most Rev. John C. Cody, co-author of an Ontario Roman Catholic bishops' brief which asked for greater provincial aid to separate schools.

He added, however, that he feels the problem of aid to Roman Catholic high schools has not been met.

The revision, announced Thursday by Mr. Robarts, includes a new allocation of corporate tax revenues that will give separate schools more money.

"The solution is a somewhat intricate procedure so that no final verdict could be given until it has been tried out," Bishop Cody said.

Bishop Cody noted that the bishops' brief had also requested an extension of the present system of public and separate elementary schools into the secondary school level, and establishment of separate high schools' colleges. This was rejected.

"The spirit if not the letter of the Confederation pact, in our opinion, calls for Catholic high schools as well as elementary schools. Thus, the Protestant minority in Quebec have always had their needs met on the high school level as well as on the elementary level.

"As to the bishops' request on teachers' colleges, Bishop Cody said he felt Mr. Robarts' suggestion that religious education be allowed for credit would "go a long way toward solving our problem."

"Another alternative would be if the government would refund to us the amount we save the province by having our own high schools."

Faulty Heater Can Hamper Safety Driving

By EUGENE R. WILMOE

Icy temperatures and faulty car heaters do more than put drivers in deep freeze . . . they promote dangerous driving conditions. Viability is reduced by windshield frost, ice or fog. Ventilation is poor because windows and vents are tightly shut, and leaking gases from exhaust pipe, or muffler are trapped inside the car.

Heater trouble is often traced to a clogged or rotted hose which prevents proper circulation. Other causes are a restricted heater core, inoperative control cable, defective fan, or a faulty thermostat.

Sometimes, heater operation is perfectly OK, but the car just isn't driven enough to warm up the engine. In other cases, the trouble is due to failure of the manifold heat valve or the thermostat which results in abnormally slow engine warm-up.

From F.L.: "When a car has power steering, will its operation be affected if the front wheels are misaligned?"

(A) Only in the sense that steering will usually require more manual effort by the driver.

C. T. writes: "Last Saturday, after traveling 235 miles, I found that my 1960 engine used nearly 2 quarts of oil. I've never gotten less than 700 miles per quart — yet my garage says there is absolutely no leakage."

(A) When the oil is diluted — especially by water — the dipstick may show a normal reading. But long, hard driving will quickly burn off the dilutent in the oil and the dipstick will then show what appears to be an abnormal drop in the oil level.

A Few Tips on Talking

DORIS CLARK

"When I see him I feel like I'm gonna die!"

"I'm all right with the kids at school, but when I'm out with a boy my mouth dries up and I act plain dumb.

"When he phones we say lots, but when he comes down we both turn shy and don't speak."

Conversational blues are common, and not just with our young people. Well, what's the answer?

There's not just one answer, but several.

One is to think about him—not about the impression you are making. Once your lips are on straight and your hair combed, further self-conscious primping is just out. So you turn to your companion of the evening with a question about him and his doings. And you don't just say "What's new?"—a conversational sally likely to freeze rather than thaw, as the one questioned flashes around in vain for something, anything, to say.

Save the weather for emergencies. There are times when it does help to get the vocal chords operating. Times when the probabilities for sociability are fair and warmer following a skirmish with southwest winds and sunshine.

But we can do better than this. Is he a skater? Football player? Did he make a good speech at assembly? How's the old wreck of a car that he has been making over? Get him talking and listen with all ears. So that you know what he said and can follow-up with other intelligent remarks.

There's no law against passing out a compliment, either. If you like his new jacket or haircut, why not say so?

What does he think about the latest dance step?

If you read the paper or even leaf over the pages of a magazine, you'll get other conversational clues. All of us should be briefed about community affairs and world-wide events and able to cope with them in friendly gab sessions.

I know folk who keep an assortment of jokes and riddles up their sleeve. What matter if they are corny and the so-called sophisticates sneer a little? Everybody laughs at such efforts—and being willing to be laughed at endears us, believe it or not! Besides, we have the secret satisfaction of knowing we have covered what might have been an awkward pause.

When he tosses the ball back, catch it. If he says "you like detective stories?", don't just say "No" and leave a dead silence. It's time then to share some of your own enthusiasms. Books or plays you are reading; even a recent skirmish with a problem in physics has possibilities in the right company.

In choosing what to do on a date, pick entertainment which will itself provide talk material. A movie, a ball game, a swimming or skating party, are all good grist for the conversational mill.

We are tongued-tied because we are shy; we are shy because we worry overmuch about ourselves.

So to boys and girls, fifteen or fifty, my message is: to be interesting, be interested. An enquiring eager mind forgets itself in the absorbing task of finding food for thought and conversation.—DORIS.

Space Must Be Provided For 60,000 New University Students In Next 7 Years

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—More than $400,000,000 must be spent in Ontario in the next seven years to provide space for 60,000 new university students, the Canadian Managing Editors conference was told Friday.

Dr. G. E. Hall, president and vice-chancellor of the University of Western Ontario, said the cost is for capital construction alone.

He expressed concern that the public does not seem to be fully aware of the outlay needed, although the cost "will all come out of people living in the province," whether from private sources or taxes.

Dr. Hall said that in the case of UWO, there is a $36,000,000 expansion designed to provide 5,000 additional student places.

"I don't think we as a young progressive nation can do other than provide these facilities," Dr. Hall said.

He added that the problem exists generally across Canada.

Another part of the problem that must be recognized is the required increase in university teachers. Ontario last year had 2,850 full-time university teachers, but 4,000 more will have to be found.

WILL NEED TEACHERS

The need across Canada would be for 20,000 university teachers, "who must come from our own graduate students." He said it is increasingly difficult to get university teachers from abroad because of expansion in other countries.

Earlier Friday, at the opening of the conference, press counsel of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, A. Z. Blakeney, said the medium has a responsibility to report the conference in proportion to the importance of the subject.

A. Z. Blakeney, Saskatchewan health minister, said Saskatchewan's medicare plan is a measure up to the accepted standard of the profession in reporting and interpreting the medicare issue and that they were guilty of "deprecating the coverage and comment of other journals."

R. E. Brownridge, public relations officer for the Ontario Medical Association said that we feel daily newspaper perhaps five per cent of the 100-odd dailies—did publish inaccurate and biased reports."

CONSCIOUS OF NEED

William Thomson, assistant general manager of the Regina Leader-Post said:

"We were at all times conscious of the pressing need . . . for extra costs to be factual, accurate, objective and fair in the presentation of the story. To that end of human ability I think we did that kind of job in the best tradition of newspaper reporting.

"If we slipped up it was not for lack of desire to do it accurately. In three years of covering medicare I think our batting average is high.

"I have no apologies to make for our paper or the staff that worked so conscientiously to a good and thorough job."

Unveils Plan To Eliminate Old Houses

LONDON (CP)—The Labor party Friday unveiled a plan for eliminating old houses in Britain where, it says, there are an estimated 15,000,000 persons living in 5,000,000 households without baths and hot water systems.

The opposition's report adds that nearly half the houses now inhabited — about 7,000,000— were built before the First World War, the vast majority owned by private landlords. 2,000,000 of them were built before 1850.

Detailed figures for the whole country will not be available until the full report on the 1961 census. But the 1956 figures for England and Wales show that of the 5,000,000 rented accommodations 63 per cent had no baths of their own, 53 per cent had no hot water supply and 25 per cent did not have an unshared flush toilet.

LACK FACILITIES

Many houses still in use, particularly in the north, were built during the industrial revolution. They were cheaply constructed without proper drains, plumbing or other facilities.

A 1958 government report said there were 952,000 houses in England, Wales and Scotland that were slums. But the Labor party says this figure is "plainly unrealistic" because local authorities applied standards much of their own choosing."

Basically, Labor policy is to improve all houses capable of being improved, clear away as rapidly as possible houses not capable of improvement and improve up to an adequate standard houses impossible to clear within the first five years of the scheme.

Landlords would be offered government grants to help bring buildings up to standard or would be invited to sell the buildings to the local authority.

"Where the landlord declines both alternatives," the statement says, "the local authority will compulsorily acquire the house."

CLAIMS EXPENSIVE

TORONTO (CP)—A study by Physicians' Services Incorporated, released Friday says a province-wide medical care program would cost $90,000,000 a year for hospital services alone. Plans put forward by all three political parties in the Ontario legislature would cover all medical expenses.

Budget Deficit For 10 Months Is $110,800,000

OTTAWA (CP)—The government's budgetary deficit for the first 10 months of the current fiscal year—to Jan. 31—was $110,800,000 compared with $220,400,000 at the same time last year.

In his monthly statement of government revenues and expenditures, Finance Minister Nowlan reported a January deficit of $10,000,000 compared with a surplus of $38,400,000 in January, 1962.

Last month's deficit resulted from revenues of $546,900,000 and expenditures of $556,900,000.

Last Oct. 22, Mr. Nowlan predicted a budgetary deficit of $370,000,000 for the current fiscal year. Because government spending is not spread evenly over the year, the monthly results can be misleading, he said.

For the first 10 months of the current fiscal year, revenues totalled $4,946,900,000. Expenditures were $5,057,700,000. During the same period last year, revenues were $4,821,200,000 and expenditures were $5,041,700,000.

Prime Ministers to Confer On Ways to Boost Trade

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prime Minister Diefenbaker's brief visit to London affords an occasion for the first face-to-face meeting of Commonwealth leaders since Britain was shut out of Europe.

The trip was arranged months ago with the sole purpose of enabling the Canadian prime minister to have conferred upon him the honor of becoming a freeman of the City of London.

Since then, Britain's attempt to join the European Economic Community has been frustrated by France, leaving British policymakers uncertain of the next move. Extra interest therefore attaches to the "working dinner" which Admiralty House Saturday night between Diefenbaker and his host, Prime Minister Macmillan.

CHOSE COMMONWEALTH

After the breakdown of the Brussels negotiations, Diefenbaker said in Ottawa that Britain had chosen the Commonwealth over the Common Market. He also reiterated his conviction that Commonwealth trade could be accelerated.

British ministers will show interest in specific suggestions for Commonwealth trade expansion. Particularly welcome in Whitehall would be some indication that club members are prepared to lower industrial tariffs against British goods.

Enthusiasm for the Commonwealth as a panacea for the nation's economic ills has noticeably dwindled in official circles. It is felt that the geographical dispersion of member countries rules out any hope of transforming the association into an economic unit similar to the European Common Market.

The Commonwealth is "real, but fragile." This view was expressed in London last Tuesday in a speech to Commonwealth correspondents by Kenneth Younger, director-general of the Royal Institute of Commonwealth Affairs.

Discussing the disarry in British affairs after Brussels, Younger said the nation should not allow itself the luxury of thinking it can "fall back" on the Commonwealth by "tightening up" the preference system or setting up joint investment boards.

"For one thing, the other Commonwealth countries simply wouldn't accept this," said Younger, formerly minister of state at the foreign office.

A similar warning came from Sir William Hayter, former British ambassador in Russia. He made a newspaper article that "valuable as the Commonwealth is, it is perhaps, regrettable that its existence sometimes blinds us to the realities of our situation in the world."

Such attitudes are common among British ministers. There are many who hope that Britain, despite President de Gaulle, may in a popular phrase "catch a later train" for Europe. But until that time arrives Macmillan will be eager for any crumbs of Commonwealth comfort that Diefenbaker and later the prime ministers of Australia and New Zealand, can provide.

National Dairy Council Will Advise Govt.

OTTAWA (CP)—Formation of a national dairy committee to advise governments of industry problems was announced Friday night at the end of a two-day conference.

It will include representatives of farm and manufacturing organizations, the federal and provincial governments.

It is expected to be established in a "very few weeks"—hopefully before election day April 8 and before the dairy year expires April 30.

Agriculture Minister Hamilton indicated to the closed convention that encouragement is pending for more cheddar cheese production, a press conference was told Friday night.

The committee concept clearly was a compromise in the face of conflicting views on the solution to dairy problems, chiefly the butter surplus.

SURPLUS MOUNTS . . .

The surplus has been mounting and now is some 215,000,000 pounds. Production of 360,000,000 pounds in 1962 contrasted with consumption of 318,000,000 pounds, although consumption had increased due to a $15,000,000-a-year federal subsidy imposed last May 1 to encourage consumers to eat more butter.

The floor price of 64 cents a pound for top grades was retained for farmers and the retail price dropped.

Any change in this pattern was strongly opposed by the manufacturers and processors and—to some extent—by farm groups.

However, the federal government view has been that the provinces themselves should take step in to trim production, notably Ontario and Quebec. Producers also seek solutions.

Some 1,100 persons have been invited to the ceremony within the medieval walls of the Guildhall, part of which has been standing since 1440 although much of the building was twice destroyed—in the Great Fire of 1666 and the 1940 Battle of Britain. Guests will include Prime Minister Macmillan and the Archbishop of Canterbury.

HAS LONG HISTORY

The freedom dates back to 1275 and until the 19th century it was essential to every person wishing to trade or be a craftsman in the city. It also protected holders from impressment into the armed forces.

But it was not until 1757 that the corporation decided to confer the freedom by presentation as the City's highest honor to dignitaries.

Today, many ordinary citizens can, and do, get the freedom by applying to the City.

This may be done in one of three ways: By "servitude," serving a full term of apprenticeship to a freeman; by "patrimony," hereby the son or daughter of a freeman is eligible; or by "redemption," admission by payment after being sponsored by one of the Guildhall livery companies.

But in actual fact those in all three classes pay a fee of two guineas. However, those admitted by "redemption" who are not sponsored by a company pay an additional guinea.

More New Garden Catalogues

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

A new seed catalogue is a spring tonic to the plant lover. Several have come in the mail this past two weeks and have plenty of new items to offer. The Dominion Seed House lists Sprite, a hybrid snapdragon, which begins to flower when eight inches high. The uniform growth gives a manicured appearance to border of bed. Needle asters will give the flower arranger an exotic bloom to work with. Good for bedding or cutting. Burpee Blue Prince aster has five inch blooms on 16 inch stems and no laterals. True peony type and very double.

Early Bird dahlias are just like their famous parent, the Unwins, and only half as tall. Very early, good stems for cutting, and fine for bed and borders, or planters.

HANDSOME DAHLIAS

The Garden Mart lists several handsome new dahlias, many from Scotland and England. There are dwarf, doubles and unexcelled for bedding. Their exhibition dahlias are from Holland. They have many variations of tuberous rooted begonias with camellia like flowers, rose, picotee, fimbriata, crispa and crispa marginata in big waxy blooms in many shades. Begonia Perdida is for hanging baskets. You line the wire basket with sphagnum and plant the tubbers in a rich soil high in humus. Multiflora begonias have fairly new in Canada. These are dwarf plants, compact and covered all summer with miniature blooms borne in clusters. The blooms are replicas of the larger camellia types. The following are new in Canada. Good for bedding, pots or planters.

Begonia Fire Flame can be grown in full sun but does best in morning sun with afternoon shade. Begonia Maxima is from Switzerland and is a new development mid-way between the hybrid multi-floras and the giant rose forms in size. Free flowering and attractive in habit.

McConnels list many fine new roses. They feature a good selection of dwarf perennial asters called English, or hardy asters. They also have many fine chrysanthemums from the big Harvest with its seven inch golden blooms to the smaller pompoms and cushion mums.

Florist Gardens have a long list of new day lilies and a special collection of primrose plants. These are hardy throughout Canada and make wonderful beds or borders with masses of bloom in May and June.

A regretable but uncalled-for incident in a city league hockey game the other night led to the suspension for the season of Flori Goegan, coach of the Pepsi's entry.

Coach Goegan, the referees' report to league officials stated, refused to send first one player to the penalty box, then another after the club was penalized with a bench sentence for delaying the game.

After waiting the time limit prescribed by the rules, the referees had no alternative. They awarded the game to the Trudeau Motors team, leading at the time by a 1-0 score.

City League president Cliff Beick, an eye-witness to the incident, lost no time in suspending Goegan for the remainder of the season.

The referees were within their official rights when they awarded the game to Trudeau after the Pepsi coach refused to abide by the rules. President Beick acted wisely when he ordered the suspension.

What I cannot understand is why a player of Goegan's ability, experience and know-how of the game expected to hurl such defiance at officials—regardless of who they are —and get away with it.

Goegan, in my opinion, is one of the few good senior "A" hockey players left in these parts. He has a wealth of experience and during the early days of play in senior hockey has, no doubt, come in contact with incidents involving players and referees and probably coaches and officials.

If it had been some green novice, new to the art of coaching and desirous of proving himself a hero in the eyes of his players by flaunting authority, I wouldn't have been surprised.

But Flori knows that if officials, of any league, snuffed a couple of chimpanzees into striped jerseys, gave them whistles and put them on the ice as referees, they would be in complete charge of the game.

And as such—right or wrong—their word and their whistles constitute the law. And the men who put them there, whether they be officials of the National Hockey League, or the Caledon Peak-chasing Brotherhood, should stand solidly behind them, unless something of a glaring nature crops up.

There is good—not so good—and bad in everything. And hockey players and referees are no exception. Both, under their sweaters and skin are human—and being human means that one is not immune to the mistake-making virus. That goes for coaches, too.

I asked "Red" Storey, former National Hockey League referee, who quit officiating because he felt NHL brass did not back him up in that now-famous game at Chicago four years ago, if he made mistakes while in an officiating capacity.

"Red's" eyes twinkled. "Sure, I did. Every referee does at some time or another. It is one of those things that cannot be helped. But I don't go around advertising the fact nor did I try to make up for a bobble, because two wrongs do not make a right."

City league referees here are not supposed to be the best in the world. Their counterparts in other places, make mistakes at times, and some of their six-bit sentences have hovered on the borderline. But I believe they know their rule books.

And a lot of the players under their control are not averse to "putting one over" on them if the opportunity presents itself.

Perhaps a hangover resentment against the officials of the game in question had something to do with Goegan's foolish action. Perhaps something that occurred in a previous game kept cropping up in his mind. I do not know this. It is purely an assumption.

What he expected to gain by refusing to co-operate with the referees in not sending his players to the penalty box is beyond my comprehension. He knows the rules — and he knows the officials' word is law.

But his was the hand that cast the die—and must suffer the consequences.

Hull Ottawa Frontenacs Share Lead

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hull-Ottawa Canadiens and Kingston Frontenacs both scored victories Friday night to maintain their first-place tie in the Eastern Professional Hockey League.

Two goals by Bob Courcy led the C nadiens to a 5-3 win over St. Louis Braves, while the Frontenacs scored three times in the first period and held out for a 3-1 triumph over Sudbury Wolves.

At Ottawa, the Canadiens jumped to a 4-1 lead after two periods, with goalie Ernie Wakely having to make only five saves.

Al Caron, the league's top sniper, scored twice for St. Louis in the third period but the Braves' rally fell short.

Other Hull - Ottawa scorers were Norm Beaudin, John Rodger and Brian Smith. Jack Turner scored the first St. Louis marker.

GOALIE OUTSTANDING

At Sudbury, the Wolves outshot the Frontenacs 33-30, but Kingston goalie Bruce Gamble was outstanding on several occasions.

Don Blackburn, Pat Stapleton and Gerry Ouellette were the Kingston marksmen, and defenceman Mike McMahon scored for Sudbury in the second period on a power play.

BOXER ACQUITTED

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Gil Turner, 32, former welterweight boxer, has been acquitted of gambling charges. Turner was arrested last May 16 in a raid on his apartment here. Judge Alex Hoffman found Turner innocent, stating no gambling case had been proved.

Howe Has Best Chance To Win Title

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The National Hockey League's scoring race couldn't be much tighter.

A mere three points separates the eight players who share the top three positions—an amount that could be considered just another evening's work for any one of the men involved.

Leading with 60 points (29 goals, 31 assists) is Gordie Howe, Detroit's slope - shouldered right wing.

Big Gordie is a five-time winner of the Art Ross Trophy as the NHL's top point collector and isn't likely to fade in the stretch. Enhancing his chances is the fact that he and the Red Wings have 15 games left to play while the other players in the running have fewer.

Bracketed at a point behind Howe are Chicago's surging Bobby Hull, who won the title last year for his second time, his teammate Stan Mikita, and Boston linemates Johnny Bucyk and Murray Oliver.

Toronto's Frank Mahovlich and Montreal's Jean Beliveau at 58 points and Andy Bathgate of New York with 57 are next.

EDGED FOR TROPHY

Bathgate and Hull with 84 points last year but the Chicago winger took the trophy on the strength of 39 goals to 28 scored by Bathgate's 28.

Mahovlich was listed as an uncertain starter for Toronto's game at home tonight against Boston. He suffered a charley-horse against Montreal Wednesday night.

The Canadiens announced centre Henri Richard probably will return to the lineup after 10 days on the sidelines with a groin injury. But defenceman Jean-Guy Talbot, who suffered a knee injury Wednesday, was given only a 50-50 chance of dressing.

The Hawks too, have an injury problem. Defenceman Pierre Pilote suffered a hairline fracture of the left ankle Thursday night against Detroit and will be out for the weekend at least. Dr. Myron J. Tremaine, the club physician, put Pilote on crutches and ordered him to avoid placing weight on the ailing ankle.

It's the same ankle Pilote injured last November. He sat out eight days then.

Two games are on tap Sunday night. Detroit is at New York and Boston at Chicago.

Going into the weekend action, Chicago leads the standings with 70 points followed by Toronto with 65, Montreal with 64 and Detroit at 59. New York is fifth with 43 and Boston last with 39.

Pole-Vault In Spotlight

Crothers Eyes Snell World Mark

NEW YORK (AP)—The question of how high is up in the pole vault may be answered tonight when world record-holder Pentti Nikula of Finland takes on four other 16-foot performers in the highlight of the indoor track and field championships run by the United States Amateur Athletic Union.

But if Nikula falters, half a dozen other stars could steal the spotlight.

They include Jim Beatty, who set the world indoor record of three minutes, 58.5 seconds for the mile a week ago, Valery Brumel of Russia, out to make amends for his only high jump loss to John Thomas two weeks ago, and Gary Gubner of New York University, who hopes to improve on his shot put record of 64 feet, 11¼ inches.

Then there are Bill Crothers of Toronto, who has been planning an assault on the 1,000-yard indoor record of 2:06 held by New Zealand's Peter Snell, Ivo Ovanesyan of Russia, who set the indoor broad jump record of 26 feet, 10 inches three weeks ago, and Jack Yerman of the U.S. Army, who in after the 600-yard record of 1:09.3.

Crothers is highly favored in the 1,000-yard run. He is unbeaten this winter and has covered the distance in 2:08.1. Bruce Kidd of Toronto was favored in the three-mile event but was forced out of the meet with a blistered foot.

Frankford took over in the final frame. Watson coming up with two more goals and Patrick with one.

Cousin To Screwball Pitch

Roberts' Secret Weapon

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—There is ease in Robin Roberts' manner and a smile on his face. He is a baseball pitcher with a job and, at 36, a healthy outlook on life.

Ten months ago, the former ace righthander with Philadelphia Phillies couldn't make that statement. Ignored in the National League expansion draft and dropped by New York Yankees, Roberts was on the baseball breadlines, begging for major league work.

He ended up with Baltimore Orioles last season, won 10 games and was voted the comeback player of the year.

How did he do it?

Roberts explained it Friday while working out in the Orioles' spring training camp. He said he owes the latest success to a new pitch—second cousin to the screwball—which he learned from Baltimore Spahn and Johnny Antonelli of Milwaukee Braves.

TRIES A FIFTH

In his desperation, he tried a letup pitch he had seen Spahn and Antonelli use with effect in the National League. Roberts releases it with an overspin fastball by a twist of wrist and it sinks down and away from left-handed hitters. He describes it as "a curveball pitch a screwball, however. "It reacts like a screwball but it doesn't break nearly as sharp as a screwball and there's no effort on the arm. Just a little pop of the wrist at the end of the delivery. Spahn is a master at it."

2 Smokies Hurt in Exhibitions

TRAIL, B.C. (CP)—Canada's Trail Smoke Eaters have reported a couple of new physical complaints in their exhibition warmup for next month's world hockey championships in Stockholm, Sweden.

Peacosh was injured in Trail's 9-3 victory Thursday night over the Czech national B team. Peacosh scored four goals in the game despite his handicap.

Smokies went through a light workout Friday in preparation for a second meeting in Prague tonight against the national A team. Trail left for the game Wednesday.

Smoke Eaters have a final game in Plzen Sunday ending their five game tour of Czechoslovakia, and then fly to Goteborg, Sweden for two exhibition games early in the week.

Beaten 5-2 In Rugged Game

Juniors Bow To Frontenacs

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Kingston Frontenacs moved to the top of the OHA Eastern Junior "B" round-robin playoff series here last night and showed Belleville nearer the brink of elimination by grinding out a rugged 5-2 victory.

The win gave Kingston a 2-0 record while Peterborough is 1-1 and the local "B's" 0-2. Belleville must win next Friday night's game here against Peterborough to keep their chances alive.

Last night's game played before a good sized crowd which waited until 9:15 for the game to start after Kingston was delayed by a bus breakdown at Napanee, was a chippy one from start to finish.

Kingston outshot the Belleville crew 40-30 and took a 2-0 lead in the first period which proved to be the margin of victory. The rugged four third period goals after a scoreless middle frame.

Sammy Haskill in the losers net turned in a starry performance, kicking out gobs of rubber at times, many of the shots screened as his mates and Kingston players bunched at his doorstep all night. Belleville had four shots per period, according to the penalty boxstatistics but they wasted their best chances by firing directly into Perry's pads.

There was five fist fights enlivened the action, one in the first period between Mike Hartness and Ron Reid, one in the second between Stu Muirhead and Gary McMillan and another and the third involving Ron Earl and Gary Duvall. Belleville got the best of the fights if not the game.

There were 22 penalties called in all and a number of others that should have been. Kingston's Ed Long drew a misconduct when Belleville scored the first goal in the third beat while Don Belleville, of Belleville, picked up a major for high sticking. They were seven minor penalties per team.

Ron Earl sparked the Frontenac scorers with three goals while Gary Lavallee and Jim Sprott bagged the others. Bob Rawson and Long had two assists, Robertson and Bryant one each.

Earl opened the scoring at 11.29 of the first, slapping in Bryant's goal corner passout. Lavallee golfed one into the open side of the net with Either by the penalty box at 15.03 and Earl sank a rebound off the goalpost at 18.31 with Reid and Hartness serving their fighting majors and Gary Reid also off for holding.

Long took quick penalties to the visitors in the second save Belleville a two-man advantage but they failed to do anything about it. Haskill was hot all through the period despite having to go for repairs when clipped in the face by Bruce's stick at 11.50.

Belleville had the man advantage when Zakos fooled Perry with a long shot from the side boards to make it 3-1 at 2.33 of the third. Earl got that one back for Kingston less than a minute later and Sprott made it 5-1 from a goalmouth scramble at 16.30. Muirhead tipped home Zakos' blueline shot to close the scoring at 17.38.

Says Boxing Down But Won't Die

MONTREAL (CP) — Charlie Goldman, onetime tutor of heavyweight champ Rocky Marciano said Friday night boxing has sunk to a low ebb but the game will never die out. "A lots people like it—it's that simple," said the 75-year-old trainer in an interview.

He is here to work in the corner of dethroned Canadian heavyweight champ Don Jacoux of Montreal who meets Garvin Sawyer of Pittsburgh in a 10-rounder Monday night.

Goldman said while there is much wrong with boxing, the game appears to television viewers as much more brutal than it really is.

"You gotta remember that these men are finely-conditioned for what they do. When they get hit, it's not the same thing as some guy sitting at home getting hit."

Young Skier Wins Honors

Bryan Hollinger, a 16-year-old skier from Kirkland Lake, recently won the slalom and downhill events in the Ontario Junior Ski Championships, held in Oshawa, and has been named to represent the Canadian Junior championships at Banff, Alberta, shortly.

Alberta Rink Wins Schoolboy Title

Defeats Quebec In Finals Classic

GUELPH (CP)—Midnight finally struck for the Cinderella Quebec rink Friday night and Alberta became the champs of the 1963 Canadian schoolboy curling championships.

The time slipper just didn't fit.

Quebec's John Hammond, who had carried his rink to nine wins in succession, found out it takes more than one person to make a rink.

For the first time in history two undefeated rinks met in the final game for the title and Alberta coasted to an 11-8 triumph in the 10th straight.

Alberta was the third rink in history to go through the 11-round schedule undefeated. without a loss. Saskatchewan rinks have accomplished the feat twice.

The windup match contained great interest but Alberta made sure there would be no last-rock wins by jumping to a 4-0 lead in the first end.

"Winning the flip to give us last rock in that first end helped a lot," said a jubilant Steve Kashuba, Alberta coach.

Hammond, still making key shots but not up to the sensational standard he had displayed earlier, tried in vain to tie it. But Saboe scored another four in the fifth end to take an insurmountable 9-4 lead.

In Saboe, a shy youth, Hammond had finally met a skip who wouldn't let him pile up big ends.

The Albertans, who usually play a lightweight game, were forced to the knockout style after the fifth end to protect their lead.

Before the game, Kashuba sent his boys to their hotel room, away from spectators and other curlers, and took them meals on a tray.

Caracas Golf

Knudson Ups Lead To 4

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP)—Toronto's slim George Knudson, running for his second victory on the current Caribbean tour, took a four stroke lead into today's third round of the Caracas open golf championship.

Actually, the 26-year-old Canadian had a good shot at breaking his own record today but fallinz apart in the last five holes. He was six under par over the first 13 holes than took a one over par and two that went two over par.

"I think I could have beat my own record," he said, "but I got careless."

One stroke back at 138 were Henry Williams Jr., of Fleetwood, Pa., and Don Whitt of Bourrego Springs, Calif.

Knudson, who won two tournaments on the 1962 Caribbean tour, was the Panama Open, first stop on this year's tour.

Flyers Win Over Black Hawks

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Niagara Falls Flyers moved to within one win of clinching a tie for first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Provincial Junior A league when they tied St. Catharines Black Hawks 3-3 in a rough game at Niagara Falls Friday night.

Niagara Falls broke in front on the first of two goals by team captain Terry Crisp, but the Hawks came back to take a 2-1 lead before the first period ended.

Defenceman Paul Popeil knotted the contest with a power play goal, and Dennis Hull put the Hawks in front as he drove home a puck that was loose in the goal mouth.

Crisp's unassisted goal midway in the second period tied the game, but Hull came back, also with an unassisted goal, to give the Hawks the lead again. SCORES EQUALIZER

Gary Harmer gave Flyers the equalizer with the game goal of the final period. Assists went to Crisp and Wayne Maxner, who moved six points ahead in the scoring race.

Maroons Enter Tigers 11-2

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The top two teams of the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior A series will square off for the last game of the schedule Sunday—but they'll only be fighting for the record.

The game — between first-place Windsor Bulldogs and second-place Chatham Maroons — won't change the standings, but both clubs will be hungry for a final win to carry them into the playoffs.

They both improved their records with wins Friday night, leaving Chatham still six points back of the Bulldogs.

The dispirited Kitchener-Waterloo Tigers are already a dead team out of the playoffs—bowed out for the year 11-2 with a third-period collapse under a seven-goal onslaught by the Maroons.

In Galt, Windsor coasted home in their next-to-last game with an 8-3 win over fourth place Galt Terriers.

Eight different players—Irwin Cross, Tommy Wilker, Bob Brown, Jacques Begin, Tom Micallef, Bill Print, Jack Costello and Jean Asselin—shared the Windsor scoring. It was Brown's 60th goal of the season.

Ron Brain scored twice for Galt, which finished its schedule. Lloyd Mercer, Eddie Burr and Larry Pfaff were the other Terrier marksmen.

In Kitchener, Tiger goalie Harold (Boat) Hurley was the busiest man in the rink as he stopped 61 Chatham efforts.

Ted Power and Tom Clarke led the Maroons with three goals each. Single Markers went to George Aitken, Don McGregor, Jim Connelly, Bob Seymour and Joe Malo. Tiger scorers were Bob Forhan and Joe Hogan.

Will Quit Ring If Beaten By Tiger

Defeat Means Trail's End For Fullmer

BY JACK STEVENSON

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — World middleweight champion Dick Tiger of Nigeria battles to keep his crown today and meet the challenge of the dedicated brawler he whipped to win the title—Gene Fullmer of West Jordan Utah.

"I'm confident I can beat him again," the 33-year-old champion declared before their 15-round nationally televised bout starting at 10 p.m., EST, in the Las Vegas Convention Center.

"If I lose, it will be my last fight," declared Fullmer, who at 31 had not been defeated in 17 fights since losing a title bid to Tiger in San Francisco last Oct. 29. "I feel confident. If I didn't I wouldn't want to try it."

Odds of 9-1 favoring Tiger make him a stronger favorite than he was in the San Francisco bout.

"I think this fight will be tougher than the first one," the champion commented. "Fullmer will be coming all out. He has a title that was badly as I want to keep it."

DEVISE STRATEGY

After watching movies of the first fight, respected trainers Ray and Marv Jenson, his manager, devised a new strategy for this bout.

"If we didn't make some changes, Gene would get beaten again," Jenson declared.

Although the new plan wasn't disclosed, Fullmer apparently expected to carry his hands lower and not rush into the attack as eagerly as in the last time. For it was the solid socking counter punches from Tiger that spelled defeat before when Fullmer finished with cuts over both eyes and a bloody nose.

"If he does come as I did last time," said Tiger who had seen movies. "I'll wait and see. If Fullmer does do something new, I can meet it."

Two Rinks Top Legion Curling

NORTH BAY (CP)—A pair of northern rinks, both determined to earn the trip to Port Arthur for the Canadian finals, came out of the second day action here Friday as the only unbeaten entries in the Royal Canadian Legion Curling Championships.

Rudy Steski's North Bay rink and the veteran Steve Stratford rink from Virginiatown were left perched on top of the parade, each with four straight victories. Still in good position to overhaul either rink are Gerry Gow, Timmy Wilker, Bob Forhan and Joe Hogan.

Steski, making many brilliant shots in the anchor position, had his North Bay rink intact Friday night by taking a tough 7-5 decision from Fred Brown's Cobourg rink. Stratford had to go an extra end to nose out Pete Ferguson's West Hill rink 8-8, using a last rock draw shot to turn the trick.

The remaining North Bay rink, Cornwall its second straight victory in the Friday morning draw when it took an 11-4 verdict from Glen Rockel of Welland, but then stumbled to his first defeat in the afternoon by an 11-6 loss to Stew Brown of Guelph.

SEEKS THIRD WIN

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Kelley, 32 - year - old schoolteacher from Mystic, Conn., will try for his third straight victory in the Cherry Tree marathon Sunday through the streets of the Bronx. A field of 70 runners is expected to compete in the 26-mile, 385-yard race.

Buy Magazine-Or No Playoffs

CAHA Issues Ultimatum

EDMONTON (CP)—John Gaetsens, secretary of the Maple Leaf Athletic Club, said Friday the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has told the organization it must pay the subscription fee for the CAHA's magazine or forfeit playoff rights.

Gaetsens said in an interview that the club, which sponsors three minor hockey teams in Edmonton, has received notification from Art Poiter of Edmonton, CAHA president.

Gaetsens said the Maple Leaf club had informed the CAHA it did not wish to pay, as a matter of principle, the compulsory subscription to Hockey Canada.

He added that the fee now will be paid so that the club's players will not be prevented from entering the playoffs.

The magazine subscription fee is 25 cents a year.

"We felt the magazine is an imposition because it is forced on each player, coach and manager," Gaetsens said. "Some in the organization like the publication but others are not pleased."

Some, Quebec minor teams left the CAHA last December on the magazine issue.

Rosewall Tops in Pro Net Tour

MONTREAL (CP)—"I like to think of myself as a percentage player," said Ken Rosewall, world professional tennis champion, after defeating challenger Rod Laver in a pro touring match Friday night.

Rosewall, down 3-0 and losing in the fourth game, used precision placing and faultless ground strokes to overhaul his fellow Australian and take an 8-6 victory.

"He made some fantastic shots at the start, but I knew he would have to pay for it by the law of averages," said Rosewall calmly.

I thought I had him," said Laver, philosophically. "I started to get rattled and you can't do that."

Rosewall now has the best individual record on the tour with eight wins and two losses.

Win Seventh-Game Thriller 3-2

RCAF Ousts Picton Macs

PICTON (Special) — Trenton RCAF Globetrotters with stood a last - minute rally by the Picton Macs to capture a 3-2 victory before 1,065 fans in Recreation last night.

The victory climaxed a hard-fought best-of-seven series which went the limit before the Globetrotters took it four games to three.

RCAF will now meet the Ursuline Black Hawks, led by Freddy Eicher, for the Lake-shore Intermediate champion-ship.

Last night's game was a thriller from start to finish with both clubs going all out for the crucial victory.

RCAF scored 1 in the first and once in the second period for a 2-0 lead which held up until the dying minutes of the game. The winners appeared to have the win sewed up when they made it 3-0 at 18.45 of the third beat — but the Macs were not dead yet.

O'Halloran, who played a tremendous game for Picton as the Trotters outshot the Macs 50-19, broke out in a last ditch attempt to get the equalizer but the clock ran out, and for Picton, the season with it.

Austin Scott starred for the Trotters, finishing off three-point plays with Petersen and Maroney for the 1-0 score at 3.25 of the first and at 11.30 of the second to make it 2-0.

Currie pumped home the winners' third-period marker, assisted by Drake and Lewis.

Picton picked up four of the game's five minor penalties, three of them coming in the opening period.

Canadian Bowling Team Reaches Top

BUFFALO, N.Y. (CP) — Guelph's Wyndham Lanes team moved into first place in the Canadian Zone Division after the sixth day of the American Bowling Congress Tournament Friday with a 2,770 series.

The Guelph quintet, one of 90 Canadian teams in the tournament, rolled games of 994, 904 and 922. Walter Jeffries set the pace with ten seconds left when Mulholland again took Wesse's pass and cut the margin to 3-2.

Thirty seconds left and the score's three-two their favour. We've got to the time to make the playoffs.

The face-off's in their zone. There's still a chance. Take a gamble. Pull the goalie for that extra attacker.

The puck is dropped. We've got it!

He's set. He shoots. He scores!

There goes the ball—game's over.
Boy, that calls for a man-size* celebration.

Russ Woman Wins Four Skate Races

TOKYO (Reuters) — Mrs. Lidia Skoblikova of the Soviet Union Friday became the first person in history to win all four races in the women's world speed skating championships.

Mrs. Skoblikova, who won the gold medals at the 1960 Olympics in the United States and was runner-up to last year's world championships, broke her own world record Friday when she won the 1,000-metre event in the competition at nearby Karuzawa.

Mrs. Skoblikova, a 22-year-old schoolteacher and Soviet Olympic champion, completed the 1,000 metres in 1:31.8, beating her own record time of 1:33.4, and went on to win the final 5,000 metres in 8:10.5.

Wants Curb Put on Grid Blackouts

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A member of the Michigan state legislature has proposed a bill to curb the 75-mile television blackout area which Detroit Lions and other National Football League teams impose on their home games.

The bill, introduced in the legislature Friday by Republican Paul M. Chandler, would impose a 10-per-cent tax on the Lions if they maintain a Detroit TV blackout.

Chandler said the tax would produce $600,000 a year and the money could be put into the state Olympic fund.

The tax would be waived, however, if the game is televised by a station within 25 miles of Tiger Stadium, where the Lions play their home games.

Chandler said he expects the proposal to bring howls from the NFL, which imposes a TV blackout for 75 miles around the site of the game.

"PEEPING TOM"
Thriller Raises Controversy

"Peeping Tom" opening Monday at the Park Theatre, raises the controversial point of how far an insane killer is responsible for his actions. Vividly told, "Peeping Tom" is the gripping story of a warped photographer driven insane by experiments performed on him by his scientist father investigating the psychology of fear. Although he commits three macabre murders, each with a degree of horror never shown on the screen before, the insane killer portrayed is, in his sane moments, friendly and likeable. His murderous obsession, which is to photograph the fear on the face of a woman who knows she is about to be killed, is clearly not his fault. Is he really guilty, or not guilty, of his horrible and terrifying crimes? This is the question that "Peeping Tom" dramatically and intensely presents.

Produced and directed by Michael Powell and photographed in Eastman Color "Peeping Tom" stars Carl Boehm, Anna Massey, Moira Shearer and Maxine Audley.

SECOND THRILLER
"ALL NIGHT LONG"

A tension-filled story of a night of jazz, love, hate, fear and jealousy, Starring Patrick McGoohan, Keith Mitchell, Betsy Blair, Paul Harris, Marti Stevens and Richard Attenborough, with Dave Brubeck, Charles Mingus, Johnny Dankworth and Tubby Hayes, joining forces with top jazzmen, in a jam session of human emotions.

"All Night Long" stars Patrick McGoohan, Keith Mitchell, Betsy Blair and Richard Attenborough.

PARKER, ARGOS AGREE

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference and newly-acquired quarterback Jackie Parker reached an oral agreement Friday on a contract for the former Edmonton Eskimo football star.

The Argos announced that the contract will be for a two-year term but they declined to disclose salary terms. The official signing will take place March 4 at a press conference.

Toronto obtained Parker earlier this week by giving the Western Football Conference Eskimos five players and an undisclosed amount of cash.

AT THE PARK — This scene from "All Night Long" shows glamorous Marti Stevens and Paul Harris who portray a couple whose marriage is almost wrecked by the schemes of an ambitious man. The film also stars Patrick McGoohan, Betsy Blair, Keith Mitchell and Richard Attenborough. On the same program fearful suspense and shocking exciting are outstanding features of "Peeping Tom" in color, starring Carl Boehm, Moira Shearer and Anna Massey. Both features are first showings and open at the Park Theatre Monday evening. Complete shows at 7.00 p.m. and 8.45 p.m.

"Fair Exchange" to Return After Undergoing Surgery

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The average family in a television comedy series, says writer-producer Cy Howard, "consists of four children, a mother who looks like Donna Reed and a father who is harmless and inoffensive, like a dentist who doesn't hurt."

All such series end the same, he adds. The daughter screams, "I'll kill myself if I don't get a new dress for graduation!" The husband then chucks the wife under the chin and grins, "She's just like her mother." Fadeout.

Howard swam against this tide of conformity at the beginning of the 1962-63 season with a new show called Fair Exchange. This one actually is new, because it offered: an hour-long comedy; two casts and locales.

The idea was to show the intermixture of Anglo-American cultures. An American child went to England to live with a family as an exchange student; the English parents sent their child to live with the American family on a reciprocal basis.

The reviews were generally good; the ratings weren't. Fair Exchange looked to be one of the season's earliest casualties.

It was indeed chopped off the air after 13 weeks. But network sometimes works in strange ways. CBS agreed to give the show another 13-week ride—if it could be cut down to a half-hour.

Howard and his parent producer, Desilu, agreed. The 50-per-cent version returns to the air March 28.

Performing this bit of surgery required some skill. Howard had invested four of his cast in England. They had to be persuaded to stand by for 2½ months until the series resumed.

"That was easy," said the comedy nose. "I gathered them around the swimming pool and read the weather report from England to them. The coldest winter in this century. Then asked them if they'd like to take a cut and stay here. Oddly enough, they agreed."

STUDY CHURCH ROLE

The role of the Christian family in a changing age will be examined in a five-part series on CBS-TV starting March 3.

This Morning Alarm Clock Uses 2 Tons of Dynamite

By GEORGE McARTHUR

ASWAN, Egypt (AP) — The morning "alarm clock" in Aswan is the roar of 8,000 pounds of dynamite.

At 6 a.m. each day some 15,000 tons of granite erupt, moving that much closer to reality the giant Aswan High Dam—Egypt's dream and President Abdel Nasser's role in history.

To back Nasser the Russians have given $400,000,000 and pledged as much again. This followed U.S. refusal to finance the dam.

The well-being of Egypt's impoverished millions could well depend on the outcome. The dam is Egypt's chance to ease the relentless pressure of its explosive population — 27,000,000 people, total which will be doubled in 25 years.

The dam will give Egypt vast electric power plus almost 1,000,000 acres of new farmland. Much of this can be reclaimed back into the economy without the need to displace any new people. Egypt hopes the effect will snowball, making her the first industrial power in the Arab world.

Aswan has the beginning of a gaudy air to transform Egypt if it spreads to the leisurely delta. Visitors note a new strength in the energy of dinsky laborers.

Even the tariff is impressive. The timeless Nile has carved a gently curving channel through the granite and once cliffs widening to embrace eroded islands reminiscent of Japanese water gardens. Blistering in midsummer, it is balmy in the winter and was long a retreat for such sophisticates as Aga Khan, whose domed tomb overlooks the city.

Fifty years ago the British built a dam here. It still stands but it is soon to be a tiny pool beside its younger brother.

CITY OF CONTRASTS

A new city is rising with thousands of bazilike air-conditioned apartments. Officials speak ambitiously of a new industrial complex—textiles, fertilizer, aluminum and even steel. For the present the dam absorbs almost all effort. There are 16,000 men working there—soon to be 30,000.

Work now is concentrated on a mile-long section between the two - thirds completed—through which the river will flow while the actual dam is constructed.

The schedule calls for completion of the diversion canal in 1963, beginning of coffer-dams early in 1964, a start on the power station in 1965, to have the first one-third of the electric power available by 1967 and completion of the whole project by 1970.

The Egyptians must resettle some 50,000 nobians who will be displaced by the 387-mile lake the dam will form. Villages already are rebuilding on reclaimed land.

PUT SHIP IN MOTH BALLS

LONDON (Reuters) — HMS Blake, one of Britain's most modern warships, will go into "mothballs" in June because of manpower shortage in the British navy, it was announced Friday. The £15,000,000 cruiser, one of three in the Royal Navy with automatic six-inch guns and described as having fire-power so deadly it could "shoot a fly out of the sky" has spent less than two years at sea.

Must Count 10 Millions Before Canada Casts Votes In Next General Election

OTTAWA (CP) — Within a six-day period a force of 40,000 men and women will have to count the heads of approximately 10,000,000 persons eligible to vote in the April 8 federal election.

Enumeration, necessary for preparation of voters' lists, begins Monday, Feb. 18—the 49th day before the election—and ends Saturday, Feb. 23.

The enumerators' principal task is to see that all who are qualified to vote get on the list.

Under the present system, introduced in 1938, two-member teams of enumerators each canvass between 250 and 300 names in urban polling divisions. The enumerators, who must be electors in the riding, are chosen by the sitting member of Parliament and by the runner-up in the last election.

For voting purposes, urban areas generally are cities and towns with populations of more than 5,000

The enumerators must make a house-to-house canvass in urban areas and may not use the telephone, but the law permits them to obtain information from janitors or neighbors. A house-to-house check is not required in the country and telephones may be used.

MISTAKES INEVITABLE

Enumerators must ascertain that each prospective voter is 21 on or before polling day, was living in the riding on the date the election writ was issued, Feb. 6, and is a Canadian citizen or a British subject with at least one year's residence in the country.

In urban areas, each enumerator receives a basic fee of $32 plus 10 cents for each name collected. In rural districts, where there is only one enumerator for each polling division, the fee is $32 plus 11 cents a name.

With only a short time to set the procedure in motion, including training enumerators, officials concede that mistakes are bound to be made.

The biggest problems usually occur in areas where there are large numbers of ethnic groups using Indian reservations.

In the 1962 election, Chief Electoral Officer Nelson Castonguay investigated a number of complaints involving enumeration and three court proceedings resulted.

They included a case in Toronto Parkdale where an enumerator, accused of putting new Canadians not qualified to vote on the list after being informed of their ineligibility, were acquitted on a technicality.

If a pair of enumerators disagree as to the qualification of any person, they must postpone their decision, report to the returning officer and be governed by whatever direction they receive from him.

A person whose name is omitted after compilation of the preliminary list may still have a chance to vote.

Between the 24th and 16th days before election day—March 15 and March 23—revising agents will call on persons in urban districts who have notified the returning officer their names were missing and find it inconvenient to appear in person at the revising officer's "court" on the 18th, 17th and 16th days before polling, March 21-22-23. The revising agents will help them make out formal applications to have their names added.

Although it rarely happens, any elector may object to the presence of any person's name on the list before the revising officer on the 17th and 18th day before polling.

He must fill out an affidavit stating the grounds of objection. A copy will be sent to the person against whom the objection is made. The revising officer deals with the objections on the 13th day before polling but the person objecting must produce "prima facie" proof acceptable in court.

In rural areas, the enumerator holds his own revision and hears applications from unlisted persons on the 18th day before the election March 21. He is paid $18 for this duty.

But in the country a qualified voter whose name is not on the list on election day may vote even then. He merely has to appear at the poll and have a person who is listed take an oath vouching for him, and take an oath himself.

The Golden Years

Neat, Proper, Legal and Nice But Nobody Asked the Widow

By THOMAS COLLINS

To the good, considerate, intelligent — but misguided — husbands, comes this appeal from a retired widow.

And there is sense in what she says.

"I address this to all husbands past age 55 in the belief that most of them are good and loving," she says. "And in the belief that they desire only what is best for their widows in case they die' . . ."

Then she proceeds to tell how they are failing and how, oddly, it is the most conscientious husband who fails worst.

"Our four children were married and on their own when my husband died soon after his retirement three years ago. He left his affairs in a manner that is well regarded nowadays in legal and family circles.

"He decreed that everything of value was to be left to me, that I was to have the benefit of it during my lifetime and that on my death everything was to pass equally to the four children.

"Neat. Proper. Legal. And nice. But did anybody ever bother to ask the widow whether she liked the arrangement.

"As a matter of fact, this particular arrangement hands to a widow the most difficult problem she has ever had to contend with . . . and one she can hardly solve with any peace of mind without stressing in rags and half-starving herself to death.

TEMPORARY CUSTODIAN

"Because what the arrangement means is that she is temporary custodian of money and property that go in the end to the children. She only holds it. And while provision is made that she gets the benefits of it — which I presume means she could legally squander it if she chose — what Mother or widow is going to feel free to take benefits? When every benefit she takes means less to go to the children?

"It doesn't matter whether a husband has only a $7,000 house and no will and says 'Mama gets it till she dies,' or whether there is a lot of money involved and everything is spelled out in a fancy will — it comes out the same.

"Every dollar Mama spends means one less dollar for the children. And every good Mama lives constantly under that thought.

"Children, too, I think are good and loving, in the main. They are selfish and grabby, as the young are prone to be. I find nothing distasteful in mine. I believe they would honestly want me to spend freely what Daddy left. I am sure they aren't peeping over fences to see what I do with this dollar or that.

"Still, since they are human, I know there must be an avarice as I am of the circumstances.

"If I sold the house, took $2,000 and made a trip to Europe, then came home to live in an apartment, my children wouldn't say anything. But they would think plenty. And if I were to do them I would too. "SHE SKIMPED"

"So what does a widow left as I was do? She skimps. She tries very hard to show she is not squandering money. She feels self-conscious every time she does, or does not, hire repairs made on the house, and every time she takes out her cheque book . . ."

How this widow would change things:

"If a man has remained married to a woman for 40 years, if she has borne and reared his children, and if he trusts her to be custodian of the family money until the children get it — then he shouldn't leave her in this psychological trap. His faith in her should go one step more. He should leave everything to her, with no strings and no provisions that she pass on to the children what she has left. If the wife was good enough to run the course to age 64, she is not likely to go out and burn the 'City Hall now . . ."

Responsibility To Provide Arms Rests On NATO

Churchill Says Choice Of Warheads Is NATO's

LONDON (AP) — Canadian Defence Minister Churchill said today on his return from a visit to Canadian forces in Europe that the provision of nuclear warheads for them will be a decision of the NATO high command.

Churchill, who flew here Saturday with Prime Minister Diefenbaker, made a spur-of-the-moment visit Sunday to the Canadian Army at Soest, West Germany, and to the RCAF base at Zweibruecken, West Germany.

A machine-gunner in the First World War, Churchill visited his old regiment, now stationed in Germany.

"Our forces in Europe, both army and air forces, have been assigned to NATO and are to be used for whatever role is considered appropriate by the NATO command," Churchill told a reporter today.

"Canada has met her commitment in providing the planes and has trained personnel to fly and maintain them, and it is the responsibility of NATO to provide the appropriate weapons."

READY FOR OPERATION

"The training of the (Honest John) missile battery is complete in every aspect, including the tactical handling and forms of loading and firing. The battery is equipped with practice missiles of the same size, length and weight as the operating war missiles. All storage facilities for missiles for war purposes have been provided and the battery is available for such operational use as is determined by the NATO command."

Churchill said the responsibility for providing "missiles for warfare" rests with NATO.

At Zweibruecken, No. 3 fighter wing of the RCAF has one squadron of Starfighter aircraft in advanced training and a second squadron in process of formation, he said.

"Practice bombs of the same shape, size and weight as the ones that will be required for war purposes are available for training. Under authority of the NATO high command, nuclear bomb storage facilities are already under construction on this base.

"This indicates that it is the responsibility of the NATO high command to provide the operational bombs available when the need arises."

LIBERAL LEADER STATES NUCLEAR POLICY IN TALK

Quebec Premier On Same Platform

MONTREAL (CP) — Liberal Leader Pearson today moved deeper into Quebec, confident, said his staff, that he has cemented a working arrangement with the Quebec Liberal Federation for the April 8 federal election.

Federal Liberals claimed tacit endorsation of Mr. Pearson by Premier Lesage of Quebec who, for the first time since he quit federal politics in 1958 to lead the Quebec Liberals, appeared on an election platform with the party's federal leader.

Mr. Pearson, who left here early today for Sherbrooke, Que., where he will make a television appearance, held a reception and address a public meeting, was reported to be pleased over another feature of his speech to the Quebec Liberal Federation annual convention here Saturday.

A source close to him said that to deal as he did with the politically tricky issue of nuclear arms was a risky undertaking—a gamble—but he was pleased he did, judging by how it was received.

On the nuclear issue, Mr. Pearson reminded the Quebec Federation Saturday that Liberal administrations at Ottawa had backed collective security through the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

APPLAUSE UNEXPECTED

He was given loud, and his staff said unexpected, applause in saying that collective security "means, among other things, nuclear weapons for defence, as long as the Russian Communist empire has them for attack."

Canada had accepted a defensive nuclear role and nuclear equipment to carry it out, "therefore as long as they are not abandoned as obsolete we have."

URGES NEGRO ACTION

DURHAM, N.C. (AP)—Governor Terry Sanford told a Brotherhood Sunday service here that the period before the 40 days of Lenten fasting.

He said the reformation and carnival was forbidden as superstition. Thus today, it is not found in the northern Protestant countries of Britain, Norway, Sweden and Denmark. But the high links of other parts of Europe have become an attraction that draw thousands of envious northerners southward.

On Political Front

Nuclear Arms Issue Now Chief Topic on Hustings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The nuclear arms issue, which led to the dissolution of Parliament, is being vigorously debated now on the election hustings across Canada.

With the April 8 federal election campaign barely off the ground, the question of nuclear weapons for Canada—now, later or never—was uppermost in weekend speeches by party leaders and other politicians.

While Prime Minister Diefenbaker was in Britain to receive the freedom of the City of London, his external affairs minister, Howard Green, defended the government's wait-and-see policy on acquisition of nuclear warheads for Canadian forces.

"At a time when there is less tension in the world, what sort of lead would Canada be giving if it rushed to get nuclear weapons?" he said in Vancouver.

In Montreal, Liberal Leader Pearson drew applause and cheers from Quebec Liberals when he declared that Canada has the problems of the world.

"This is no hour for little aims and big fears. The Commonwealth has to go forward in the strength of her spirit, for which she has a mission for all mankind.

"We must fully explore what can be done to expand trade within the Commonwealth as well as with all like-minded nations."

EXPRESSES PRIDE

Diefenbaker spoke in glowing terms about his appreciation of being made a Freeman of the City.

He noted it was on this date in 1759 that Cook was introduced in the British House of Commons creating the two Canadas—Upper and Lower Canada, now Ontario and Quebec.

The federal system later developed in Canada and patterned after the British Parliament was an example for other Commonwealth governments around the world.

"This city has been the centre of development in the past and may well provide the central initiative for a greater exchange of trade and finance which would help the Commonwealth the role of world leadership at one time held by the empire."

The prime minister, accompanied by his wife, drove from the law courts in the Strand in an open carriage loaned by the Queen. RCMP officers were included in the 10-man mounted escort.

The weather was cold but clear, with bright sun. This decided the London authorities to use the carriage rather than have the Diefenbakers travel by car.

CAUGHT WITH KEY

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard detectives seized a man waiting for a car to take the United States Sunday and found a ceremonial key used by Queen Elizabeth II to open the Commonwealth Air Forces Memorial at Runnymede a few years ago. The key, together with the visitors' book containing the Queen's signature, had been missing since last November. Booked as Robert Hendry, 52, unemployed, the man was charged with receiving.

Republic of Guinea Seeks Western Help and Influence

CONAKRY, Guinea (AP)—The Republic of Guinea, not long ago Russia's main hope for a foothold in Africa, today is seeking Western help and ties with conservative African countries.

Long-term economic commitments and pressure of some elements within the ruling party's 17-man political bureau probably will force Guinea to maintain ties with the Communist world, but the government is becoming more and more accessible to Western—and particularly United States—influence.

The U.S.-led International Corporation Pria, mining Guinea's bauxite deposits, is the country's main foreign currency supplier—some $10,000,000 a year. The Guineans are asking for more U.S. aid, which has totalled $20,000,000 since 1960, most of it in food. However, the Soviet Union has put in the equivalent of $100,000,000 in lot of money in a country of 2,500,000.

Foreign Minister Schroeder In Line for Adenauer's Job

BONN (AP)—The battle is heating up—in the slow way of West German politics—for the succession to 87-year-old Konrad Adenauer as head of government.

Economics Minister Ludwig Erhard, the man usually credited with the country's post-war boom, has long been the odds-on favorite. Coming up fast is Foreign Minister Gerhard Schroeder, sometimes called "der schoene Gerhard" (handsome Gerhard).

Erhard at 66 seems to realize that it may be now or never for him. No one would ever call him handsome, but his podgy figure, grandfatherly demeanor and ever-present cigar inspire confidence in the average German.

He hopes to become chancellor this fall, when Adenauer has promised to retire.

His chief obstacle is Aden auer, who has often said he would prefer someone elsenever identified.

The selection will be made by the dominant Christian Democrat Party.

Erhart's method of stepping up his campaign is to take every possible occasion of putting himself on view as a greater enthusiast than Adenauer for close ties with the United States and Britain. He doesn't attack Adenauer publicly. "The old man" still wields plenty of political power.

Schroeder, at 52 can still hope for the top job some day, even if Erhard gets it first.

Schroeder entered Parliament in 1949, at the age of 38. Four years later he held the key post of interior minister. He got the job of foreign minister in 1961.

Though Erhard and Schroder are a contrast in looks and style, there is not all that much difference between them

Diefenbaker Implores Commonwealth's Deeds Match Great Prospects

'Little Aims and Big Fears' Hit By New Freeman of London City

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker today became a Freeman of the City of London in a traditional ceremony at the Guildhall.

After an exchange of speeches in the ancient building, Diefenbaker was handed a silver box containing a copy of the scroll making him a "citizen" of London. The box is decorated with a Saskatchewan prairie lily in honor of Diefenbaker's association with Prince Albert, Sask.

In introducing the prime minister, City Chamberlain F. H. Stewart-Smith spoke of Canada as a country where the "treasures of nature are strung out like a priceless set of jewels."

He also referred to the "great dissensions" arising from the facts of geography that link Britain to Europe and said that Diefenbaker is a man with the "strength of mind" to draw a proper balance between the influences on Canada of the United States and the old world.

MUST PLEASE AHEAD

Diefenbaker in his speech stressed his faith in the "continuing strength" of the commonwealth. He said there is much to be done in strengthening the Commonwealth internally and in bringing its influence increasingly to bear on external problems.

He said the Commonwealth is a steadily expanding world force which must match achievements with its great prospects.

"No democratic nation wishing to join the Commonwealth would be barred, its base has been broadened further since the Second World War.

The Commonwealth must strengthen itself internally and bring more influence to bear on the problems of the world.

"This is no hour for little aims and big fears. The Commonwealth has to go forward in the strength of her spirit, for which she has a mission for all mankind.

"We must fully explore what can be done to expand trade within the Commonwealth as well as with all like-minded nations."

Richest Man Afraid He May Bore Folk

LONDON (AP) — J. Paul Getty said Sunday night he finds it hard work being a millionaire. But what disturbs him most is that people might find him a bore.

The multi-millionaire from the United States—sometimes referred to as "the world's wealthiest man"—told an interviewer:

"I always wish I had a better personality, that I could entertain better, converse more intelligently. I'm always worried of being dull."

The 70-year-old oil man, who lives and works in England on an income estimated at $11,200 an hour, told the story of his accumulation of riches and worries on a British television program.

Getty said he had the advantage of having a wealthy father, believes in "taking risks intelligently," and advises "people who are younger, more cheerful, who have a better character than I have."

He said "of all the classes I've known millionaires are the hardest working — they work long hours."

Contending small businessmen have many advantages, he rated a "successful businessman" as one with an income of about $280,000 a year.

Seven Children Of Two Families Perish in Fire

STE. FLAVIE, Que. (CP)—A coroner's inquest will be held today at nearby Mont-Joli into the deaths by fire of seven children from two families.

Their parents were all out visiting when fire Sunday swept the wooden farm house, a rented among the families of brothers Luc and Roger St. Amand.

Dead, in addition to Luc and Rejean, 6, children of Mr. and Mrs. Luc St. Amand, and Alain, 4, children of Mr. and Mrs. Roger St. Amand, died in the fire are Mrs. Luc St. Amand and the second floor.

Claudette St. Amand, Claudette's twin brother, was asleep on the first floor and awoke in a smoke-filled room. He tried to get upstairs to help the other children but couldn't.

RUNS FOR HELP

He ran to his grandfather's house nearby and the grandfather awoke neighbors. By then the house was fully ablaze.

The house collapsed and the bodies recovered.

Luc St. Amand, a farmer and the owner of the house, and his brother Roger, a store clerk in Mont-Joli, and their wives were notified of the tragedy later.

The St. Amand farm was about two miles from this village on the CNR's Montreal-Halifax line, 200 miles northeast of Quebec City.

3,000 ATTEND SOCRED RALLY IN MONTREAL

Party Against Nuclear Weapons

MONTREAL (CP) — Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson wants to prevent Canada from becoming a nuclear power.

With his deputy Real Caouette at his side, Mr. Thompson issued that pledge, Sunday as he launched his federal election campaign here before more than 3,000 persons.

"I will do all in my power to avoid Canada becoming a nuclear power or having Canada involved in a nuclear war," he said.

At the same time, Mr. Thompson said a Social Credit government would do "what is right to make sure our country is protected from an enemy from without."

Mr. Caouette, deeply tanned after an 11-day Jamaican holiday, said in a brief reference to nuclear arms: "Nuclear arms, no; bread and butter, yes."

He said the fight against the communist ideology would not be won with nuclear weapons, but with the Social Credit ideology.

"You can kill Communists or lock them up in prison, but you can't kill or lock up an ideology," he said to roaring applause from the overflow crowd that filled Atwater Market Hall.

82 Stitches Required to Close Wounds

TORONTO (CP)—Two women were slashed today in an apartment when a man ran amok brandishing two Japanese-type daggers.

Margaret Cuccio, 31, required 82 stitches to close the gashes in her back and Dorothy Fillman, 25, needed 15 stitches for her injuries.

Francis Christian, 32, of Toronto was charged on two counts of wounding.

Police said a man attacked the women after a domestic argument.

Miss Tillman tried to force the man from the apartment by hitting him over the head with an air gun.

The man fled and the two women called a taxi and were taken to hospital.

Computer Shows St. Paul Wrote Only Four of Fourteen Epistles

LONDON (AP) — Two researchers using an electronic computer have decided that St. Paul was the author of only four of the 14 Epistles in the New Testament.

Scientific evidence for their belief is to be published next month by Dr. G. H. C. Macgregor, professor of Bible criticism at Glasgow University, and Rev. A. Morton, a minister at Culross Abbey, Fife.

Together they programmed the computer with 250,000 words of Greek prose and analyzed the results of a stylistic study of the Epistles and work by other Greek authors.

Morton said:

"The results are convincing. The work is based on the principle that authors have certain habits of style that are ingrained. For the present study we have considered such things as the space between the uses of the word 'and,' repetitive uses of the word, sentences beginning with the word 'and so on.'"

Morton said their paper will present for the first time scientific evidence in support of the theory that only four of the Epistles—Romans, First and Second Corinthians, and Galatians — were written by St. Paul.

Sober West Germans, Thrifty Swiss Carouse and Dance

COLOGNE, West Germany (AP)—Sedate Dutch merchants dash into the streets for a stolen kiss with a passing girl.

Sober West Germans and thrifty Swiss carouse and dance through the night, blowing money for everyone's craziness and lots of liquor.

It is carnival time in Europe. There are confetti-battles and flowered floats at Nice on the French Riviera, and processions, costume parades, noisemaking, merry - making and fancy dress balls over much of Europe.

Custom calls for peasants' wives in parts of Germany to dance naked on the farmhouse tables — nobody knows if they still do—and for Belgian shoemakers to hunt down young girls and ensure their legs for high, high boots.

Today's Chuckle

Movies on television are just like furniture - - they're either early American or old English.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis — It is clear and cold throughout most of Ontario.

It is the occasion for Europe's most famous leaders as papier mache monarchs. President de Gaulle is the favorite this year.

What is it that gets hold of millions of Europeans this time of year? It is the pagan ecstasy of the Europeans, showing through to the 20th century, in pre-Christian times, the tribes of Europe celebrated the passing of winter and the coming of spring with wild rites.

They danced, drank, ate lustily, made noise and cavorted to drive out the evil spirits of winter. They wore wooden masks, smeared their faces and held processions to mark the thawing of the rivers.

In early Christianity, the spring rites were allowed to continue but were restricted to the period before the 40 days of Lenten fasting.

Gradually the reformation and carnival was forbidden as superstition. Thus today, it is not found in the northern Protestant countries of Britain, Norway, Sweden and Denmark. But the high links of other parts of Europe have become an attraction that draw thousands of envious northerners southward.

Federation President Would Support Federal Liberals

By ALEXANDRE FARRELL

MONTREAL (CP)—The Quebec Liberal Federation would back up its annual convention Saturday night with an appeal by new president Francois Aquin for support of the party's candidates in the April 8 federal election.

Such support would be barring Quebec's interests, Mr. Aquin told some 1,500 delegates in his inaugural address at the convention's closing banquet.

The 33 year-old Montreal lawyer said members of the Quebec Federation "should not be indifferent to the federal question.

"... We have the duty to be more than Canada a government that is stable, responsible and respectful of the sovereign rights of the state of Quebec and this government, with your collaboration, will be that of Lester B Pearson."

Premier Jean Lesage made no reference to the federal campaign, however, in his closing speech to the convention.

CIVIL SERVICE IS TOPIC

His theme was civil service reform in Quebec and he said the choice and promotion of civil servants must be based on their competence, not their political affiliation.

Mr. Lesage and Mr. Pearson stood together to acknowledge delegates' cheers at a convention banquet addressed by the federal leader Saturday.

It was their only joint public appearance during Mr. Pearson's weekend campaign visit to Montreal, but a federal party spokesman said it was "an important symbol of unity, it's what we've been hoping for."

Two resolutions supporting Mr. Pearson's stand on nuclear weapons were submitted to the convention but they never even reached the committee stage. Their sponsors withdrew them on the grounds that nuclear weapons are not a provincial matter and therefore not a concern of the provincial federation.

Mr. Pearson got some applause in his Saturday speech, however, when he outlined his platform. He said Canada, while continuing to strive for world disarmament, in the meantime must accept nuclear warheads for defensive weapons to fulfill mutual defence obligations in collaboration with her allies.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED

Among major resolutions adopted at the final plenary session, the provincial federation:

1. Went on record in favor of a public health insurance plan, requesting the Lesage government to speed up its current study of health insurance "so that such a plan may be put into operation no later than 1964."

2. Recommended abolition of the Quebec Legislative Council, the province's upper house remaining in Canada.

3. Asked the Quebec government to press the federal government into keeping the provinces informed "fully and in advance" of Ottawa's monetary and fiscal policies.

4. Urged the province to continue its efforts to obtain an amendment to the federal constitution that would allow creation of a provincial lottery.

A resolution asking the federation to condemn "any statement or insinuation emanating from Canada that could in any way be regarded to be anti-American" was defeated in a floor vote.

One of the speakers opposing the resolution said "the United States can be criticized just as well as any other country."

"Brotherhood Week" Marked At Eastminster

Eighty-two men representing Emmanuel (Baptist), Holy Trinity (Anglican), Sons of Jacob, St. Margaret's (Anglican), St. Joseph (Roman Catholic) and Eastminster (United) sat down to a potluck supper in the auditorium of Eastminster United Church on February 20, at which time they were observing "Brotherhood Week".

After a hearty meal and a sing-song the meeting settled down to various discussions on the enlargement of the fellowship of men. • Mr. Ken Shulman brought a message from the Sons of Jacob congregation. He used as the basis of his message a recent editorial in the Toronto Globe and Mail.

The guest speaker of the evening introduced by Mr. Frank Barrett of St. Andrew's was Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. R. Sullivan from St. Michael's. The Monsignor stated that 25 years ago it would be unheard of for a representative of the Roman Catholic Church to stand when he was speaking to a group representing many churches and in a United Church auditorium, or vice-versa for that matter. It was through the efforts of men to find a common ground for fellowship that he was able to speak to such a group.

Delving into history the speaker showed how scholars in all faiths had through the years sought for a common ground on which to meet until the present when they are closer to agreement than at any time in history.

CAS Requests Room for Mental Health Clinic

Mental health and its effects on family life in the community has come under scrutiny by the Belleville Children's Aid Society.

A recent meeting of the society's board of directors, a resolution was authored petitioning Belleville General Hospital to consider suitable quarters for a full-time mental health clinic. At present a clinic operates in the city once a week.

Local CAS director Bruce Kerr said that in his opinion poor mental health was the greatest single contributing factor in family problems involving his organization. He paid tribute to the service now being rendered the Belleville area by Dr. Roger Billings, of Kingston, and the staff of the present one-day clinic.

The resolution to the hospital's Board of Governors was followed by endorsements of another petition calling for inclusion of a psychiatrist unit in current expansion plans.

170 IN WARD CARE

Mr. Kerr also reported there were 170 children in the ward care of the society at the end of January. Seven children were admitted during the month, three from Rawdon, three from Bancroft and one from Belleville. Six left the care of the society having been legally adopted or returned to the custody of their parents.

Mr. Kerr stated that all financial and statistical reports for 1962 submitted to the society by the director of child welfare have been submitted, that is all but the audit and the records has been completed and that the per diem rate in respect of the care of children in ward care has been established by the court at $2.34, a decrease of .07c from the previous year.

ASK FOR GRANT

The board instructed Mr. Kerr to request a grant from the city for $3,200, and an allocation from the Belleville United Appeal. Approximately 50 per cent of the cost of providing counselling services to families and children and unmarried parents and an emergency protection service in the city is borne by the United Appeal.

Mr. Kerr made mention of the participation of Mrs. Jenette Thompson, the supervisor of child adoption placement, in a current project of the Catholic Women's Leagues. This project, which is province wide, is designed to stimulate interest in the adoption of Roman Catholic children who are wards of Ontario's Children's Aid Societies. According to statistics there are many such children available for permanent placement, particularly in the school-age group. Locally, there are but few Roman Catholic children available but interested couples will be put in touch with agencies in other parts of the province where the situation is acute.

Italy, Holland Refuse to Aid French Colonies

BRUSSELS (AP)—Italy and The Netherlands took the lead today in striking back at France in the rioting body of the European Common Market gathered for the first time since the French vetoed Britain's entry into the group.

Both the Italians and Dutch made plain that they would not now sign a new treaty for trade and aid with 18 African states, all but two of them former French colonies.

The delay means that for another year at least Frenchmen will have to pay higher prices for African coffee and bananas, among other things.

Under the new agreement, aid to African producers from a six - nation $730,000,000 fund would have taken the place of subsidies France has paid. The fund also is to help the Africans develop new crops and industries.

The Common Market council of ministers is meeting for a five-day session in an atmosphere tense with resentments. The other five members — West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg — are angry with the French for black balling Britain in her membership bid. The French feel the others are ganging up on them.

The African treaty was to have been signed this week at Yaounde, Cameroon. Now it seems likely to be deferred at least until the end of May. By that time Italy and The Netherlands will have elected new parliaments.

United Nations Special Fund Under Attack

By MILTON BESSER

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—The United Nations Special Fund is a Communist plot, the United States and it is watched over by a former American industrialist.

Just now it is under fire in congress because of a proposed agricultural project in Chile.

Paul G. Hoffman, managing director of the fund, is confident that when tempers subside the critics will agree that the fund deserves continued U.S. support.

The General Assembly set up the fund in 1958, after a decade of debate on how the United Nations should help to finance development of poor nations.

An annual target of $100,000,000 was set for both the fund and an expanded program of UN technical assistance. All contributions are voluntary. The $100,000,000 goal has not been reached in any one year.

HAS 226 PROJECTS

Currently the fund is administering 226 projects in 75 countries, nearly $39,000,000. It is putting up $233,000,000 and the recipient countries the remainder.

The United States has pledged a total of $100,400.

Under the resolution setting up the fund, political considerations are ruled out in considering projects. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold says this has kept the fund from protesting about projects for Nationalist China, South Korea and South Viet Nam while supporting $745,500 from the fund, and the Arabs from protesting about projects for Israel.

The $3,000,000 Cuban project would assist the central agricultural station at Havana and Vegas in carrying out experiments for a five-year period aimed at expelling agricultural pests. The fund would put up $1,137,800 and Cuba the remainder.

Winter Carnival In Quebec City Great Success

Though 300,000 residents and visitors filled the narrow streets of this snow-covered city during the Winter Carnival weekend, authorities reported little trouble.

High point was the parade Saturday night. The walled part of the city was lit by flaming torches, streets was banned to traffic and jammed by people.

One man sat on a trotte - a light standard, others climbed fire escapes to get a better view of the bands, the pretty girls and the illuminated figures on the floats.

On the sidewalks, they danced and sang carnival songs as the bands went by. It was a keep warm in near-zero temperatures.

About 250,000 people lined the St. Lawrence Sunday to watch the rugged, treacherous canoe races across the ice - packed river. They saw Henri Fortier, a longshoreman, lead his crew to victory over the La Lancaise brothers, winners for the last six years.

VICTORY — William Shannon, (centre) greets delegates after result of final ballot is announced confirming him as Liberal candidate in Hastings-Frontenac. He was selected only after four votes were taken at the Marmora convention Saturday. With him are Robert Temple (left), South Hastings candidate, and Tom Neal, Hastings-Frontenac standard bearer in the 1962 election, whom Mr. Shannon defeated on the final ballot Saturday.

William A. Shannon, Reeve Of Marmora, Chosen Liberal Candidate for Hastings-Fr.

In a constituency conceded as a Progressive - Conservative stronghold, it took local Liberals nearly three hours and four ballots to chose a candidate for the April 8th general election.

Victor of the convention floor contest at a crowded Marmora town hall assembly, was William A. Shannon, reeve of Marmora and the party's candidate in the 1958 election.

Among the four other bidders for the nomination was Thomas Neal, the Northbrook man who fought the riding last year for the Liberals. Mr. Shannon defeated the former candidate on the final ballot.

The other nominees in order of elimination were Mallory Hamilton, Havelock; William Smith, Centreville and Carl Heal:, Marmora.

Mr. Shannon's selection came after a blunt pre-nomination speech in which he told the party delegates he would be no "chore-boy" for them, and that his election would be as much their responsibility as his own.

He reiterated his remarks after his nomination, calling for a massive committee effort from party workers "to help not me, but yourselves and your country".

"If the atmosphere of this hall could be cut into the riding, this victory could spell a good omen for our party in this constituency", he declared.

WANT TO MAKE HISTORY AGAIN

Mr. Shannon, member of Hastings County Council and a county representative for several years on the Belleville General Hospital board of governors, contrasted Canada's current economic atmosphere with that under former Liberal administration.

But, he said, the achievements of Liberal government are "history."

"We want to make history again. We are going to have to get back to Liberal government."

All the nominees were on common ground in speaking of the constituency. They accepted its long partiality to Conservative candidates, but also firmly believed it could be won back by their party.

(Hastings-Frontenac was won by the Liberals in 1935 but regained in 1941 by the now Speaker of the Senate, George S. White. Senator White held the riding until 1957 when he surrended its representation to the late Sidney Smith, whom Prime Minister Diefenbaker appointed Canada's Minister for External Affairs. Mr. Smith died the following year and Hastings-Frontenac is now represented by Rodney Webb.

The constituency can also be something of a physical nightmare for any candidate running an election campaign. It straddles a region roughly ranging east from Peterborough to north of Kingston, and has four concentrations of population. Its area counts 48 townships; it is serviced by 11 newspapers, only two of them dailies; two television stations and four radio stations, which only cover only a portion of the riding).

Some of the delegates said they had driven nearly 100 miles to Saturday's convention. Most of them arrived by 1.30 p.m. The final ballot result was not announced until 6 p.m.

The blunt talk applied by the nominees to local political prospects and the national economic situation carried over into the major address of convention —delivered by Robert Temple, Liberal candidate in the neighboring riding of Hastings South. The party has to be backed by any Liberal administration returned to government — and the election itself — were not going to be easy, said Mr. Temple.

"And there's no sense me stanoing up and telling you it is. We are all grown up Canadians", he declared as the delegates applauded.

His address contained three distinct variations on the party's campaign theme:

(1) Rebuttal of Conservative charges against Liberal Opposition tactics;

(2) The main Liberal campaign recovery-now-social-benefits-later theme;

(3) The defence issue.

The Diefenbaker administration fell over the nuclear arms controversy, Mr. Temple said.

"If it had not been the defence issue it would have fallen for other reasons. Its leadership crumbled when faced with a major crisis it could not stand".

ASKS QUESTIONS

The Liberals have been castigated for obstructionism and would again be charged with it during the current election campaign.

"But what did we obstruct? A budget? We haven't even seen it. A long-term program for expansion of industry and trade? It was not even presented. An economic crisis? We were not even allowed to discuss it."

It could be said against the Diefenbaker administration: "You've done nothing. You were a do nothing government and you brought Canada down to the condition it is in today," said Mr Temple.

He said past Liberal governments had introduced Canada's contemporary welfare measures.

"However, we cannot increase them until we get the economy moving.

"First of all we have to clean up the mess", he added. "One way we are going to do this is through new industry."

The Liberals planned an all-out drive for industrial settlement through tax, depreciation and planning incentives. However, this did not mean socialism.

"We believe in Canada. We do not believe in regimentation," he said.

"I know this is going to cost money," admitted Mr. Temple. "But it is going to make money and we cannot afford not to do it."

MUST HAVE EDUCATION

A long-range part of the assault on a flagging economy would be carried through on educational frontiers to train personnel for the jobs of current business and industry.

"Statistics show that the majority of the unemployed today are young men who have not the necessary qualifications through education to have and hold their jobs."

He outlined Liberal program proposals for student scholarships and the student loan fund.

"It is not enough to say let others do it. We have to make sure the opportunity is there."

"When hundreds of thousands are out of work, this is something. It will, if allowed to continue, bring Canada to a very, very bad state.

On defence Mr. Temple told the convention that Canada was a member of Nato and Norad — "Norad is a defensive alliance and it is intended to defend Canada and the United States . . . the North American continent."

It was an unfortunate fact of life that the safest and surest way to prevent war was to be strong. Two world wars had proved that.

"The lesson is so obvious. It is right there."

The nuclear weapons involved in the current controversy — arming of the Bomare and the Voodoo fighter — are "solely defensive in purpose," he stated.

DOESN'T MAKE SENSE

Without them the rockets and planes which Canada already possessed were useless.

"We have $700 million worth of guns and we haven't got a bullet. This doesn't make sense."

The Prime Minister had made his decision in spite of his own defence minister and the chiefs of staff.

"I suggest Mr. Diefenbaker is no expert in this thing, as well as he is no expert in many other things.

"We are accustomed to defending — and defending ourselves. Mr. Diefenbaker is indecisive and it is his indecision that has led to all this."

Diefenbaker Will Speak At Nominating Meet Here

South Hastings Progressive Conservatives will get their election campaign officially underway on Friday, March 8, when Prime Minister John Diefenbaker will be the guest speaker at the nominating convention to be held at Belleville Collegiate at 8.00 p.m. Announcement of the convention date was made today by riding association secretary, Ray Gunsolus.

Lee E. Grills, riding member in the last parliament, is expected to again be the choice of South Hastings Conservatives to carry the party standard in the April 8th election.

Party supporters are doing a lot of behind the scenes work but their candidate will have just four weeks to campaign for the April vote.

Britain and U.S. Opposed To Mixed Crews in Polaris

By HAROLD MORRISON

WASHINGTON (CP)—A well-informed Western authority says Britain and the United States are opposed to the inclusion of mixed crews in any atomic Polaris submarines they may assign as part of a proposed North Atlantic nuclear force.

He said also that while some NATO countries may subscribe to the contribution of mixed crews on surface ships armed with Polaris missiles, this idea, raised by the U.S., does not appeal to Britain and Britain will not participate in it.

However, both Britain and the U.S. do agree, he added, that authority over any NATO nuclear force should be apportioned among member countries on the basis of their contributions to such a force in money, crews and equipment. In other words, if a member country makes no contribution, it would have no voice whatever in the force's operation.

They will be used before the NATO council at Paris where Livingston Merchant, President Kennedy's special envoy, now is engaged in finding out how many countries would be interested in a surface-ship or submarine nuclear force and what contribution they would be prepared to make to speed developments.

Britain, which has received a great deal of secret technical help from the U.S., will build three or four nuclear submarines and acquire the Polaris missiles from the U.S., equipping them with British - built warheads These, the authority estimated, should be ready by about 1968.

Because of heavy costs involved, some NATO countries might not be able to build or buy atomic submarines but they might be able to share in maintenance and operational costs and in the contribution of crews.

Key figures in the U.S. navy and Atomic Energy Commission have come up with the idea of allowing European seamen on U.S. nuclear vessels and the suggestion is that that surface ships might, in some cases, do just as well.

At his press conference last week, Kennedy said the surface fleet "could probably more easily multi-nation-manned."

A more detailed Anglo-American examination of the proposals opened here last week with British embassy Minister Dennis Greenhill and U.S. State Secretary William Tyler participating and it indicated that some navy-to-navy body-to-board or committee — would have to be set up. This would have to be a number for the NATO council to recommend.

A second close to Canada will said the Anglo-U.S. talks were not designed to produce any concrete proposals but rather on various suggestions were raised.

The hope is that some concrete plan may be ready for presentation to the next NATO ministerial meeting in Ottawa in May.

Greenhill is reported to have made clear that Britain wants no part of a plan proposed by Gen. Lauris Norstad, retired NATO supreme commander, who suggested a NATO executive committee made up of Britain, the U.S. and France to handle field control over a NATO nuclear force.

Greenhill at first suggested that political-military direction be handled by a body made up of the 10 larger NATO countries, including Canada.

Kennedy is known to favor the Norstad plan but his aides said he would be willing to compromise by enlargement of the strategy-control group to about six or seven NATO powers which have expressed readiness to participate in a multilateral force.

On the basis of the Greenhill-Tyler talks, it appeared likely that these latter countries—Germany, Italy and Belgium—might be able to contribute only surface ships armed with Polaris weapons.

The question of participation will be explored further today in U.S. talks with West German Defence Minister Kai-Uwe Von Hassel who has arrived for his first ministerial visit to Washington.

Offer Snowdon $135,000 to Switch Jobs

WOLVERHAMPTON, England (Reuters)—The Earl of Snowdon, Princess Margaret's husband, has been offered a salary of £45,000 ($135,000) a year, to switch jobs from The Sunday Times, a national newspaper, to a local — the Wolverhampton Pride.

The Pride is only three months old and claims a daily circulation of 30,000. Lord Snowdon works as artistic adviser at an undisclosed salary on the color supplement of The Sunday Times, owned by Canadian-born Roy Thomson.

The Wolverhampton newspaper insisted Saturday its offer was bona fide. The director said he had sent a telegram to Snowdon offering him the job of "adviser on the photographic side of the newspaper."

"We have had no reply yet," they added.

Africans Visit Bata Shoe Co.

TRENTON — On Saturday, ten members of the African Student Association of Toronto toured the Bata Shoe Company plant at Batawa. The tour was conducted by John Pahebnicky of the Bata sales division.

The students, all of whom attend the University of Toronto, took an active interest in plant operations, as shown by their searching questions put to Anthony Cekota, director of technical research with the local plant, in a question and answer period following the tour.

In the afternoon, the students visited the Bata ski hill.

Car Hits Tree

TRENTON—Trenton police report a quiet weekend in spite of slippery road conditions.

Out in Murray Township, a car driven by Harold Edward Rice was considered a complete write-off, with damages estimated at $1,000, following an accident on the 6th concession road, early Saturday.

Provincial police at Brighton say that Mr. Rice lost control of his vehicle at an intersection on the Kidd Sideroad. The car skidded across an intersection and struck a tree. Mr. Rice escaped with minor lacerations to his ear and chest. He was treated by Dr. J. K. Beach of Frankford.

Admissions numbered 452 and 74 babies were born. There were 15 deaths.

In the out-patients' department, 692 persons were treated and emergencies numbered 337.

Major operations performed numbered 67; minor 116.

In the laboratory, 7,808 tests were conducted, while 1,424 tests were sent out to other hospitals or to government agencies.

Plan Day of Prayer

TRENTON—World Day of Prayer services will be held at Bethel Temple in Trenton on March 1. The program was prepared this year by Mrs. David Chung of Korea and the theme of the service is "More than Conquerors."

Offerings from the service are used to support non-English magazines, projects of the Canadian Council of Churches, the Canadian Bible Society and several other co-operative church agencies.

Speed Breeds Safety

In the automobile business there is a saying to the effect that the racing cars of today breed the family cars of tomorrow. Few automobile users probably realize that such items as rear view mirrors, four-wheel brakes, hydraulic brakes and now disc brakes found their genesis in the race cars of yesteryear.

Although the sports car buff might sneer at the automatic transmission as thoroughly unsporting, nevertheless this device was proven reliable in such vintage racing vehicles as the M.G. and the Rorach-Talbot in the 1930's.

Seat belts, probably the greatest safety innovation in the past 20 years, were first proven in racing circles and were required equipment there several years before the public became aware of them.

It is, therefore, encouraging to see that the American firms have started to realise the disadvantage in which their people to stay away from competition and racing of several years ago placed them.

The Ford Motor Car Company announced a short time ago that it was breaking its pledge and taking up racing. The old buffs probably felt this was a mere publicity gimmick and would result in little more than such activity as putting bucket seats—a sports car endearment—in the family sedan.

Ford neither dabbled nor dawdled, however. In short order it produced the "Mustang," presumably a prototype of a new domestic sports car, and engaged a rather rapid Texan named Carroll Shelby to design a competitive machine with major components, like the engine, by Ford.

The result is a racing machine of truly formidable performance, enough so that it is considered to be a very strong contender to take top honors at the Sebring International 12-Hour Endurance Race, an event which regularly sees the finest racing machinery from around the world in competition.

Whether the new Ford, called the "Cobra," will win or not remains to be seen. One thing is sure. It will surely raise as much comment as did Henry's "999", which was driven by a cigar smoker by the name of Barney Oldfield, back in the days when just to step up into a car was considered a daring feat, indeed.

It should also be noted that General Motors has been making great use of the racing successes which its Corvettes have experienced in the hands of private owners. The Corvette transmission and brake system can now be had on various of that firm's family sedans.

Whatever the degree of success encountered on the racing circuits, the average motorist is bound to come out ahead. There is no harsher test of a car's reliability and the soundness of its design than race course driving. The flaws found on the circuit will never appear on the road and the advantages realized will soon filter down to the mass production line.

Notice that Ford is the only firm to offer seat belts as standard equipment on its next models. This racing game does bring about changes quickly. It may be fast but it has to be safe.

Profitable Purification

Dominion Foundries and Steel Limited has developed a method of recovering commercial steel from the flue dust which once spewed out of the chimneys of blast furnaces. Equipment for trapping the dust has been installed, and the plans are to form it into briquettes, which can be returned to the furnace.

The Canadian steel industry is pleased with the development, of course. It has been losing about 50 pounds of ore dust up to the chimney for each ton of steel produced. But the Canadian public has more reason to be grateful, as long as the profit potential can keep those 50 pounds of dust out of the air we breathe.

The delays of the law are notorious. Striking proof of that is that actress Elizabeth Taylor has just received $40,000 in settlement of her suit against the owners of the plane in which Michael Todd died. The crash occurred a husband ago. When one has to spend all one's wedded life—and more—seeking solace for sudden widowhood, the inequities of the law are self-evident.

Peace is generally good in itself, but it is never the highest good unless it comes as a handmaid of righteousness; and it becomes a very evil thing if it serves merely as a mask for cowardice and sloth, or as an instrument to further the ends of despotism or anarchy.—Theodore Roosevelt.

Afternoon Council Meetings Criticized

Editor
Ontario Intelligencer

I am sure that a great many probably a majority, of Belleville residents will regret the decision of City Council to adhere to the afternoon meeting hours.

This timing definitely does deprive most residents of their right to be present at council meetings and it also has a much more serious effect which does not seem to have been properly considered. That is that the holding of council meetings during normal working hours virtually limits membership of the council to persons who are retired, to those owning their own business and to a further minority who have exceptionally indulgent employers.

A great many able people are therefore excluded and deterred from offering thismselves for municipal office.

In effect the present timing of Council (and committee) meetings can easily become a tool for self-perpetuation of the Council. When one considers how few people contested the vacancies at the last municipal election one can only speculate as to what extent this has already become a factor in the composition of City Council.

I suggest that as many residents as possible should express their views to council members on this, the request that the matter be re-considered with at least a public referendum be held.

Suggests Diverting More Milk to Cheese

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Sir: A few days ago there appeared in the news columns of this newspaper, a report of a brain producers' meeting at which the speaker stated that the amount of Canadian cheddar cheese exported to Great Britain last year was several million pounds short of the demand, and if we wanted to keep and extend this market, the production of Canadian cheddar cheese would have to be increased accordingly. He also stated that the domestic consumption of butter cheddar cheese was increasing.

We now have a very large butter surplus which is a matter of great concern to the Federal Government, and also to the taxpayers, the payment of its drain upon the federal treasury. Now, why can't a certain amount of milk now used in butter production be diverted to the cheese industry with benefits to both. Exports will be increased, which is what we need, and our butter surplus will be reduced, which is also needed.

Also, why not a campaign by the Federal Government to induce all restaurants and hotels to give a small piece of our cheddar cheese with each meal, about twice the size of the pat of butter they now provide. I think these ideas if put into effect would go a long way towards solving our surplus butter and fresh whole milk problems.

But the gun that won the West did not immediately gain acceptance and the company failed in 1842. During the Mexican War, 1846-48, Colt received a government order for 1,000 revolvers and his business grew rapidly. His invention birthed him one of the outstanding fortunes of the period.

A very successful supper meeting of the Men's Association was held in Bridge Street United Church Sunday School at which Professor John D. Robins of Victoria College, Toronto, addressed the Club on Negro Spirituals. A graduate of Albert College, Professor Robins, in a very informative address pointed out that contrary to the common belief, negro spirituals did not originate with the negro; rather they were borrowed from the white man whose evangelistic efforts of the early 19th century to bring Christianity to the negroes of the south, were partly responsible for the birth of the spiritual as we know it.

Acting on a complaint from officials of the Standard Chemical Company operating 10 miles north of Harcourt and about 35 miles northwest of Bancroft, that dogs were running at large and killing deer, Provincial Officer S. W. Palmateer of Bancroft, accompanied by Game Overseer M. J. Inwood of Cobourg, proceeded by gas car to Harcourt Station.

From here the officers commenced the ordeal of hunting down the dogs which numbered three. The officers counted twelve deer ranging about on the snow-covered ice of Benoirs Lake. The first dog finally met his doom on Friday afternoon and the second dog was wounded Saturday morning, but it travelled five miles to a farmer's home where it was killed later. Saturday afternoon the dog was killed. It was learned later a careful tally that the dogs had killed 35 deer and badly injured three others during the short hunt.

Tely Letter To Lester

Toronto Telegram

Dear Mike: For your sake and only your sake I don't go argued challenging other political leaders to debates on television.

As Hon. Lester Bowles Pearson you're quite well on the floor of the House of Commons and fairly well on the political platform. But alone his is quite another thing. Think twice or three times before you embark on this precarious venture.

It looks easy, when you see and hear interviewers doing their acts in front of cameras and microphones. But it ISN'T Lester; really it isn't.

In a way it's one of the most treacherous instruments invented by man. It can be insulting, too. Any TV actress will tell you that the moment you appear on that dazzling screen you gain about ten pounds (visually), that a sad usually around the jowls.

The voice that she knows as deep and important can become shrill and petulant when filtered through that speaking tube that's hung around your neck. The voice you know and love —level and firm—can emerge from the TV recording as dulcet as a dove's and just about as compelling.

Again, nothing personal about these remarks; they are generalizations.

On the other hand, of course, there are young men with firm chins, fair and a high school education who have come before the cameras and be quite convincing as great statesmen or most distinguished physicians and surgeons.

These are the lucky ones; but remember when, daring people to debate with you before the cameras that you might just come up against one of them. It could be disastrous.

This is a capricious medium you're flirting with.

Especially at a time when TV personalities as well as their key stars, professional wrestlers and sportscasters-cum-hockey scholars are being enticed by the television avenue to Parliament, this is a difficult league in which to compete.

We have nothing against you, Mike (we like your stand on continental defense). We have nothing against TV some of our best friends are in the business).

But we would like to warn you that the TV studio is not the place in the building that it's a tricky channel and, not one that you should venture into without great caution.

Animals More Efficient Than Human Beings

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The cult of adjustment in our time urges us to adjust to our environment and our society, as though adjustment were a good thing in itself. But if we are asked to "adjust" to something bad, then the more we adjust, the worse we become.

A persuasive argument might be made, indeed, that people should be called the Maladjusted Animal. It is because man is basically maladjusted that he is unique in nature, and dominates the natural world.

The octopus, the beaver, the bird, the insect — all are perfectly adjusted to their environment and their needs. This is why animals have no history, but only a repetitious biological progress. Each is more refined times more efficient, and better adjusted, than we are — but no all of these things being more, nor can do anything differently, than his grandfather. Each is perfectly adjusted. It is interesting how Pelican book, "Personality in the Modern World", Prof. M. J. Eysenck defines tersely and effectively what we mean by maladjustment. It takes efficiency, pertinacity, fortitude, dexterity, as the measures of excellence, and cannot claim any natural pre-eminence for man. It is, in fact, not surprising that, among the many man off from the rest of the animal creation."

Then he goes on to say: "It is because man is maladjusted — which is evident in the discrepancy between aspiration and capacity, vision and performance — have there arisen all the distinctively human activities: scientific inquiry, artistic creation, philosophical speculation, and the appreciation and diffusion of them all), historical experience."

Historical change, Prof. Jeffries reminds us, is peculiar to man, and lifts man life on to a plane of its own. "When Caesar landed in Britain, when the Phoenicians sailed the seas, when men first learnt to make fire — ant's nests were no worse and no better organized communities than they are now."

We are concerned with education precisely because we are a maladjusted animal, because we are not determined by our structure and environment but are able to change and adapt external circumstances, rather than "adjusting" to the earth, which we have to do to us. This is both our glory and our despair. We have the power to learn, which alone makes us human, but also the power to fail, which other animals do not.

Each new plateau reached by the human race has been the result of some maladjustment — and it is no accident that personally maladjusted individuals have usually been responsible for our greatest leaps in level of comprehension and sensitivity. We have a right to ask that we co-operate for the common good, but not that we lose our maladjustment in the common beliefs.

Are Planning Space Patrol

By Clive Baxter
in The Financial Post

In the really industrialized war centres — i.e., the Pentagon and its opposite number in Moscow — the problem of the moment is space warfare. The experts are discussing the tactics to use with a satellite which has a built-in nuclear warhead.

If either side put a few dozen of these into orbit, they would rotate out there as the perfect deterrent (if it happens to belong to you) or blackmail weapon (if it belongs to the other chap). Both the United States and Russia have ordinary satellites up there and add new ones from time to time. Both have proven ability to add dozens more any time they feel like it.

So what to do? An obvious solution would be to send up an interceptor space ship and have a look. If you can't tell from the outside what it is carrying, obviously you get out and go over to it and open it up. Then if it is harmless, put it back together again, mark it "safe" and let it continue on its orbital way.

This appears to be the widest of science fiction fantasy. But it isn't. The United States Department of Defence is currently debating whether to go ahead with advanced studies into a multi-billion dollar project code named "Blue Gemini". This would be a manned satellite with a pure Buck Rogers mission. To intercept, identify, inspect and, if necessary, destroy "hostile" satellites.

The debate now is not whether it can or should be done. It is whether the cost is worthwhile. Some of the space age military thinkers believe it would be better to concentrate on relatively simple missiles that could be sent up to destroy the other fellow's satellite without asking questions. They point out that one is a spaceman and is taken somebody's satellite to pieces out there it is unlikely he could put it back into exact order. So the Russians, or whoever the owner might be, would get mad anyway. They probably wouldn't get any madder, the argument goes, if you simply destroyed it altogether. This, by the way, isn't a problem to be solved at some far off date. Significant military operations in space are expected to begin early in the 1970s, perhaps even sooner.

To Your Good Health

Heartburn, Hiccups Caused By Many Different Things

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes heartburn and hiccups and what is the cure?

I have both troubles — heartburn after eating only one slice of bread. And for hiccups I tried everything including some old-fashioned superstitions. — H. C. D.

Heartburn? Many causes. Spicy and irritating foods; inflammation of esophagus or gullet; regurgitation of stomach contents back up into the gullet (hiccups could cause that to happen); any disorder of the upper intestinal tract, including ulcer of stomach or duodenum; hiatal hernia, or gall stones. Also excessive alcohol, tobacco or coffee use; hyperacidity, which is an excessive secretion of digestive juices.

The cure? The first rule of health is to find out the cause before choosing a treatment. Medication, diet, cutting down on something you are getting too much of — all of these are good cures if applied to the right cause. In some instances surgery may be required, but that will mean you are correcting more than just the heartburn.

Now for hiccups. Causes most frequently are overeating or eating too fast; irritation of the diaphragm, kidney or liver disease; and habit.

My best suggestion is to take this up with your doctor when you see him concerning the heartburn. It is entirely possible that correcting one will correct the other.

I have no pet remedy for hiccups. There are as many so-called hiccup cures as there are "cold cures" and very few of them do any more good. Breathing into a paper bag, or holding your breath are probably as effective as any.

What about getting heartburn from only slice of bread? It is literally impossible, in the rather unusual, because bread is bland and non-irritating.

Too often a particular item of food is blamed for distress when some other factor is the real cause. However, if the bread really does cause it, you might be hypersensitive to wheat.

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes a wheezing sound in the chest? Does it signify a lung or heart disorder? — K. H.

Not necessarily — it can be asthma, bronchitis or a throat ailment. But some of these may intensify heart or lung trouble, so a thorough check-up is in order.

Dear Dr. Molner: We have six healthy children, aged 4 to 16 and they each drink a quart of homogenized milk a day. With all the rumors about cholesterol and strontium 90, my wife thinks we should discontinue or at least curtail their milk consumption. What's your verdict. — J.W.

Here's my view on the verdict. After seeing thousands of milk-drinking youngsters grow up strong and healthy, I've got to have more than theories or notions to persuade me to avoid a food that has done so much for us.

Concerning cholesterol, it seems more to the point to be cautious about other sources of animal fats. We need some fat in the diet and the butterfat in milk is a good source. Milk also is rich in calcium, which is needed for strong bones and teeth.

As to strontium 90 — it's a study, as does all radioactivity, but I can't see any reason for giving up milk.

Attention all women" For the pamphlet, "The Pre-Menstrual Blues," write to Dr. Molner in care of The Children's Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10c in coin to cover handling. This pamphlet may help you.

THE PACKSACK

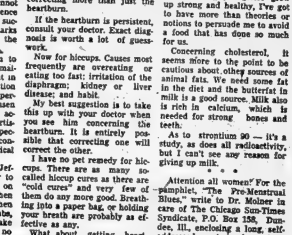
By GREGORY CLARK

When last year's federal election was announced, as old retired ward-heeler I wrote the Packsack offering the suggestion that the four political parties adopt jingles for use on radio and TV.

"All the big businesses", he said, "the soap corporations, the trust companies, everybody has snappy little jingles set to live tunes. Why not the political parties?"



As far as I know, nobody took my idea. Maybe it came too late to be adopted. I have just had a new communication from my old friend, the ward-heeler. He goes farther.

"Background music", he says, "is now an essential part of communication. How about background music for political speeches? Mr. Diefenbaker could have organ music, a Bach fugue for instance. Mr. Pearson could use parts of Beethoven's fifth symphony. The Social Credit could use one of these modern atonal compositions, say by Hindesmith or Stravinsky. And the National Democrats could have a good romping Sunday school hymn, like 'Bringing In the Sheaves'. What do you think?

Kennedy Takes Issue With Tax Cut Critics

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy took blunt issue today with critics of his tax-cut plan, saying they have an obligation to offer positive alternatives if they don't like his package.

Kennedy said his proposal would promote the kind of economic growth that could add a total of $5,000 to the income of the average U.S. family during the next 10 years.

In an address prepared for a symposium sponsored by the American Bankers Association, Kennedy said his own tax bill may not be perfect. He acknowledged it "is now under attack from both the left and the right."

But the attackers, he said, are under some obligation to put forward a solution of their own" to the growth-rate problem if they don't like his idea of cutting taxes by $10,200,000,000 during the next three years.

Per Jacobsson, managing director of the International Monetary Fund, shared the platform with Kennedy. Jacobsson said the European Common Market should look outward and associate with other areas of the free world. France recently vetoed British membership in the six nation European trade group.

CRITICIZES TALK

Kennedy was particularly biting in references to what he termed "heated talk about budget increases — partisan talk about swollen federal payrolls . . . exasperated talk about increasing the deficit . . . and finally, rash talk about a crushing debt burden."

He said civilian budget-ary penditures are decreasing, the federal payroll is getting smaller in relation to the population. the deficit would be bigger than ever if inaction on taxes hastened a recession and the national debt "is not only manageable but steadily declining" in relation to the size of the economy.

HOAX SELLS OIL

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)—A hoax telegram reporting an oil strike today touched off a flurry of buying at the stock exchange here. A company statement denied the authenticity of the telegram after 15,000 shares of its stock changed hands.

Charles Greatrix Completes 38½ Years With Fire Dept.

"The radio station had me going through the cemetery gate", said Lt. Charles Greatrix in possing comment on the closest brush he had with death during his 38½ years' service with the Belleville Fire Department.

The incident occurred during the Chamber of Commerce fire on the Junction Bone block about 13 years ago in -28 deg. temperature. Lt. Greatrix was gung up a ladder when he met a load of burning debris which had decided to come down at the same time.

Outside of a broken leg suffered when a ladder collapsed as he was going aloft to fix the signal cable for the alarm bell at the police station some 25 years ago, the retiring fireman suffered no other injuries during his tour of duty.

The recollection of these incidents came at a retirement party held for Lt. Greatrix by the members of Local 497 of the Ontario Provincial Fire Fighters Association at the home of Elmer Heim, 101 West Moira, on Saturday evening.

Asked as to what he was going to do after an active life which ran the gamut from a horse-drawn hook and ladder unit to the most modern fire fighting equipment, Lt. Greatrix replied that he was going to take up gardening in earnest at his 42 Highland Avenue home.

Both he and Mrs. Greatrix were honored with presentations by his fellow fire fighters.

'Naturalist Says 'Monster' May Be Big Fish

GLASGOW (Reuters)—Naturalist Peter Scott said Sunday Scotland's Loch Ness "monster" may be a big fish.

Scott, appearing on a television program about the oft-sighted" but as yet unproved "monster," said "a fish is the easiest to imagine."

Mentioning reports of a dark object more than 10 feet long emerging three feet above the water, Scott said it was "just possible" to regard the "monster" as an amphibian — some type of newt or salamander on a big scale.

Photographer John Luff showed pictures he took one night last October of an object "breathing through the water" of the loch 200 yards away as it followed a school of fleeing salmon.

David James, a member of Parliament, was along that night.

He and Scott have set up a clearing house for information on the Loch Ness "monster."

Joe Gallagher Completes 37 Years of Service With CNR

For the last three years of his career with the C.N.R., Joe Gallagher specialized in Piggback runs. Seniority and an exceptionally good record gave him preference for the service, and long fast runs, on a regular schedule made the preference worthwhile. Because engineers are paid for their mileage, the express runs bring in higher wages.

But Mr. Gallagher wasn't always at the top. He started with the CNR in 1926 as a machinist's helper in Mimico. He was living at his home town of Arthur, about 25 miles from Guelph at the time, and he had to travel back and forth on weekends. In 1927, he married, and his luck seemed to change.

In 1928, he became a fireman, and was transferred to Belleville. His qualification as an engineer came through in 1944, and since 1948 he has been driving regularly, working out of depots as far west as Sarnia. During all this time Belleville remained his home.

Last Saturday, with 37 years of service completed, Joe Gallagher retired. His son Norman, a locomotive engineer, took over from Harry Taylor as fireman on the last run. Number 14 from Toronto, and Joe's other son, Jerry, his daughter, Mrs. Rogtr Whitehead, of Toronto, and Mrs. Joe Gallagher were there to meet him at the station.

Play Stirs Controversy In Germany

BERLIN (AP)—A play which accuses the late Pope Pius XII of failing to denounce Nazi crimes against Jews has stirred a controversy in Germany.

The play is "Der Stellvertreter —The Vicar of Christ.

Hochhuth says he studied historical records for three years and interviewed officials of the Vatican Curia before he sat down to write the mammoth drama, sub-titled A Christian Tragedy.

The play offers a mixture of history and fiction. It tells the story of a fictional young Jesuit and Roman nobleman, Father Riccardo, who learns in wartime Berlin of the Nazis' "final solution" program to exterminate all Jews.

The man who tells him, Kurt Gerstein, really existed. An officer, Gerstein was an inside contact of a Protestant bishop. He hanged himself in 1945 after supplying Allied investigators information on Nazi crimes against humanity.

GOES TO ROME

Convinced that the Vatican will act, the priest, a member of the apostolic mission, travels back to Rome after helping a Jew escape to Italy in the disguise of a priest.

In Rome, he hears that The Roman Catholic Church may not issue an outright condemnation because acting against the Nazis would play into the Communists' game.

Highlight of the drama comes when Father Riccardo is received by the Pontiff—but again without avail. Frustrated, the priest joins a column of Jews headed for Auschwitz, where he is killed.

The play was received with applause and some boos when it opened in Berlin last Wednesday.

German reviewers praised the author's dramatic talents, but were largely critical of the historic implications.

The critic of the Cologne Rundschau, which frequently expresses the views of the Christian Democratic Party, said:

"There is no doubt that Pius XII remained silent. . . . But it was not as simple as Herr Hochhuth sees it. He does not grant that the Pope would have risked . . . by an open protest . . . handing over the entire church in Germany and half of Europe to the mercy of the SS."

The play will have its non-German 'premiere Sept. 27 in London.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a woman's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counselors and social workers.

Sara M.—My aunt is creating a furor over something that's trivial and harmless. She was divorced from her husband ten years ago. But I grew very fond of him and his whole family when I was a little girl. Now, even though I'm married myself and have moved to the wilds of Vermont, I correspond with some of them.

Aunt Lottie has bawled me out about this. I've cut it down somewhat, limiting myself to birthday and holiday cards. But now she wants me to quit sending them Christmas greetings! That's going too far. I consider them my friends, no matter what they are in her.

Lottie I. — I think Sara is prolonging her contact with my ex-in-laws for selfish reasons. The only one in my family who refuses to break off, so that they can no longer be in touch with my affairs and I can forget completely about them. Why else would Sara be sending such a steady procession of cards for every occasion, no matter how minor? I'll bet she's mailing them one for St. Patrick's Day even, and Bastille Day!

Blood is thicker than water and I'm her own mother's sister. Those people are nothing to her. Surely there are dozens of others she can hold on to, if she's short of friends. For my sake she should drop them.

The Council: Oh, Aunt Lottie, blood may be thicker than water, but how about ink? That old expression originated as a warning that friends are like water. They can vanish without a trace. But a kinsman, like blood, leaves a mark behind. It's useless to throw out a single line of thought — so does ink! Sara raises an interesting question of loyalty. Can she consider herself on a person-to-person hook-up with Aunt Lottie's former relatives, and keep right on talking even though Aunt Lottie is out of the picture? Or is her friendship part of a package deal, so that when Auntie bows out, Sara must do the same?

Although communication must be handled with finesse, delicacy and act, we go along with Sara in her general attitude. It's quite possible for two people to face each other in several roles. Sometimes a niece is a student in her aunt's class. So she addresses her as teacher. In a family setting, she's Aunt. And if they're friends and kindred souls, she's "girl friend". Thus, while Lottie's old enough to have had a close bond with Sara, they're still friends so far as the latter is concerned. She loves her she knows wants to treat them.

Aunt Lottie shouldn't object to the continuation of contact here, so long as Sara avoids anything that can be construed as "betrayal". That is, Sara should not take sides, pass judgment, even comment on the past relationship which originally joined the two families. The present friendship is "in its own" nourished by a direct appreciation by Sara of the people she happened to meet because she was Aunt Lottie's niece.

This is a common problem. We all know people we'd like to like, but somebody else's feelings are in the way. We can slow us down, make us perspicacious. But our friendly feelings wriggle through!

Special Bibs Being Made By Woman

GALT (CP)—During a visit to Toronto's Sunnybrook Hospital last year Mrs. F. M. Baillie learned there was a shortage of special bibs used by patients who have undergone laryngectomy operations.

Since then she has seen to it that not only Sunnybrook but other hospitals in Toronto, London, Ont., and Winnipeg are kept supplied with the bibs.

Mrs. Baillie, who with her husband operates a grocery store here, spends her evenings crocheting the bibs, which fit over an opening in the throat.

After providing all the bibs needed by Sunnybrook, she began supplying Toronto's Princess Margaret hospital for cancer patients, then Victoria Hospital in London and Deer Lodge Military Hospital in Winnipeg.

Club Activities

EGGLETON MESSENGERS

MADOC JCT. — On Friday afternoon the February meeting of the Eggleton Messengers was held in the school.

Lois Danford presided and opened with the hymn "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus," followed by all repeating the Lord's Prayer and the Messenger motto.

The business reading, Psalm 95, was read by Gerald Stapley. A reading, "Colors of Men," was given by Carol Danford.

The secretary, Carol White, gave the roll call which showed 26 children and three adults in attendance.

The meeting to be held on March 13th with Sheila Clark and Linda Prest to prepare the program. Offering received $1.23.

A reading, "The Land of Silence," was given by Mary Jones.

The leader, Mrs. Maurice Clancy, read the story, "God's Gift," about a little boy, "Paquito," who lived in a village in Puerto Rico. Paquito learned what a great gift God had bestowed on men when He gave them "Hands."

Kenneth Danford gave a reading about Louis Braille, who injured his eye at the age of three years and became blind. In later years he worked to perfect the Braille system of printing, so blind people could read.

"The World Friends" papers were distributed.

A special reading, "When Jesus Was a Boy" was given in parts with Lois Danford, Lloyd Clancy, Gerald Stapley, Wayne McMullen, Brian Kovsech, Lin Stapley, Douglas Danford and Judy Johnson each reading a verse, and a prayer by Mrs. Clancy.

The meeting closed with "Jesus Bids Us Shine," and Lois Danford at the piano.

Lunch of cookies and popcorn was served by Billy Stapley, Teddy Clarke and Gerald Stapley.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

ETIQUETTE CAN HAVE TWO HEADS

As a friend of mine remarked to the other day (and I've stressed in many a column), etiquette can be a two-headed monster. From the viewpoint of an individual, good manners involve not only how you behave toward others but how they behave toward you.

Your intentions may be the best in the world, but sometimes you slip. Others may be trying to gain your good will, but miss the target by a mile.

Some time ago I wrote of the lack of manners exhibited by some visitors to a bedridden patient. Confirming that this is a problem shared by the doctor as well as the patient, a current publication of the American Medical Association lists six warnings to a visitor whose apparent purpose is to cheer up a good friend.

1. You're not a doctor, so don't offer your medical advice or opinion concerning diagnosis or the treatment. You might worry the patient.

2. Enter the room quietly. Don't shout. You might worry the patient.

3. Women patients like to have a chance to comb their hair and pretty up before receiving visitors. Call before you visit.

4. Don't be overly sympathetic. Don't show sympathy through in your personality — not necessarily in words.

5. Don't ask to see the stitches and don't be morbidly curious. Let the patient volunteer whatever information he desires.

6. Don't lie or exaggerate, and don't tell a sick man he looks good when he doesn't, but discreet.

Now for the other side of the problem: how others behave toward you. As one example, I hear the frequent complaints of Americans who like French (or German or Armenian or Italian) restaurants, but can't make heads or tails out of the menus printed in the native tongue.

Proprietors of these usually fine establishments often assume too much — that you can read the language, that you're familiar with the various dishes, or that you'll ask the waiter. Many diners are hesitant about the last approach, and would appreciate an English translation.

You might guess that there's beef in "Hachis de Boeuf Hongarese," but how would you necessarily know that it's a hash with various additional ingredients? Or that "Longe de Veau Braisee" is nothing more than braised loin of veal?

"Ragout" has permeated American recipes enough to be recognized as a stew, but a diner can be thrown for a loss if he doesn't recognize words like "d'Agneau" as lamb stew or "de Fore Fermiere"—as pork stew, country style. And what, pray tell, is "country style"?

Even a dinner companion who knows the language can be at a loss for words if asked to describe or explain "Chicken Saute Louisette." After all, one restaurant's "Louisette may be another's "Chasseur," or style of cooking.

A mark of courtesy and service would be to provide translations of dishes along with a brief description of the ingredients and method of cooking. Many foreign restaurants now provide this information and earn the gratitude of their customers.

And many customers learn to order dishes they previously wouldn't have had the nerve to ask for.

Blonde Used As Fox for Riding Club

VANCOUVER (CP) — The huntsmen of Southlands Riding Club agree that blonde Bernice Ramsey was as foxy as all get-out.

Bernice was wily, but not too wily; crafty, but not too crafty.

Miss Ramsey, playing the part of the fox in a "fox" hunt, was chased through wooded trails and over hills for 90 minutes before surrendering in the "kill," which took place conveniently near the Southlands clubhouse.

The huntsmen were garbed in traditional dress, hunting coats, jaunty caps, white cravats and the like.

First, a mug of mull—a hot beer laced with egg yolk, sugar and spices. Then, off to the sound of eight-inch curled copper horns.

The "fox," a piece of brush pinned to her shoulder, played her part to perfection. With huntmaster and 25 huntsmen in full cry, she disappeared atop her horse through the bush.

But as lunch-time approached, the weary "fox" was brought back from the crucial moment was at hand.

The hunters, held behind the huntmaster by the whippers-in, were freed for the first time. They charged in for the kill.

The coup de grace was administered by 18-year-old Gerry Langtry, who snatched the brush from the "fox" shoulder.

Doll Talks In Seven Languages

MONTREAL (CP) — A doll that talks in seven languages was introduced in Montreal Sunday at the Canadian Toy Fair in which more than 140 Canadian manufacturers are exhibiting their products.

You slip little records into what is described as an inconspicuous slot in her side, pull the ring, and she talks.

She says 216 different phrases in French, English, Spanish Russian, Italian, German and Japanese depending on what record is inside.

The doll is two feet tall and can be used for education as well as recreation. For example, if you are taking your little girl to a restaurant, slip in the appropriate record and the doll will give a few hints on behavior and etiquette.

Children can also learn the phonetics of foreign languages from their automatic playmate.

Pancakes For Shrove Tuesday

by Mary Moore

Children are sure-fire guests, especially if you serve them familiar food. When I invited them I told Dorothy McKnight that she and the children were to be my guinea pigs for a new pancake recipe destined for my Shrove Tuesday column.

So we could all be at the dining-room table together I set up the electric grill on a heavy pad on the tea wagon at my left. There were two pitchers on each pancake batter and maple syrup and two plates of butter, and a big platterful of baked all-meat sausages. Each guest had a wooden bowlful of salad to munch on if the pancakes were not coming fast enough. It was all I could do to keep them supplied for that was a very popular supper and it served two lovely purposes: It gave me approved recipes for your Shrove Tuesday consumption and I became better acquainted with delightful McKnight children.

WHEAT PANCAKES

These are good. They call for some crushed shredded wheat.

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup soft shortening, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, ¾ cup soft shortening, 3 shredded wheat biscuits, finely crushed, 2 eggs, beaten, 3 1-3 cups milk.

Sift flour, baking powder, sugar and salt together. Cut in shortening until fine as meal. Add crushed shredded wheat. Add eggs and milk and mix well. Let stand 3 minutes. Bake on hot griddle. When cakes bubble burst and bake other side. Makes 20 pancakes. Serve with butter and maple syrup.

HIGH STANDARD PANCAKES

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup sugar, 2 eggs, 1½ cups milk, ¼ cup salad oil or melted shortening.

Sift the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar together. Add eggs and milk. Beat them into the dry ingredients and add the salad oil or melted shortening. Beat thoroughly. Bake on hot griddle. Makes about 20 4" pancakes.

On a white platter that is overproof, I baked the sausages because I did not have time to attend to frying them and wanted them out of my way. I arranged 2 lbs. (a scant 6) in rows in a single layer on the platter and baked them at 325 deg. Fahr. for 25 minutes. The platter fits into a table-cradle so I took it directly to the table from the oven when the first batch of pancakes was ready.

Mother's Helper

"PASS THE HAT" is a different kind of a familiar party game. These are good, sturdy party hats. Players sit or stand in a circle, all but one wearing a hat. When the music starts, the hatless one takes her neighbor's hat and places it on her own head. The player who's hatless when the music stops is eliminated, one hat is removed from the game. Continue until one hat and two players decide the winner.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

SIDNEY SOUTH W.I.

The February meeting of Sidney South W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Meens and opened in the usual manner.

The president was in charge of the business meeting. It was decided that the W.I. would attend Aiken's euchre and dance February 22, and Sidney South W.I. will arrange to hold one March 15th.

The program was turned over to Mrs. Kenneth Kerr, public relations officer. Mrs. Kerr gave an encyclopedia definition of public relations plus her personal definition which consists mainly of knowledge, understanding and loyalty. To test the members relations with persons from other countries they answered a quiz by giving the name of the country usually associated with a given product, animal, mode of dress and so forth.

This seemed to cause some differences, but perhaps, added a little extra knowledge, as many had answers which were correct, but sometimes different from the standard.

The members also participated in a whispering game to show how important accuracy is in relating incidents to others. All in all Sidney South W.I. members seem to have good public relations with their fellow men.

The meeting closed with lunch provided by the hostess and her committee.

WELLINGTON W.I.

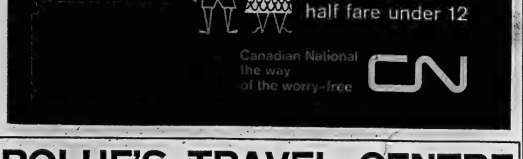
WELLINGTON — The regular monthly meeting of the Wellington W.I. was held in the town hall Tuesday evening. The meeting was opened in the usual manner by the president, Mrs. S. Type. Thank you cards were received from Mrs. Ida McFaul, the Rensink family, Maud Carson, Mrs. Orchard, Mrs. Reed, Elwin Upton and Mrs. Collier.

Four quilts were on display that some of the members had made in the past two weeks.

A card party was planned for a Saturday night early in March. The president and secretary, Mrs. W. Jackson and Mrs. W. Adams, were appointed to meet with the council and other organizations to plan a centennial celebration for the village.

Mrs. Callow and Mrs. Frank Harris, hostesses for the evening, presented the following program: "Canada" was sung in unison; Mrs. W. Jackson gave current events; Mrs. W. Callow read a poem, "Quinte Pioneers," written by Wellington's own poetess, Helen B. Anderson. Mrs. Ken Wood gave a most interesting account of the time she spent at the "Folk School" at Geneva Park in October.

The topic for the evening was "Historical Research" and Mrs. F. Harris, who is the historical convener, gave two splendid papers, one on the history of the Wellington W.I. on Tuesday, Feb. 19, was the 55th anniversary of the W.I.



Also a paper on the "History of the Village of Wellington," which will be celebrating its centennial this year. These reports were interesting and Mrs. Harris deserves a lot of credit for her time and work spent in making up these reports.

A lovely birthday cake, made by Mrs. Harris, was served at the lunch hour by the hostesses and their helpers.

Representative Chosen at VON Meet

The February meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses was held recently at the Y.M.C.A. Mr. Frank Folwell, president, welcomed the new members to the board.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read by the secretary, Miss Jessie Cunningham, in a letter from Head Office, it was learned that the branch must submit the name of a member to serve on the Board of Management. Mr. Frank Murray pointed out that the policy now was to rotate between Kingston, Napanee, Brockville and Belleville in choosing the representative. It was decided that Kingston should send a representative this year.

The new treasurer, Mr. L. K. Lynch, presented the financial statement.

Mrs. J. Nelles was requested to order baby pamphlets for the nurses to distribute, also board member manuals to acquaint members with V.O.N. organization, history and services.

Miss Dorothy Connor, head nurse, presented the nurses' report. She stated that nursing service for January showed that 498 home visits were made to 90 patients. Medical and Surgical cases were a little over one half of the cases and 75 per cent of the visits. Maternity and newborn were 19 per cent of the cases and 12 percent of the visits. Patients, other than maternity, who were visited for health supervision only, were ¼ of the cases and 13 percent of the visits.

During January, two visits were made to Douglas Allan School and one visit to Camille-to-Corbyville School.

Women's Institutes

CARMEL W.I.

The January meeting of Carmel Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Carl Thompson. There were 16 members present.

Business was discussed at this time. Mrs. Herb Howes, on behalf of herself and her husband, graciously thanked the members of the Institute for the floral table centre presented to them commemorating their golden wedding.

It was decided to make a quilt to be in readiness in case of need.

Two members were nominated to look into the cost of chartering a bus to some place of interest. Report of findings to be given at the February meeting.

Mrs. Homans reported on "Education." She told of radio's value in India where groups gather in villages to hear reports on agriculture, home economics and health. Farm Forum of 1960 raised money to supply these radios.

Mrs. Allison, reporting for home economics, told of the many uses of salt, starch, rinse water, add to vinegar for stain removal and removal of heat stains from furniture.

Mrs. Clayton Sullivan, convener of programs, read as her topic the story of the "Honey Bee." The colony is like a city in itself, where one queen rules. It is a city of survival of the fittest where only workers are allowed to live. The queen lays about 2,000 eggs per day. One bee will travel the distance of about three times around the world to produce one pound of honey. They possess a means of communicating with each other in regards to collecting pollen. Humor, comic and wax were passed among the members. Liberation, both amusing and informative, was circulated around the room. A song, "Humming of the Bees," was accompanied by Ruth Brintnell. A contest was held with Mrs. J. Lents and Mrs. H. Howes as winners.

Thanks were expressed to Mrs. Sullivan for the interesting story of the "Honey Bee."

A social time followed.

Turkey a la King

Cookbook No. 15—Recipe No. 1

ENTERTAINING SIX OR EIGHT

Your turn to entertain the bridge club and you are wondering what to serve? You will find the answer in the new Canadian Centennial Entertaining Six or Eight. Here is a recipe which will make a big hit, and yet it requires a minimum of attention after your guests arrive. It is so much more appealing and delectable than the usual salads or sandwiches. Try it and your party is sure to be a success.

TURKEY A LA KING

Set out a chafing dish or a large skillet.

Cut into chunks and set aside enough cooked turkey to yield 2 cups cooked turkey pieces. Prepare and set aside 1½ cups chicken broth. Set out 1 cup cooked peas. Clean and slice ½ lb. mushrooms.

Heat in the chafing dish blazer or the skillet over direct heat, ½ cup butter or margarine. Add the mushrooms and ¼ cup finely chopped onion.

Cook, occasionally moving and turning with a spoon, until onion is transparent and mushrooms are lightly browned and tender. With slotted spoon remove mushrooms, allowing fat to drain back into pan; set mushrooms aside.

Blend into butter in pan ¼ cup flour and a mixture of 1 teaspoon salt; 1 teaspoon paprika; ½ teaspoon white pepper and ½ teaspoon monosodium glutamate. Heat until mixture bubbles, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Add gradually, stirring in, chicken broth and 1¼ cups cream. Return mixture to heat and bring rapidly to boiling, stirring constantly; cook 1 to 2 minutes longer. Add the turkey, peas, mushrooms and ½ cup (3-oz. can, drained) pimento strips. Cook mixture slowly until turkey is thoroughly heated.

Community Concert Assoc. Arranges Two Special Events

The Belleville Community Concert Association has been fortunate in securing two outstanding concerts for the 1963-64 series. Two more artists will be chosen following the membership campaign which opens on March 4th and continues until March 9th.

The two concerts already secured are the Don Cossack Chorus and the New York Brass Quintets.

The former is an ensemble of 28 male voices directed by Mr. Leonard De Pour. Its repertoire includes folk music from all the Americas, specially commissioned temporary works, the early choral masterpieces and traditional choral fare.

The Belleville Community Concert Association has for nearly 30 years been bringing good music to the city. Last year four excellent concerts were presented to the membership. ## Rheingold Club Enjoys Gay Festivity

Last Saturday evening the members and guests of the Rheingold Club held their traditional carnival dance in the Hotel Quinte. After a time of dance and amusement the most beautiful of the masks won a prize and many were the surprises when the masks were removed.

It was a pleasure to view the colorful array of masked pairs as they danced in an appropriately decorated room, which completed the scene of festivity that had its beginning in Roman days. Originating in Italy, the carnival is a celebration of merry-making in the pre-Lenten season that has been carried down through generations. Well known are the carnival festivities of Venice, Rome, Turin and Florence, in Italy and Cologne, Munich and Nains in Germany.

At the close of the evening the president Ed Moll, expressed his gratitude to all present for their part in making this event a success. He announced further that there would be no dance held before Easter.

Latter Day Saints W.D. Plans Events

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Department of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was held at the home of Mrs. J. McCurdy, in Trenton.

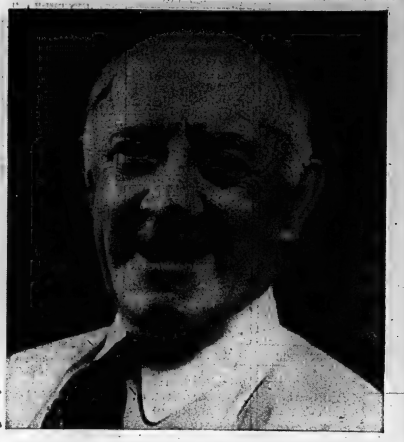
Mrs. L. Smith and Mrs. J. McCurdy led in a bible study, entitled "She Looketh Well to the Ways of Her Household."

Mrs. S. C. Else taught the lesson on, "A Heritage is Appointed Unto Me."

The business meeting was convened with Mrs. W. L. Canniff in the chair. Mrs. J. McCurdy read a letter from Mrs. J. T. Westwood Jr. from the World Council of Women at Church Headquarters in Independence Missouri, outlining more of the plans for the 1963 Institute held for church women. A letter was read from a church missionary in Korea. Seventy R. Ferrell, telling of the work in the Korean Mission and thanking the ladies for their money gift at Christmas. He told how the money helped him buy food to add to bones of clothes being given to many needy Korean people, during the cold winter.

Mrs. Canniff reminded the ladies of the family night planned for the next meeting.

Following the meeting Bible quiz games were played and prizes were won by Mrs. W. L. Canniff and Miss Elizabeth Ach.



Lunch was served by the hostess.

Alpha Lambda Chapter Enjoys Social Eve

Gay Valentine decorations created a festive atmosphere for the meeting of Alpha Lambda Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, and their husbands, who enjoyed a delightful party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Newell.

As well as dancing, members participated in a series of contests and much hilarity resulted.

Mr. Paul Poulin was an entertaining auctioneer as he called for bids on the decorative box lunches, bringing to a conclusion a most successful event.

Minor Hockey

Playoff hockey continued in the Belleville Minor Hockey Association over the weekend with one Juvenile, one Bantam and two Peewee games being played.

The Hornets captured the Juvenile championship by blanking the Aces 4-0, winning the similar series in two consecutive games.

Jerry St. Denis and Rick Denard scored a goal each in the first period with Denard getting another in the second and St. Denis his second in the third. Bill Goodfellow and Bob Martin drew one assist apiece, while Terry Casselman racked up the shutout in the Hornet nets.

There were 15 penalties in the game with the winners drawing eight.

BANTAM

Quinte whipped the Bruins 11-1 to capture their Bantam league semi-final series by a total goal count of 17-3.

F. Nobile sparked the Quinte scorers with two goals and four assists. T. Schwager potted three goals, R. Summers had two and two, D. Meagher two and one, P. Denyes one and one and M. Wardhaugh the other goal.

Al Wishart fired the only Bruin goal, assisted by S. Thorne.

PEEWEE

The Hawks dumped the Red Wings 5-1 and took the series 11-3. Barons held Canadiens to a 2-2 stalemate but lost the close series 5-4.

Royes scored two goals and helped on another to pace the Black Hawks. Pugh had one and one while H. Smith and Rivers also scored. B. James potted the lone Red Wing marker.

J. Potts scored one goal and set Benson up for the other to aid the Canadien cause. Wilkinson scored both Barons' goals with Drummin helping on both.

Will Send Team to Tournament

VANCOUVER (CP)—British Columbia has reversed its decision and will send a basketball team to the national tournament at Lethbridge March 14-17.

B.C. lifted its boycott during the weekend after it was learned that conditions of the event had been revised.

Revision in the format of the combined Canadian championship-Pan - American Games tournament means the invited eastern, Manitoba and B.C. champions can enter all-star teams.

Winner of the Alberta tournament will be declared Canadian champion and will form the nucleus of the Pan-Am team.

CHOP CHOP DIES

OSHAWA (CP)—Chop Chop, Canada's ranking thoroughbred sire as the breeder of four Queen's Plate winners, died Saturday at E. P. Taylor's National Stud Farm here at the age of 23 Death was attributed to heart failure induced by colic.

Chop Chop first received recognition as a sire following Canadiana's triumph in the 1952 Queen's Plate. His other plate winners were Lyford Cay in 1957, Victoria Park in 1960 and Blue Light in 1961.

Chop Chop headed the sire money-winning list in 1953 and 1954 and again in the four years from 1959 to 1962.

Win Senior Hoop Title

Ontario Intelligencer SPORTS

Sport Slices . . .

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The Belleville Shrine Club, whose fezzes are familiar to crippled children of the city and district past and present, went "underground" last week to lay out combat plans for their annual Battle of the Blues.

As over a number of years the "Unlockables" of the Market Square Palais des Geadarmerie under the jurisdiction of Inspector Clair Hayes, aided and abetted no doubt, but the Western Ontario wisdom of Inspector J. B. McLaughlin, will enter the hockey lists against their arch-enemies from the smoke-eating emporiums of Chief Gerald Vance and his trusty right arm, one Deputy Chief Gerald "Warpy" O'Brien again this "warpy."

About this time of the pre-battle year Inspector Hayes and Deputy Chief O'Brien wage a wordless war. They're not averse to slinging sly innuendos at each other via the grapevine or private undercover operators but mouth-to-mouth combat is out.

In fact I doubt very much if they would exchange insultior smenlizer with each other short of "Warpy" committing arson on the Hayes hackstand or the inspector being caught red-handed breaking and entering the O'Brien refrigerator.

As for the rank and file of the blue-and-brass, they're going about their workaday business as usual. But there is an undercurrent of something or other. I have it on excellent authority there is more cloak-and-dagger business going on this year than ever before.

Actually the henchmen of the hose have one strike on the Market Square bobbies, hockey-wise.

They have been reaching some sort of physical perfection through cementing on the ice with the Mighty Muscles of the Public Works, the Check Albarbers of the Public Utilities, and the Ink-stained Innocents of The Ontario Intelligencer. (With no sheer weekends, this gang would go places.)

I boarded the Hayes lion in the lair of the law on Saturday morning. He, like Brutus, was surrounded by a gaggle of blue-toga'd conspirators—and in a belligerent mood.

"You tell Vance, O'Brien and the rest of that ladder-climbing, hose-jiggling crew of asphalted toasters, that this year they'll be wasting their time asking our club to go easy on them in the game. We've humored them for years now, in fact, we let them win once or twice. This time it will be different. We can lick anything they put on the ice, and if O'Brien wants to make it a personal matter, that goes for him, too."

By some strange means the statement reached the ears of Mr. O'Brien. "Don't tell him," he said. "It hurts." (He meant it. Seriously, Deputy Chief O'Brien was admitted to hospital yesterday where he will undergo surgery for gall-stones.)

He said Chief Vance who was handling the smoke-eaters squad, with others, knows what is going on in the gendarme underground. He knows they are bringing in "imports" from the Aylmer Police School. He knows they have "deputized" a half-dozen good hockey players from other centres. And he knows that two of them are members of the fire-department "underground."

Chief Vance was unimpressed by the Hayes' statement. "Shucks," he laughed, "after all our boys have been toiling hard all winter in their own league—and will be in tip-top shape. In fact it won't be much more than a good workout for us. They'll be out of wind by the second period, with the exception of Inspector Hayes."

Shrine president Phil Davis and his committee of the "fezzes" are making elaborate plans for another highly successful Police-Firemen hockey game held annually in aid of the Shrine Club's crippled children activities.

The date has not been set but will be announced shortly. Efforts are being made to bring a well-known hockey celebrity here to act as referee. The names of Gordie Howe, Bobby Hull, "Red" Storey and others have been mentioned but nothing of a definite nature has been announced.

Last year "Rocket" Richard was here and unfortunately quite a few youngsters were disappointed at not being able to see him. It is hoped the organization committee will remedy the situation this year.

Lose To Chatham 5-4

Dogs Win Senior Title

Chatham Maroons today wish they had at least two games remaining in their Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series schedule.

The Maroons dumped Windsor Bulldogs 5-4 at Windsor Sunday but it too late to do much good. It was the final game of the schedule and the Bulldogs took the title by four points over the second-place Chatham club.

The Bulldogs now meet Woodstock Athletics in a best-of-seven semi-final series which begins Wednesday night at Windsor. The Maroons open the other best-of-seven semi-final against Galt Terriers at Chatham Wednesday.

Joe Malo and Bob Seymour each scored twice for Chatham, and Tom Clark once. Irwin Gross, Bob Brown, Tom Walker and Jean Aselin were the Windsor marksmen.

The action was capped by a major brawl in the third period, touched off by Chatham's Ted Power and Windsor's Bud Hill-man. One minor, four majors and four game misconduct penalties were handed out.

Maroon goalie Al Benedetti, in clinching the Nat Turofsky Trophy as the league's top netminder, kicked out 38 Windsor shots, 17 in the second period.

Starry Centre Gets Six Points ★★★★★

Hawks Up Margin, Mikita Tops Pack

By MARVEN MOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A bellicose bird called Stash by his teammates has Chicago Black Hawks pulling away from the rest of the field in the National Hockey League, with a month left in the schedule.

Stan Mikita, a scrappy young fellow with a scrappy disposition and an artistic flair in manipulating a puck, is defined simply by Hawks coach Rudy Pilous:

"The kid is what makes us go."

A 22-year-old centre with the distinction of Czechoslovakian birth, Mikita was at his productive best during the weekend.

The Hawks emerged with an eight - point cushion atop the standings and Stan surged into the inoividual point-gathering leadership.

Another — not unexpected weekend development was that the mathematical chances of Boston Bruins to make the post-season playoffs were squashed.

Mikita grabbed six points as the Hawks took a pair of the goal wins.

RUINS RECORD

They handed the Bruins 4-3 at Boston Sunday night with Stan potting three goals and assisting on the other.

Saturday night in Chicago they edged Red Wings 3-2 Mikita collecting two assists.

The Red Wings bounced back with a 3-2 win over the Rangers in New York Sunday night.

In other Saturday night games, Montreal Canadiens thumped New York 6-0 in their rival and the Bruins upset the Maple Leafs 6-2 in Toronto. The Leafs and Canadiens were idle Sunday night.

Little Ged Wharram got Chicago's other goal Sunday. The win gave the Hawks 74 points. Montreal trails with 66 followed by Toronto with 65 and Detroit with 61.

Mikita boosted his season's season production to 28 goals and 37 assists for a one-point lead over Detroit's Gordie Howe, although Howe picked up assists on all three of his team's goals in New York.

Boston has 41 points and 10 games to play. Even if Bruins win all 10 while the Red Wings drop all remaining games, and they have 12 games, Boston would still be behind Detroit in wins though even in points.

Charlie Burns fired two goals for the Bruins and Dean Prentice got the other.

Wharram was hot against the Red Wings Saturday, beating Terry Sawchuk twice in the opening period. Sawchuk, making his first appearance since Jan. 12 when he suffered a hand injury, left the game after two periods because he was tired.

A third-period goal by Eric Nesterenko provided Chicago's margin. Parker MacDonald and Howe counted for Detroit. It was Howe's 30th of the campaign, tying him with Mikita's teammate Bobby Hull and Toronto's Frank Mahovlich for the league lead in goals.

MacDonald, with Howe feeding him the puck, counted two goals Sunday night—raising his total to 20 — New York Bolts came in the final period. Norm Ullman was the other Detroit marksman.

Henri Richard, returning from a three - game layoff caused by a groin injury, led Montreal's attack on New York with two goals and two assists. Don Marshall, Dickie Moore, Ralph Backstrom and Claude Provost also scored for the Canadiens. Defenceman Harry Howell, Bathgate and Rod Gilbert produced for New York.

In Toronto, Murray Oliver, Jerry Toppazzini, Carles Kennedy and Tom Williams shared Boston's scoring. Ron Stewart and Ed Shack got the Toronto goals.

The schedule resumes Tuesday night with New York at Detroit, the only game.

Finn Pole-Vaulter Disappointment

Crothers, Abbie Win In New York

By JIM PEACOCK

NEW YORK (CP) — Jim Beatty of the United States ran the mile in three minutes, 59 seconds, Russian Valery Brumel cleared seven feet, 3¼ inches in the high jump, Russian Igor Ter-Ovanesyan went 26 feet, 6½ inches in the broad jump, And Canadian Bill Crothers won again in the 1,000 yards.

But there wasn't a world record in the bunch—and nobody cleared 16 feet in the pole vault —as 16,213 jammed Madison Square Garden Saturday night for the U.S. Amateur Athletic Union's national indoor championships, billed as the climax of the current indoor track season.

Biggest disappointment came in the pole vault where Finland's Pentti Nikula, who cleared a world-record 16 feet, 8¼ inches at home Feb. 1, failed miserably and placed fifth in his first U.S. start.

Dave Tork, West Virginian who won in Toronto a month ago with 15 feet, 2¼ inches, cleared 15 feet, 6 inches to win here.

The crowd was disappointed, too, that Toronto's sensational Bruce Kidd didn't appear for the three-mile run, won by Marcel Bernard of France in 13:38.4. Kidd withdrew because of a foot infection.

CANADIANS WIN TWO

Crothers, 22-year-old University of Toronto senior, didn't disappoint the crowd as he gave Canada the first of two victories in the meet—the other was scored by 16-year-old Abby Hoffman of Toronto in the women's 440.

Crothers was well off his best time in 2:07.4, but he turned on his famous last-lap speed—something New York crowds have come to expect from the East New York Track Club runner who won the half-mile at the New York Athletic Club Games last week—to win the 1,000 in 2:06.8.

The victory was the seventh in succession at that distance for Crothers, who runs in Chicago in two weeks and in London a week later.

It also marked his third straight triumph over Russian Valery Bulshew, who finished third Saturday night behind Ralph Lingle of the U.S. and ahead of Ergas Legs of Toronto, who finished fourth in 2:12.3 after leading until Crothers started his kick.

Miss Hoffman, running for the Toronto Olympic Club, won the 440 with ease, finishing in 57.3 seconds, nearly two seconds slower than her best outdoor time but quite acceptable for her first try at that distance on the boards. She had won the half-mile in each of three indoor appearances this year.

Stan Mikita of Chicago, who scored three goals and assisted on three in Chicago's 3-2 victory over Detroit Saturday and 4-3 defeat of Boston Sunday.

Junior 'A' Slugfests

Two Battle With 'Spears'

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With the final standings all but settled, Sunday's Ontario Hockey Association provincial Junior A group games turned into penalty and injury-filled slugfests.

One player, centre Jim Patterson of Peterborough Petes, ended up with a broken collarbone. None of the other injuries was serious.

A total of 104 minutes in penalties were called in the two games, including a match misconduct, eight major penalties for spearing or fighting and 22 minor penalties.

The only result of the two games was that Montreal Junior Canadiens clinched second place, which had been almost certain even before they downed Peterborough 3-1 at Montreal.

Before the game, Montreal had an eight-point lead over Peterborough.

In the other game Sunday, St. Catharines Black Hawks trimmed Guelph Royals 7-4. The Black Hawks already had been confined to fifth place, out of the playoffs, and the Royals to last place.

HOLD GOOD LEAD

The league-leading Niagara Falls Flyers, with four games left to play in the regular season, have a four-point lead over Montreal which has three more games. Peterborough, with a one-point edge over Hamilton and Guelph both have three games.

In the Montreal game, Canadiens jumped into a 3-0 lead in the first period on goals by Jean-Guy Gendron, Jacques Laperriere and Jacques Lemaire.

Patterson's injury came in the second period when he was smashed into the boards by Montreal defenceman Roland Campeau, who was hot penalized on the play. Patterson was taken to hospital for x-rays, but returned to Peterborough with the club during the game.

The Canadiens took the win with two second-period goals by Yvan Cournoyer. Ray Taylor scored Montreal's other goal, while Ron Herriman scored for Peterborough.

ROUGH IN FIRST

At St. Catharines, where 68 minutes in penalties were called by referee Ken Arthur, the roughest play was in the first period when 42 minutes in penalties were given out.

WINS TOURNAMENT

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (AP)—Johnny Pott fired an eagle on the 18th hole Sunday and came from two strokes back to win the little tournament of champions with a 66-70—136. Earl Stewart finished with 66-71 — 137.

Picton Jrs. Eliminate Cobourg

PICTON (Special) — Picton Merchants wrapped up their OHA Eastern Junior "C" semi-final playoff series with Cobourg here Saturday night by downing Cobourg 8-2.

Picton took the set in four consecutive games and will now meet the winners between Napanee and Gananoque for the group championship. Napanee leads Gananoque three games to none with one tie and the fifth game is in Napanee tonight.

Cobourg led 1-0 at the end of the first in a rough game here Saturday but the Merchants pulled ahead 5-2 by the end of the second and added a trio in the third.

George Stainsbury, Picton's hard-working redhead, paced the winners' attack with four goals, including all three in the third. Larry Pero scored twice, Carl Stacey and Bob Brown one apiece. Harold Haddock drew three assists, Mac Donald and Rhodes two each, Guernsey and Pero singletons.

Sheehan and Chase scored for Cobourg with G. Free and Finkle each getting one assist.

Game officials handed out 23 penalties with Cobourg drawing 15 of the total. The losers' Bruce Harp picked up eight penalties himself, including four minors, two majors, a misconduct and a game misconduct. He knocked out Picton's Harold Haddock with one punch in the third period after an earlier mixup.

Picton's Brown and Pike were given game misconducts in the same mixup, apparently for their willingness to continue the fight on behalf of the badly-outweighed Haddock.

Picton outshot the visitors 35-23 in a game that was over an hour late starting. The first period was played straight time.

Big Seven

Chicago's shifty Stan Mikita scored three goals and three assists for six points in two weekend National Hockey League games and squeezed into the NHL scoring leadership just ahead of Detroit's Gordie Howe.

Howe picked up a goal and three assists, becoming the NHL's third 30-goal scorer of the season. He joins Chicago's Bobby Hull and Toronto's Frank Mahovlich in the 30-goal club.

Mikita now has 28 goals and 37 assists for 65 points, while Howe has 34 assists with his 30 goals for 64 points.

Hull was limited to two assists in the weekend games and is in third place, tied with John Bucyk of Boston, also held down to two assists.

Andy Bathgate of New York scored three goals and caught up to Murray Oliver of Boston, who scored only once, at the 60-point level. Montreal's Jean Beliveau, leading the league in assists with 44, has one point to spare in the 60-point level. # Tiger Still King After Bloody Draw

Wild, Bruising Brawl

By JACK STEVENSON

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Gene Fullmer remains unfinished business for middleweight champion Dick Tiger of Nigeria today—but settlement is expected in a big-money match during June.

Financial figures in the $100,000 bracket are flying as far as the punches thrown Saturday night in the Convention Center. Tiger retained his 160-pound crown, but won a draw decision after 15 rounds of battling.

Fullmer, from West Jordan, Utah, who lost his title to Tiger in San Francisco last Oct. 23, declared:

"I'm ready for the rematch. I thought I beat him Saturday night and there's no reason I can't do it again."

Tiger felt he had won. He said he was shocked at referee Vern Bybee, who scored it a 69-69 draw while Judge John Romero scored for Fullmer, 70-68. Judge Pat Diskin voted 71-67 for Tiger. The Associated Press had it even at 70-70 under the Nevada scoring system—if five points is the margin of a round and four or fewer to the loser.

IS EVEN BETTER

The match was a repeat, but even better, than their first encounter in San Francisco last Oct. 23 when Tiger won a unanimous decision.

The battle ran true to form—a bruising and often wild engagement that had the fans in a constant uproar and standing on its feet in the final frenzied 15th round.

There were no knockdowns but both fighters were cut up—Fullmer over the left eye in the third, a bad scalp gash just above the hairline in the sixth, which apparently was from an accidental butt, and a steady nose bleed from the 10th round on.

Fullmer, who switched from his usual bully-boy tactics for an evening of jabbing circling and dancing away, slashed open a gash over the champion's left eye in the 11th round.

GOES ALL OUT

Seemingly taking heart by the sight of his bloodied opponent, whom he had not been able to scratch in the San Francisco bout, Fullmer went all out in the final rounds.

The engagement had its wilder moments as the former, angered by Gene's hit and run tactics, finally cornered him in a neutral corner and pounded and threw him through the lower two ropes.

Again in a desperate clinch in the eighth round, Tiger lifted Fullmer bodily from the floor, as if to hurl him to the canvas.

Round after round, the pattern was pretty much the same, with never a round decided by more than one point.

In a blasting final round both men, obviously aware the outcome would be close, slugged and mauled away from one part of the ring to the other.

It was Fullmer's third draw in a title fight, a boxing rarity. There have been only 40 title draws in ring history, only six in the last 20 years.

Fullmer retained the middleweight title in his first two draws, against Sugar Ray Robinson and Joey Giardello, both in 1960.

THOUGHTS FROM TV

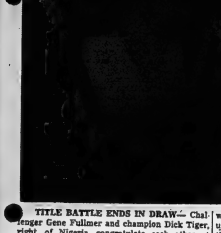
Bypass reaching this banking resort indicated television watchers thought Tiger won the bruising but sometimes nonartistic presentation.



There was a division among the assembled boxing writers. The poll was 9 to 3 for Fullmer —with one vote for a draw—by the ringside experts of U.S. decent.

The British journalists were up in arms. They felt the representative from a part of the former British Empire won without question.

At a press conference later Tiger criticized the man who fought him to a standoff.

"He shouldn't use tricks," Tiger said of Fullmer's strategy of jabbing and dancing away. "I am the champion. I'll never use tricks."

In the San Francisco fight, Fullmer employed his usual style. He lulled his way in—and then took a licking while doing it. So he switched styles for this one.

TITLE BATTLE ENDS IN DRAW— Challenger Gene Fullmer and champion Dick Tiger, right, of Nigeria, congratulate each other at the end of their 15-round bout for the middleweight championship in Las Vegas, Nev., Saturday night. Tiger retained for Tiger, the other for Fullmer, and the referee called it even, so the bout ended in a draw. (AP Wirephoto)

Lose To Oshawa, Peterborough

Midgets, Juveniles Beaten

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Belleville's last hopes for a winner in the Ontario Minor Hockey Association playdowns went out the window here Saturday when the local Midgets and Juveniles went down to defeatwat the hands of the visiting clubs

Belleville Midgets absorbed an 8-3 defeat at the hands of a strong Oshawa club, losing their second 184. -

Belleville Juveniles, who looked as if they could have won the game by staying on the ice, dropped a tight 2-1 decision to Peterborough and lost their series 8-2.

Both games were penalty riddled and the juveniles particular saw a number of players more interested in doing as much damage to the opposition as possible, rather than in trying to win the hockey game.

Referees Gord Gregory of Belleville, Paul Kawzenuk, Oshawa, and Bill Crowley of Peterborough did as good a job as possible keeping control and at times it was no easy task to say the least.

There were 21 penalties in the Midget game, including three misconducts, a game misconduct and four majors, but the referees stopped that with an all, including two misconducts, one game misconduct and three majors.

JUVENILE

Leading 6-1 going into the game, the Petes added another quick one, by Saltern, after just 13 seconds of play, but strong games in the nets by the winner's Randy Reid and Belleville's Bob Kiser made it a close one all the way.

Carl Boomhower tied the Maracle playing well in front of him, stayed in after being struck in the face by Gibbons' winning goal, and traded good stops with Reid throughout.

SUMMARY

Oshawa jumped into a 3-1 lead in the first and made it 5-1 in the second as they outskated and outplayed Belleville by a wide margin. The losers, with a couple of exceptions, failed to skate and check going either way and left Bobby Moon almost alone in the nets.

Steve white scored twice for Belleville with diggers Carl Hannah and Larry Stewart assisting both times. Bob Lansdale got the other goal, aided by Doug Dickey.

B. D. Waters paced Oshawa with three markers while Jerry Dionne got one and three, Sutton one and two, Soloman and Leach one and one apiece.

Elliott also scored and McGraw earned two assists.

Oshawa drew three of the four penalties in the first but Belleville's lone one in the first goal at 1.40. Leach's breakaway with a mate in the sin-bin and Dionne's rebound put it out of reach in the second, when roughing and high sticking led to eight minutes.

Hatters almost got out of hand in the games dying minutes, Stewart drawing a misconduct and game misconduct and Murphy a misconduct at 19.42. Belleville's Lansdale and Oshawa's Balsam fought at the final whistle and players rushed on the ice but cooler headed coaches and the officials kept everyone else out of it.

Canadians 'Deserved To Win'

Czech Nats Beat Smokies

PRAGUE (CP)—Trail Smoke Eaters defeated the West Bohemian regional hockey team 5-1 Sunday in their fifth and final hockey game in Czechoslovakia during a warmup tour preceding the world hockey championships.

The Smoke Eaters won three of the five games in the series, losing twice to the Czech national team which they will meet in the championships in Stockholm next month.

The official Czech news agency said the Canadians deserved to win on the basis of their fine play in the first and last periods.

In a game Saturday, the Smoke Eaters won commendation for clean play but came out on the short end of the scoring.

The 3-1 loss, the Smokies' second of the week to Czechoslovakia's national team, came before a sell-out crowd of 18,500 in the Prague Sportshall. Canada's representatives beat 3-2 in the same team in Brno Wednesday.

Les Digby Named to O.S.A. Body

TORONTO (CP) — Terence Kelly, 31-year-old Oshawa lawyer was elected president of the Ontario Soccer Association at the annual meeting during the weekend.

Kelly is the youngest person to hold the office in the history of the association, which goes back more than 60 years.

The secretary's report showed 188 senior clubs registered last year, drop of six compared with 1961. Number of senior players decreased to 3,942 from 4,139 the previous year.

Most of the drop in player and club registrations was in the Toronto and Hamilton districts, with increases in some districts, including Sudbury, Kingston, Newmarket and Ottawa.

Knudson Finishes Second

Wall Wins Caracas Golf

CARACAS (AP) — Former U.S. Masters champion Art Wall captured his first tournament golf victory in 2½ years Sunday when he won the Caracas Open.

He took top money of $1,300 in the third stop on the Caribbean tour with his one-under-par 69, good for a 72-hole total of 274. He was two strokes up on young George Knudson of Toronto, in second place with a 276.

Wall, whose last tournament victory was in the Canadian Open in July of 1960, entered the final round in a tie with Don Whitt, the defending Caribbean champion. Whitt blew to a five-over-par 75 and slipped to fifth.

Knudson, who led for the first two days, then exploded to a 74, had the day's best round—a 66—but was too far back to make up the five-stroke deficit.

"I feel now I have broken the barrier and my luck will change," said Wall, who has been plagued with a variety of ailments since his Masters victory in 1956, the year he led the professionals in money winnings.

LIKES THE PRESSURE

"Knudson was closing in on me, I had everything under control. My second shot was extremely good on the final hole. This is the kind of pressure I used to beat."

His 69 was tacked on to previous rounds of 67, 70 and 68.

Knudson, leader after each of the first two rounds, had a four-stroke margin going into Saturday's third round, and was even par going out. He then went two over par on the 10th hole and three over on the 16th.

Knudson's second-place finish was worth $1,100.

Hull Ottawa Frontenacs Share Wins

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

At this stage of the season, when two teams are fighting for hockey title they usually count on winning at home.

Hull - Ottawa Canadiens and Kingston Frontenacs of the Eastern Professional Hockey League split a pair of weekend games—but in reverse—to remain tied for the lead.

The Canadiens whipped the Frontenacs 4-1 at Kingston Saturday, then Kingston rebounded to take a 6-3 win at Hull Sunday.

In a game between the second half of the four-team league, Hull-Ottawa and Kingston tied with 74 points, Sudbury with 53 and St. Louis with 36.

Kingston was aided Sunday by a penalty shot awarded burly Pete Panagakos, opposed by Claude Larose on a breakaway, while the Frontenacs were killing a penalty. Panagakos made good on his shot.

Pennington, Harry Sinden, Don Blackburn, Jeanot Gilbert and Red Ouellette scored the other Kingston goals. Berenson, Jacques Laperriere and Chuck Hamilton scored for the Canadiens.

Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, John Barrymore star in Unforgettable Musical, "Maytime"

Highlighted by some of Sigmund Romberg's greatest songs, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's musical challenge to the mighty entertainments of all-time, "Maytime", stars Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy and John Barrymore in the film version of one of Broadway's memorable musical triumphs.

Miss MacDonald is cast as Marcia Morlaine, who owes her successful career to Ernest Trager (John Barrymore), the celebrated impresario who has guided her to the heights. In a return, she agrees to marry him. It is when she unexpectedly falls in love with the impetuous, young American singer, Paul Allison (Nelson Eddy) that she regrets her promise, but it is then too late. The two are parted before they meet again when they find themselves costarred in an opera, "Mayme". However, Marcia is willing to run away from Paul, but they reckon without a passionate violinist, Nazaroff. The drama is brought to a thrilling climax in Vienna, which will not be revealed here in order not to rob the spectatoe of its suspenseful nature.

Seldom has a motion picture been as rich in melody as is "Maytime". The first of the second series of Golden Operetta series, "Maytime" will be presented Sunday, February 24th, with a matinee at 2.15, and in the evening at 8.15 the doors opening at 7.30, at Belle Theatre in Belleville Together, in "Maytime" Miss MacDonald and Eddy sing "Will You Remember", "Vive L'Opera" "Let Me Call Back to Old Virginia", Caritza" and "Maytime Finale".

Miss MacDonald's solos include "Sleigh Bells", "Viriolaue", "Street Singer" and "Les Filles de Cadix". Eddy's rich voice is heard in "Virginia Run and Eggs", Student Drinking Song" and "Jolly Fellows". In addition there are choruses, excerpts of opera and dances.

Lavish with opulence and spectacle, "Maytime" boasts a total of 80 sets, the most elaborate being the production of the court of Louis Napoleon in 1865. Other settings include opera house scenes, parks and forests, the streets of Paris, an entire section of the Latin quarter of Paris, the Hotel Capital, an apple orchard in full bloom. "Maytime" is a blend of music, gaiety and drama which can be enjoyed again and again.

Northern Skiers Fail To Impress

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP)—The Yukon's Old Crow skiers proved their physical stamina and possibly their potential here but failed to impress coaching officials as immediate Olympic team material.

Five of the Indian skiers participated in Saturday's cross country event at the western division Nordic and northern B.C. alpine ski championships here.

Isaac Thomas, 23, of the Old Crow Club was fourth in one hour, 27 minutes, 27.5 seconds. Olsten Vanebo of Prince George was the event's runner-up hour, 18 minutes, 16.8 seconds.

Susan Linklater, 20, of the Ol Crow Club came in top kilometre women's exhibition course in one hour, 15 minutes, 56.6 seconds, more than eight minutes ahead of Doris Ngootbe 18, another Old Crow skier who came second.

Sigge Bjorklund of Vancouver, western division Olympic coach, said the Old Crows showed that "physically they are strong and their stamina is out of this world . . . but they lack co-ordination and coaching of the other fine points."

TV—Movie Column

Carol and Company Show Was a Television Treat

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—A new report on television audience attitudes indicates that most of us would rather see a regularly scheduled program than a special.

If that is true, it may be because so many programs called specials aren't really specials at all—most often one or more big names surrounded by familiar comedy material and tired sketches

Therefore, when something like Sunday night's CBS Carol and Company comes along, it's worth a special cheer. We had a sparkling hour from the mo ment Carol Burnett yearned (in song) to play Jeanette MacDonald parts to her hilarious strip tease at the end.

Soo Peewees Tournament Champions

QUEBEC (CP)—When several hundred boys from Eastern Canada go back to school today after a week's vacation, they'll bring with them a renewed interest in French and plenty of material for English composition.

They are the lads, all 12 and under, who spent last week playing their hearts out in the international Peewee hockey tournament, the biggest attraction of baseball's famous Little League playoffs.

Among those with the happiest memories are members of the team from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., that finished first after beating Toronto North York Knights 4-2 Saturday for the championship before a cheering crowd of about 16,000.

More than 100,000 people paid during the week to see the peewees play 70 games.

TRADITION

Sault Ste. Marie's victory marked the first time a team from a city in the 15,000-50,000 population class has been able to beat a team in the big-city AA category.

Doug Kirby and Bob Boulianne, both getting assists on each other's goals, sent the Sault into an early 2-0 lead.

Then 12-year-old Lloyd Bentley took over, scoring on power plays in the second and third periods to salt away the victory.

Yvon Durelle Starts Comeback

MONTREAL (CP) — Yvon Durelle, the sag-going fighter who mufftd his chance to be a world champion four years ago, makes his second attempt at a boxing comeback here tonight and it's for the usual reason: Money.

He is pitted against Cecil Gray of Toronto in 10-round supporting bout at the Montreal Paul Sauve sports centre. The feature is a 10-rounder between dethroned Canadian bantamweight champ Bob Cleroux of Montreal and Garvin Sawyer from Arnold, Pa.

The Canadian Professional Boxing Federation held a meeting in Moncton, N.B., Feb. 16 expressed opposition to Durelle's comeback. But Federation Athletic Commission said he has been given medical clearance and sanctioned the bout.

In "Peeping Tom," Carl plays his finest role to date in an already distinguished career. The part of the insane killer with the mad obsession to photograph the face of a person who knows he is about to die demands much in the way of talent and skill and Carl comes through with a performance which will assure him of becoming an even bigger British favorite. In the spring, Boehm will be going to Italy to star in a new picture being shot on location there.

Filmed in Eastman Color, "Peeping Tom" was produced and directed by Michael Powell with the screenplay by Leo Marks. Also featured are Anna Massey, Moira Shearer and Maxine Audley.

Second Thriller
"ALL NIGHT LONG"

Against an exciting background, the music of such world jazz stars as Dave Brubeck, Charles Mingus, Johnny Dankworth and Tubby Hayes, Cousin sets about putting his plan into action by driving a wedge between Delia and her husband. He torments Rex with lies and implies that Rex's manager, Cyrus Michael (Keith Michell), is having an affair with Delia.

Even the cost of losing the affection of his wife, Emily (Betsy Blair), Cousin's vicious plan looks like succeeding as the party is carried away by the music, unaware of the tension and impending violence.

In the last thrilling moments Rex, driven crazy by Cousin, explodes into a jealous rage that brings the party to a tragic end.

For this off-beat drama-with-a-difference Executive Producer Bob Roberts has lured the polish and technical perfection of the top Producer-Director team of Michael Relph and Basil Dearden, who made such films as "Sapphire" and "Victim." Pinewood can be proud of it.

COSSA Wrestling Championships

Moira Second to Whitby

Whitby's Anderson Street High School won the first annual COSSA wrestling championships and became the first holders of the Dunlop Trophy in the tournament held Saturday in the victor's gym. The Red Raiders from Whitby amassed 91 points to beat out Moira Secondary School, who placed second with a total of 62 points. The meet attracted seven teams and a total of 70 competitors from schools in Central Ontario.

Centred in the all-day tournament were two champions and several second place finishers from last year's All-Ontario Championships. Most of these outstanding performers are competing for the last time for Anderson Street.

Five of the individual weight class championships were captured by the Red Raiders, two went to Moira and the five others schools collected one each.

The outstanding wrestler in the meet was Ken Zayette from Whitby's Henry Street School. The quiet, likeable performer won all his matches with ease. Ken, a 265 pound product of Whitby's Central school, is a three time all-Ontario champion presently competing in the under 115 lbs. king. Ken moved out of his weight class Saturday to win the under 180 lb. championship and took home the only trophy for Henry St.

The most impressive match in the tournament for Moira and the most exciting for the day was in the finals of the under 98 lbs. class. Roy Nichols of Anderson Street defeated the all-Ontario championship for the past three years matched skill, strength and stamina with Tom Jan Wally-Weller. At the end of regulation time the score was 4-4. A panel of judges, as requested to judge a sudden death overtime period. At the conclusion Wally Weller became the first COSSA under 98 lbs. champion.

John Burns became Moira's second champion as he defeated arch-rival Art Brunton of Campbellford in the under 160 lb. class.

Dan Piperni and Ted Portham finished second in their weight classes while John Stewart, Bruce Smith, Len King and Fred Donaldson took third place honors in their classes to round out the Moira scoring.

Moira has been asked to host next year's COSSA championships which should attract almost twice as many teams and approximately 120 competitors. Final acceptance rests with the Belleville school authorities.

Nuclear Arms

among other things, nuclear weapons defense "as long as the Russian Communist empire has them for attack, he said, launching his election drive in the annual Quebec Liberal Federation convention.

The applause for his nuclear policy—and the appearance of Liberal Premier Lesage of Quebec on the same platform—gave new heart to federal Liberals who hope to regain Quebec seats from the Social Credit party. Also in Montreal, Social Credit Leader Thompson opened his election campaign with a pledge to help prevent Canada from becoming a nuclear power.

"I will do all in my power to avoid Canada becoming a nuclear nation or Canada becoming involved in a nuclear war," he told a cheering audience of several thousand.

His deputy leader, fiery Real Caouette, put the nuclear arms issue this way:

"Nuclear arms, no: bread and butter, yes."

NDP OPPOSED

T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democrats, emphasized NDP opposition to nuclear weapons in a campaign speeches.

He told a Vernon, B.C., audience that nuclear weapons in Canada could ignite a chain reaction—with Russia giving nuclear arms) to Poland, the United States delivering nuclear arms for Turkey, then Egypt asking for them, and Israel following suit.

Between the United States and Russia, there already is the equivalent of 20 tons of bombs for every person on earth, he said, adding:

"Do you think one or two more missiles—placed in Canada—will add to the deterrent?"

The party leader was in the movie today — Mr. Pearson to Trois-Rivieres, Que., for a night rally, Mr. Douglas to Edmonton for a major meeting, and Mr. Thompson to Vancouver to make some television films.

While the nuclear debate continued in Canada, Christian Herter Diefenbaker and Defence Minister Churchill were overseas. Mr. Diefenbaker is due back this week and will open his national election campaign in Winnipeg next Monday.

Principal Says He Was Asked To Resign

LINDSAY, Ont. (CP)—John Glenn, 61, said he has been asked to resign as principal of nearby Cobourg's public school because of alleged lax duty activities and affiliation with the New Democratic Party.

He told an NDP nominating meeting here Friday night that he has appealed to Minister Bertrand Russell, leader of the Committee of 100, Britain's militant disarmament group, to intercede on his behalf.

Mr. Glenn, principal of the village school for 15 years, said he will not take action until he receives an official request for his resignation from the Bexley Summerville township school board.

He said two board members requested his resignation Feb. 5 in connection with his activities with the NDP, which opposes nuclear arms for Canadian forces.

Repeats Win In Legion Curling

NORTH BAY (CP) — Steve Stanford, a jolly, cool shoemaker from Virginiatown, Ont., guided his district K rink to the Canadian Legion provincial curling championship here Sunday.

Stanford, a three-time provincial winner, made it number four in the eight-round Sunday equalizing up a 10-8 decision over Fred Brown's Cobourg foursome.

It was the seventh win in eight starts for the Virginiatown curlers, earning them a trip to Port Arthur for the Canadian finals.

The only loss suffered by Stanford's team came Saturday morning in a match with Carl Hussey, Vic Jameson, Harry Moffat and Ross Cannon of Cornwall. They lost 10-6.

They recovered quickly, however, defeating Ron Stewart of Guelph in the sixth round and whipping North Bay's Rudy Steski 16-3 in the evening.

Hussey finished second in the round - robin playoff, edging Hans Milliner of London 8-7 on a sudden-death two-end playoff.

3,000 Attend

There were 2,000 seats in the hall and the overflow stood in the aisles and down broad steps leading to the outside of the west building.

In his formal statement on nuclear policy Feb. 14, Mr. Thompson said his party does not rule out defensive nuclear weapons at home or abroad, provided acquisition is based on agreement with the United States and has the approval of a non-partisan defence committee of Parliament.

Mr. Caouette expressed a differing view when asked at a press conference for a straight yes-or-no answer: "For me, no. At home, no; abroad, no."

Mr. Caouette, during one of his frequent jibes at the press that amused the crowd, said that newspapers often will suggest during the campaign that the two Social Credit leaders hold differing views.

He said he and Mr. Thompson agree completely on Social Credit principles, but may differ on what he called "the side-lights."

ONLY BRIEFLY

The quadrant weapons issue occupied only a short time in the two main speakers who said the other parties want to use it as "a political football" or "a smokescreen."

In contrast to the other parties, Mr. Thompson said, Social Credit MPs would not be "under a dictatorship of a party."

Mr. Caouette said cabinet ministers in Quebec's Liberal government should attend to provincial problems rather than indicating they would help federal Liberals in the campaign.

The deputy Social Credit leader touched briefly on social welfare planks of the party platform, including a $1,000 tax free income for married persons; $2,000 for married persons; and higher old age pensions and family allowances, to be paid on a broader base by changing the qualifying ages.

In African groups, there appears to be weary of the progressive Casablanca bloc Ghana, Mali, Guinea, Morocco, Algeria and the United Arab Republic.

Observers generally believe Guinea would like to re-enter the franc zone, because of economic difficulties with her own currency which has no exchange value. However, negotiations with France have so far have bogged down.

When Guinea defied France and voted for outright independence in September, 1958, France cut off all trade and assistance.

Some 1,000 Soviet bloc people are in Guinea, principally started in the early stages of the Soviet-Guinea friendship. But the Soviet bloc has failed in the regularity of deliveries and the high cost of some projects are more and more irking the Guineans.

Schroeder could probably be more active than Erhard in trying to improve relations with the Communist bloc. His appointment as foreign minister was opposed by people who attach a bit of fidelity a soft line on Berlin.

But both are strong anti-Communists. No political figure can expect to get far in West Germany if he is anything else.

Womens' National Curling

BC Rink Ruled Favorites

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—If British Columbia's Mrs. Ina Hansen seems to call more confidence than her opponents in the Canadian women's curling championships which open here today, she has good reason.

Her defending Canadian champion rink—one of two back in the national finals this year—is made up of four skips from Kimberley, B.C.

Mrs. Hansen, vice-skip Mrs. Ada Calles, second Mrs. Isabel Leith and lead Mrs. May Shaw all skip their own rinks at home but join forces for provincial and national playoffs.

The four-day round-robin competition ends Thursday unless a playoff is necessary.

Because of their wins last year, the British Columbia women have been installed as favorites.

HE FAVORED

Sisters Dodie (now Mrs. R. H. Smith of Toronto), vice-skip, and Jane Clark, second, still are with the team. Mrs. Mary Milla, lead, is a new member of the rink this year.

The first national championship was held in Ottawa in 1961. It became possible in this formation in 1960 of the Canadian Ladies' Curling Association.

Bullying Boss Baffles Bud

DEAR DORIS—I sell shoes. Lately my boss has been worrying me. I was off sick one day and when I went in the next he never even spoke to me all day.

He is very sarcastic and uses slang at me. I am supposed to get an hour for dinner but don't. The other day I had ten minutes to eat my lunch.

If there is anything mislaid or he can't find it he says, "Well, someone must have taken the d— thing home."

There is only he and I there so he is as much as accusing me, and I am not a person to take things.

I don't know what to do, whether to quit or phone the head supervisor and talk to him first. I don't understand that man.—BAFFLED BUD (21).

DORIS CLARK

DEAR BUD—Not the pleasantest of people. But you can learn about boots and shoes from a Bullying Boss. And you can practise handling unreasonable people by making him your guinea pig!

Ask him for a chance to talk with him. Then ask him who he thinks takes things. Ask about lunch hours. Tell him you don't mind pitching in when it's busy but want to have a break when it's not.

Chances are when he finds you can speak up he'll pipe down.

DEAR DORIS—I'm 14 and afraid to ask anyone else because they'll think I'm silly, but would you please answer my questions:

1.—What is a hicky?

2.—How is it put on you?

3.—Where?

4.—Will it harm you?—D. H.

DEAR D. H.—I—Hicky is a sort of slang word for pimple or skin blemish. There is a dictionary meaning which describes it as a kind of electrical gadget, spelt "hickey." 2.—You don't put one on you. 3.—Nowhere. 4.—No. Somebody is trying to worry you. Laugh at them.

DEAR DORIS—I have just read the letter from Mrs. D. S. who says her son would appreciate taking out a girl who was really grateful. Well I feel different. When my boy friend takes me out for the evening he chooses the place and makes the decisions.

I never fail to thank him for the lovely evening and try to show my appreciation by saying thoughtful things and doing tasks for him which I know please him. I am 17 years old and I appreciate anything he does. — Thankful.

DEAR THANKFUL—You're the answer to a young man's prayer. Date seekers please copy!

TO WANTING A DATE—If you really want help from me you are going to have to identify yourself. Write again including a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope for a private reply.

DEAR DORIS—Somebody called "Thank You" wrote you a letter about Canadians and their sad and unfriendly behavior. This is a narrow-minded critic. My family and I are also immigrants and we are nine years in Canada. It is just friendliness and the nice people who make us feel at home in our new country. My wife takes part in United Church Women activities. She really enjoys it, because of the friendly atmosphere there.

However, there is a little secret too, I would like to tell Mrs. "Thank You": Don't always wait until somebody smiles to you. Smile to them. It does wonders. Even with people having unpaid bills in their drawers.

I know many immigrants, but never heard complaints like the ones mentioned in this letter from "Thank You." These statements are untrue and for a Canadian rather insulting. HAPPY AMONG CANADIANS.

DEAR HAPPY—Thanks for writing. I agree that smiles are contagious.

must accept nuclear warheads which alone make them effective."

Speaking several times in French, and particularly when dealing with problems of special interest to Quebec, Mr. Pearson promised the Liberals will give a new meaning to confederation.

This meant equal rights and responsibilities for French and English, linguistic and cultural duality but also that Quebec must not only control its present and future economic development, it must take an active part in the development of the whole country.

Mr. Pearson recalled that Premier Lesage, whom he praised at several points in his speech, had said Quebec needs a stable government at Ottawa.

NEED LIBERAL RULE

"I agree with him. I will go just a bit further by adding that we need a stable Liberal government in Ottawa."

He said "a strong, stable, responsible government is only possible with a clear Liberal majority. And with the clear working majority, we will get things done for this country."

Social Credit, he said, unrepresented in Parliament in seven of the 10 provinces and lacking Ontario support, could not become the government. Its leadership was divided. So was its policy.

The Conservatives survived since the election last June 18 only through expediency and the "unholy Social Credit alliance," referring to Real Caouette, deputy Social Credit leader, and Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The New Democrats, in existence in only five provinces and Quebec not among these, had no chance of forming a government.

CABINET FELL APART

How could the Conservatives, with a cabinet "which fell apart completely when Parliament dissolved," expect to obtain a majority, he asked.

The Liberal leader spent a quiet Sunday receiving visitors in his hotel room and later paying a private visit to an aged admirer with whom he has corresponded for many years.

He dined with Mr. Lesage Saturday night and the Quebec premier was quoted by a person present as having congratulated him on the tone and content of his speech and as having expressed the view that the federal Liberal prospects were good in the province where Liberals won 35 of Quebec's 75 seats last June.

A reliable source said that Mr. Pearson's post - election thinking is that in the event of a Liberal victory Parliament would be called for a six-week session about mid-May to bring down a budget and deal with pressing economic matters.

There would be a fall session at which the questions of nuclear arms and the May conference of NATO ministers in Ottawa would be dealt with.

Tomorrow's Mathematician May Get Early Training From Pieces of Colored Sticks

By DAVID SCOTT

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Tomorrow's mathematician may get his preliminary training in figures and equations from pieces of colored sticks of varying lengths.

That's how pupils in a suburban Sandwich East Township elementary school are getting acquainted with addition, subtraction, division and multiplication.

The sticks — in 10 different lengths and colors—are being used in a Grade 2 class at Joan of Arc separate school, as an experiment. They are employed in a method of teaching developed by Belgian Georges Cuisenaire.

A similar program — called Unifix—is in its second year at Gordon McGregor school in Windsor. Instead of sticks, Unifix uses blocks of wood that can be put together. The principle is the same in each case.

AIM AT UNDERSTANDING

Both programs reflect the growing trend in mathematics teaching to give pupils time to understand what numbers mean. In this way when a child adds two and three and gets five, he is not merely reciting a memorized formula; he knows what the numbers stand for.

Progress may be a little slower at first with the modern approach, but educationists are of the opinion the methods will eventually yield much better results than teaching by rote.

And it is quite painless for the young students.

The Cuisenaire method, introduced to schools in Vancouver and several other communities in Canada in the last few years, employs 10 sticks.

The first is one centimetre in length, the second two centimetres and so on up to 10 centimetres.

At the beginning of the term the students are given the sticks and allowed to play with them with no direction or explanation from the teacher.

Then the child begins to make little "discoveries" for himself.

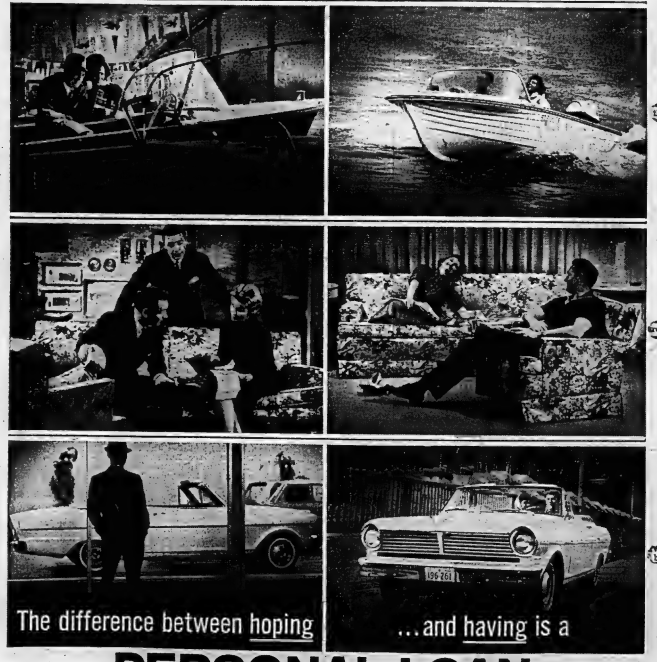
Sticks of the same color are the same length, one orange stick is as long as two yellow sticks. The teacher encourages these discoveries, and gradually channels the children's activity.

They find out, for example, that a white and a white are as long as one red (addition) that if a white is taken from a red, a white remains, (subtraction); that two whites makes a red (multiplication); that a red divided into two parts gives a white (division), and that half a red is a white (fractions).

The names of the processes are not used until later. The main purpose of the initial stages of the program is to help the children understand the relationships of the sticks. Later, the understanding is transferred to the number values.

As the pupils begin using numbers to represent the sticks, they come to see that one plus one equals two, instead of placing two whites beside a red.

Throughout the entire program, the same emphasis is placed on finding the reasons underlying the various mathematical calculations.



Mathematics, then, become more than memorizing, and start to make sense.

IT'S NOT A GAME — Playing with colored sticks is part of the arithmetic lesson for Janette Adam and Paul Tucker, Grade 2 pupils at a school in suburban Windsor, Ont. Under supervision of teacher Mrs. Leon Fortin, they are learning basic arithmetic by using colored sticks of varying lengths instead of numbers. The teaching method, developed by Georges Cuisenaire of Belgium, is being tried experimentally at the school. (CP Photo)

4 Gunmen Take Fortune In Jewels From Millionaire

Thugs Ignore Collection Of Art at Toronto Home

TORONTO (CP) — Four masked gunmen took an estimated $500,000 in jewelry Monday night after ransacking the mansion of millionaire M. J. Boyles.

Philip Boyles, 24, son of the financier, was struck on the head with a pistol and bound in a closet while the men went methodically through the 16-room home on Kingsway Crescent.

The bandits ignored one of the largest private collections of art in Canada, taking only the jewelry.

Mr. Boyles, a mining promoter, art collector and race horse owner, left with his wife for a Florida vacation three days ago and Phillip was alone in the house.

Investigating officers placed the loss at about $500,000.

WEAR STOCKINGS

Police said the men seemed to be from 24 to 26 years old. They wore nylon stockings over their heads to distort their features, and had on black gloves, black gloves and black coats. All carried .22-calibre pistols.

James Boyles, 26, manager of Celtic Farms in suburban Malton, said his brother Phillip, returned to the mansion early in the evening to await a visit from a brother-in-law, Donald Southern.

"He was home a few minutes when he heard a knock at the door," James Boyles said.

"He opened it partly and three men pushed their way inside.

They knocked him on the head with a pistol and bound his arms. Then they put him in an upstairs closet.

"Phil said they ransacked every room in the house for about 45 minutes, and he could hear them talking all the time. They seemed to know what they were doing."

FREES HIMSELF

Phillip was cut on the head but did not lose consciousness. He was able to free himself and leave the closet when he

NATO COUNCIL WILL CONSIDER NUCLEAR FORCE

Britain and U. S. Agree on Proposals

PARIS (CP - Reuters) — The NATO council will meet here Wednesday with the U.S. and Britain expected to lay down the guidelines for setting up the controversial multilateral NATO nuclear force.

The Anglo-American approach was said to have been worked out last week in Washington at a meeting of American and British officials.

The Washington meeting was called to iron out some of the problems of setting up the joint nuclear force proposed last December by President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan at their summit talks at Nassau.

The Nassau pact has received a mixed reception in Europe because of the thorny problems, both political and military, involved in the formation of the multilateral force.

The Washington talks last week covered the part of the Nassau agreement which concerned assignment of existing nuclear forces to a joint "multinational" NATO force with a "multi-manned" force, with the Polaris missile as its backbone, is being set up, sources in London said.

A foreign office spokesman said reports in several British newspapers Monday that Brit-

Canadians Must Open Up Wallets To Buy Back Control - - Douglas

EDMONTON (CP) — Canadians must open their wallets in a massive effort to regain control of the country's economy from foreign investors, says T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party.

He said here Monday that ownership control of the Canadian economy has been falling into the hands of foreign investors "at an accelerated and frightening rate."

The NDP leader spoke to a capacity crowd of 3,100 at a public rally.

Since the war, Mr. Douglas said, United States interests invested between $607,000,000 and $700,000,000 a year in Canada.

"I like Americans. I like my relatives there, but I don't want my relatives to move into every room in my house so I have to sleep in the garage.

"I'm not suggesting that we in Canada don't want foreign investment. What I am suggesting is that we generate more of our own investment capital."

This could be done in two ways: By setting up a national investment board to attract and direct investment in the processing industry; and by establishment of a Canadian development fund.

The development fund would accept investment capital from groups and individuals, and invest the capital in developing new industry.

"Nationalization is not an end in itself but the means to an end," he said in answer to a question. "If we can restore control of the economy to the Canadian people without nationalization, then we don't need nationalization."

MANUFACTURERS CLAIM DRUG PRICES NOT HIGH

Express Views At Conference

OTTAWA (CP) — The present level of drug prices is "right" and not high, the president of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association said Monday.

Roger Larose, vice-president of Ciba Company Limited, Montreal, told a press conference he did not think prices could be lowered much as long as Canada retained a free competitive system.

No real reduction could come about unless pharmaceutical manufacturing was socialized, with the further implication of government control of distribution at the retail level, he said.

Mr. Larose said he personally would favor a true health insurance plan, including drugs, and he thought this would cause prices to go down a little to the public. However, the total cost of drugs to the nation would not be lower.

He added that he considered the total annual prescription drug bill for Canada was exceedingly small at an estimated $200,000,000. Approximately another $100,000,000 was spent on patent medicines.

PRICES NOT TOO HIGH

Prices were not too high with relation to the capacity of the consumer to buy drugs. It had been shown that Canadians have the capacity to buy drugs, although there were some individual cases of hardship, he said.

The association president said he did think the price of drugs is high. . . . I wouldn't like to see prices higher . . . I think they are right."

The press conference was called by the association, which represents 57 pharmaceutical manufacturers, to present its views on the restrictive trade practices commission's report into the drug industry published last Wednesday.

Cass Does Not Feel Inquiry Is Necessary

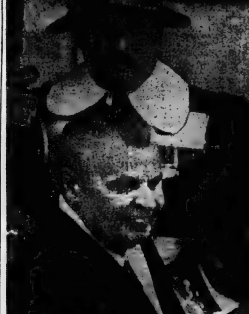
TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Cass said Monday night there is no apparent need for a further inquiry into the circumstances of union-settler strife in the Kapuskasing area. He said he has received opposition demands for a public inquiry into the background of the strikes, and the Feb. 8 shooting deaths of three striking workers. Mr. Cass said in the legislature he did not feel such an inquiry was necessary.

In any event, he added, further consideration of the matter should await the outcome of 20 settlers on non-capital murder charges and 243 strikers on charges of rioting.



The New Democratic Party Leader Donald C. MacDonald repeated allegations that police protected settlers' vehicles while the shootings occurred, and that the settlers were armed.

Mr. MacDonald said he had affidavits available to prove his charge.

Mr. Cass said he had delayed making more severe police comment into the strike area after repeated letters and telegrams from officials of the striking Lumber and Sawmill Workers Union.

Union requests, saying that more police were not necessary, or that "settlers" were not given enough police to search the 1,000 settlers spread over 300 miles of woodland, Mr. Cass said.

Vernon Singer (Lt—Toronto-York Centre) said that the handling of the Kapuskasing strike situation by the attorney-general "confirms me in my belief that he was too late with too little."

He admitted it was an honor he scarcely dreamed of when he first visited London as a young captain in the Canadian Army during the First World War.

Diefenbaker, in two speeches at the historic Guildhall and at the Lord Mayor's residence, Mansion House, proclaimed his unshaken belief in the future growth of the Commonwealth in size and in world importance.

He was hailed by the Lord Mayor, Sir Ralph Perring, as one who had brought a "freshness of approach, keenness and courage" to meeting the problems of the world.

"Canada has gone marching ahead to a position of commanding authority in human affairs,

Liberals and Socreds Eye Those 75 Quebec Seats

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Liberals and the New Democrats are eyeing Quebec's 75 seats in Parliament with eager enthusiasm.

And both parties are aiming their fire in the opening rounds of the April 8 federal election fight at the Social Creditors who hold 26 Quebec seats in the last Parliament and are hoping for at least 60 in the next Parliament.

Liberal Leader Pearson said Monday in Trois - Rivieres, Que., that the Social Credit party has no chance of forming a government, hence "a vote for Mr. Diefenbaker."

In a television talk—all in French — Mr. Pearson urged Quebec voters not to throw away their votes on a party "which creates only confusion by appealing to special interests."

At Rouyn, Que., Social Credit's deputy leader, Real Caouette, fired a counter attack at the Liberals, charging that Mr. Pearson and other Liberal leaders in Quebec have a chance to promote bicultularism when they write in power.

"We stand for Canadianism, for a fair deal for French and English Canadians from coast to coast," he said.

REORGANIZATION OF OPP WILL BE PROPOSED

Sitting Continues Until Midnight

TORONTO (CP) — Provision for reorganization of the provincial police will be contained in legislatin likely to be introduced in the current legislature session, Attorney-General Cass said Monday night.

The announcement came during Liberal opposition attacks on government appointments of the OPP and the Ontario Police Commission.

Early in the night sitting, the opposition moved to adjourn but the motion was defeated by the government and the House finally adjourned about midnight.

Mr. Cass said details of the proposed new legislation will not be revealed until after the report on the royal commission on crime, headed by Mr. Justice W. D. Roach, is received and tabled.

A major aim would be to make the OPP "an autonomous body," responsible to the legislature through the commissioner with the rank of a leputy minister.

The commissioner would be a trained executive of the attorney-general's department and would be assisted by a deputy commissioner of "proven police ability," Mr. Cass said.

SEES POLITICAL MOVE

Arthur Reaume (L — Essex North) said the government "played politics in the dirtiest, lowest possible way" by appointing defeated political candidate Norman Dann to the police commission. Mr. Graham was a Progressive Conservative candidate in York Centre in the last election.

Mr. Cass protested Mr. Reaume's "unfortunate statement" and said there was no reason to question the impartiality of the commission members.

Donald C. MacDonald, New Democratic Leader, said "consideration of lumbering work" in Quentico Provincial Park had been carried out under work

Flu Outbreaks Were Reported In Two Areas

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Influenza outbreaks were reported in two areas of western Ontario today, said two health officials in the London and Windsor areas think that serious epidemics may be developing.

Dr. J. A. Taylor, medical officer of health for Leamington and Merson Kennedy, medical officer of health for Scarborough Township with a population of Leamington has Asian flu.

It was too late for immunization, he said, "it takes at least four weeks to achieve immunization and the bug is already upon us."

In Sarnia, Dr. Gordon L. Anderson, director of the Lambton County health unit, said Asian influenza is spreading through the city and outlying areas. Cases have been turning up in industries as well as in schools.

St. Thomas Acquinas School in Sarnia was closed last week when 165 of 345 students were ill and about 30 students were absent when the school reopened Monday. About 80 of the 473 students at nearby Forest District High School were reported ill Monday.

However, Dr. D. A. Hutchinson, London medical health officer, said, the prolonged cold weather may do much to ward off the influenza epidemic he had forecast for the city.

In Windsor, Dr. John Howie, director of the metropolitan health unit, said there is no indication a flu epidemic is starting. The situation had improved since Friday, when heavy absenteeism was reported in several schools.

47 Are Lost In Sinking Of Jap Ferry

Only Eight Bodies So Far Recovered

THE HAGUE (AP)—As many as 83 persons are feared lost in four ship disasters around the world, all within 36 hours. Eight bodies have been recovered.

Rescuers braved a flaming blanket of oil in western Europe's Scheldt River to keep the death toll down. Sea tragedies also struck twice off Japan and once in the Aegean Sea.

Apparently no Canadians were involved.

The heaviest toll, perhaps as many as 47 lives, was feared in the sinking of the Japanese ferry Tokiwa Maru near Kobe, in western Japan. The 238-ton ferry collided with a 9,547-ton Japanese freighter early today.

Eight bodies were recovered. Many of the 39 still missing are believed trapped inside cabins of the sunken ferry. Police reported 19 survivors out of the 64 persons aboard.

The freighter Richmond Maru suffered little damage in the collision and its crew was unhurt.

FISHING BOAT SINKS

Further north, a 67-ton Japanese fishing boat sank in the rough waters of the East China Sea early today. All 11 fishermen aboard were drowned, maritime officials said. Two fishing boats searched the area but found no survivors.

Two tankers collided in the River Scheldt Monday, covering about a square mile of the busy river with flaming oil and blocking traffic on the busy sea route inland from the North Sea.

Fire turned the 20,766-ton Miraflores, flying the Panamanian flag, into a blazing inferno. She crashed with the 13,350-ton British Abadesa.

Capt. Giacomo Verardo of the Miraflores and six of his men are missing. Rescuers saved 30 others including the captain's wife and three badly injured seamen. All were Italian. Forty-two members of the British tanker crew were unhurt.

The Miraflores was refloated today after the fire was put out. The Abadesa docked in Antwerp for emergency repairs.

Michael Kakaris, 52, the ship's radio operator, was picked up injured on a fifty inch square piece of wood. Forty passengers and crew of the Egli were rescued by other ships on the route between Greece and Lesbos.

In addition, Taipei newspapers reported that a Chinese National Government ship, the Surveyors and an unknown number of men is missing off the southeast coast of Formosa. Police said they had no report of a missing ship.

Lizards Frozen for 5,000 Years In Siberian Ice Restored to Life

LONDON (AP) — Russian scientists have brought two prehistoric tritons—newt-like reptiles resembling lizards—back to life, after they had been frozen in ice for 5,000 years in Siberia, Moscow radio said today.

The story of the tritons, the broadcast said, suggests that space travellers might be put in a sort of deep freeze to make long journeys without the encumberance of huge amounts of supplies.

The broadcast gave this account:

"Some time ago Soviet geologists found something resembling small mud balls in the ice at a depth of 25 feet in the frozen ground of northern Siberia.

"It revived after being kept at room temperature for some time. Scientists finally classified it as a four-toed triton, one of the oldest and most primitive orders of tailed amphibia, that inhabited the earth in the Mesozoic Era (the dibosaur age).

Crown Coming To the End Of Its Case

MONTREAL (CP)—The murder trial of Georges Marcotte, charged with the slaying of two policemen during a bank holdup Dec. 14 in suburban St. Laurent, entered its seventh day today with the Crown coming to the end of its case.

The Crown so far has called 33 witnesses out of a total of 80 who have been subpoenaed, but Crown prosecutor Claude Wagner indicated to reporters all of them may not be called. He said he expected to wind up his case today.

The star Crown witness has been Jean-Paul Fournel, 40, who testified last week he took part in the $142,960 holdup with Marcotte, whom he named as the gunman wearing a Santa Claus disguise, and Jules Reeves, 39. Fournel and Reeves are awaiting trial March 29.

They are charged with the slayings of Constables Claude Marineau and Denis Brabant, gunned down when answering the holdup alarm at the St. Laurent branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Robert Holmes, 45, branch manager, gave harrowing evidence Monday that the man wearing the Santa Claus disguise sawed and cursed a lot during the holdup. He said the man spoke English and could be understood clearly.

Earlier, however, Garland Sheridan, 45, a bank customer who actually timed the holdup from 11:12 a.m. to 11:18 a.m. on his watch, said that the gunmen involved were "obviously French Canadians." He testified that he recognized the accent of French Canadians who speak English.

Extensive Bridge Building Program May Be Carried Out in Next Five Years

The city of Belleville is embarking on an extensive bridge building program which if present plans are carried out will see at least four structures costing well over $1,000,000 constructed within the next five years.

Three of the structures are included in the city's five-year capital works budget approved by council at a special meeting yesterday.

The fourth is the North Front Street bridge over the CNR double tracks already underway and which is scheduled for completion by mid-summer.

Planned for construction within the next five years are a new bridge over the Moira at Dundas Street, another over the river at the north end of the Church Street, and a railway overpass on Sidney Street.

And even that is not the end!

The city's traffic survey report received two years ago also recommended construction of still another river crossing, this one to replace the present narrow structure on College Street.

The five-year capital works budget approved yesterday called for design plans for the Dundas Street bridge this year and building of the structure next year.

But council were not unanimous in its decision as to whether the Dundas bridge or the Church Street bridge should come first.

On faction argued that with the construction of 401 highway, traffic in the south end of the city was increasing more rapidly than in the south end.

One argument was why build a new overhead railway bridge on North Front Street only to have traffic pile up at the Upper Bridge.

THINKING CHANGES,

The opposing argument by Alderman Allan Ireland, chairman of the city traffic committee, was that the Dundas Street bridge would help to eliminate traffic congestion in the lower downtown area.

The proposed Church street bridge was recommended in the city traffic survey report as part of a plan to by-pass the downtown area. Widening and rebuilding of Church Street from Dundas to Station Street was also recommended as part of the plan.

The survey report recommended construction of the Church Street bridge before the Dundas structure but action was thinking apparently has been changed.

Construction of the Dundas Street bridge has been talked of, both in and out of city council, for 30 years or more.

Design plans for both structures have been ordered.

Cost of the Dundas Street structure has been estimated in the neighborhood of 600,000 and that of the Church Street structure at $213,000.

It is expected that the Sidney Street bridge over the CNR double tracks will cost in the neighborhood of $150,000.

Liberals Name Carlie Bates In Tyendinaga

Carlie Bates was elected president of the Hastings South Tyendinaga Liberal Association last night. Other new members elected at the executive include Joe Hanley, vice-president and Earl Midgley, secretary-treasurer.

Veteran retiring president, Les McLaren, explained to the well attended meeting in the community hall at Melrose that he was stepping down in favor of youth but would continue to work enthusiastically for the organization.

Candidate Robert Temple told his followers they would be sending a Liberal government to Ottawa with a positive plan of action to put Canada back on the right track. "It isn't what Canada can do for us. It's what we can do for Canada," he said.

Golden Hawks Produce Show Second to None

Local Rotarians got a good look at the modern world yesterday with an address and film on the Royal Canadian Air Force's Golden Hawks and a display of three top selections from the Science Fair held recently in local high schools and sponsored by the Rotary Club.

Wing Commander Frank Hatton, D.F.C., commanding officer of the Golden Hawks, gave an interesting account of the work of this group since its formation back in 1959 as the solo aerobatic team of the R.C.A.F. It replaced the many different teams which represented various individual squadrons up to that time and afforded the chance for the top fliers of the force to come together and produce a show which would be second to none.

Since their formation, the Golden Hawks have performed in 80 shows a year across Canada and the United States with about one in every two million Canadians witnessing their performance each year.

They were formed, incidentally, in Trenton and returned there just this past year after having been stationed for over Chatham, N.B. for the past seven years. Wing Commander Eaton was their first commanding officer.

Current pilot team is undergoing intensive training with its seven Sabres and two T-33's over Prince Edward County at Main View airports, a fleet which is maintained by about 35 ground crew personnel, divided Wing Commander Hatton.

He noted that the ground crew are responsible to refuel, repair and as the pilots since thorough preparation is as much a key stone to a successful show as are accomplished pilots. Often the ground crew work on the planes long overnight in order to ensure the absolute readiness of the craft for a show the next day. Never has a plane missed a show, he commented.

FILM SHOWN

During the summer the backstage crew are moved about by a Flying Dragon van, a Canadian pollsn on their trek across the country together with their equipment and tents.

A film, taken of the team during a performance at the World Congress of Flight, in the past was a couple of years ago, was shown with Wing Commander Hatton providing the commentary.

It was noted that during their performance the aircraft often reach speeds of over 500 miles an hour and are within five to five feet apart during some of their four and five-plane formations during aerial manoeuvres.

Following the film a lengthy question and answer session was held.

The afternoon's agenda also featured a display on mineralogy, light lasers and ceramic glazes provided by three exhibitors from the Science Fair. Students Peter Smet, Rickey Halsey and Beverly Davies gave a brief talk on their respective displays.

Miss Davies' display of ceramic glazes was the prize winner of the fair and she will be going on to exhibit in the provincial science fair in Toronto later in the year.

The meeting was conducted by president Dr. Harry Burns.

City Council Members Guests Of Hospital Bd.

Members of Belleville city council were luncheon guests of the Board of Governors of the Belleville General Hospital at the regular meeting of the board held on Friday.

At the luncheon council members were told the progress is being made in planning for the proposed new hospital, although Mayor A. M. Haig later said, it was doubtful if construction would get underway this year.

A petition from the Children's Aid Society requesting immediate consideration for the provision of suitable quarters for the establishment of a mental health clinic on a full-time basis, was received by the hospital board.

The C.A.S. also requested that a psychiatrist be included in the plans for the new hospital construction.

The board has already included plans for a psychiatric unit in the hospital construction program and investigating the part it might play in the establishment of a mental health clinic.

A local service club has requested more information regarding the possibility of including a therapeutic pool for treating children in the rehabilitation centre which will be part of the hospital construction.

Board members will study the possibility of including this facility in construction plans.

Dr. J. D. McCutcheon has been appointed chief of the dental staff of the hospital. Dr. McCutcheon, with Dr. J. P. Lecavalry and Dr. R. W. Edwards, serve as the dental advisory committee for the hospital.

'Peace Mission' Trio on Trek, B.C. to Berlin

TRENTON — Three young men with a mission passed through Trenton yesterday. Peter Light, 19 and Kenneth Bendall, 20, and Hans Sinn, 23, are walking and driving to Berlin — 8,000 miles as the crow flies from their homes in British Columbia. Their "minimum" objective is the establishment of international peace centres in both East and West Berlin.

Already the three campaigners have covered 5,500 miles, averaging 30 miles a day, since they set out from Vancouver on September 30th. They hope to be in British by April and from there proceed through Scandinavia to East and West Germany.

Yesterday Peter and Lorne wrapped up well against a chill wind and carrying peace placards walked from their base outside RCAF Station Trenton while their car, a 1946 Chevrolet with peace signs and slogans, was being repaired. Peter said they had dismissed the hitchhiking idea after leaving the station. Civil disobedience is the keynote of their campaign, he said, although he personally thought this form of protest was passe. Their plan, he said, is three young men as members of the Canadian Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament but their present campaign is a private venture.

"Fifty per cent of the funds came from our own earnings," said Peter, who postponed a university education in order to make the march. "More funds came from social events put on in co-operation with local peace groups as well as from interested individuals. The largest single donation was from the president of the World Council of Churches, Dr. Martin Niemoeller."

RECEIVE HELP

The campaign is also receiving support from interested groups and individuals whom the young men have met on the road or in the cities. In settled areas they have been given overnight accommodation in private homes. In the more isolated stretches of British Columbia and Alberta they camped under their sleeping bags. "One of us always drives ahead to arrange such things as shelter, meals and overnight ponderence," said Peter. He added they hope to embark for England by end of March or early by freighter from St. John, N.B.

The proposed peace centres will serve for peace action, peace research, peace education, information and communication. As one of their earlier projects, three young men plan to aid in the reuniting of families separated by the Berlin wall. They also plan a study of the attitudes of the people on both sides of the wall to establish the areas of disagreement.

All three campaigners come from different walks of life. Lorne is a Vancouver factory worker and German-born Hans is a writer for peace publications. Resident of White Rock, B.C. They all hope to begin working for peace when they return home again later this year. Peter said he doesn't expect to enroll in university again. "I feel it would be hypocrisy to do so with my views, and without knowing whether or not the world will still be here in five years", he said.

Hold Suspect After Trenton Store Is Robbed

TRENTON — Loot valued at about $3,000 was recovered last night from a Toronto man suspected of a break and enter robbery of the Gerritt Brunix Jewellery shop here.

Lewis Mark, alias John Miller, the 50-year-old suspect, was first spotted by Constable George French of Trenton police, as he ran across Front St., near Elgin, carrying a shopping bag. Constable French then noticed that the window of the Brunix store had been smashed.

On foot, the constable chased the suspect along the riverbank past the Van Lowen furniture store, but the suspect outpaced the constable and crossed the river over the ice.

Constable French then returned to his cruiser and followed Mr. Russell King, on cruiser patrol in East Trenton.

Constable Mark Holden heard the call in the police station, and rushed to the scene in his police car. Meanwhile, Constable David Camp, on special duty in East Trenton had seen the chase and moved in to intercept the suspect on foot.

Male was found hiding in the snow beside a railway car beside Ontario Street, and arrested by Constables French and Holden. Mr. Russell stores were 11 wrist watches and 33 rings.

Male, who told police he was hitchhiking from Montreal to Toronto, appears in court in Trenton today.

Capital Works Budget Of $11,000,000 in Next Five Years Approved by Council

A five-year capital works budget which would see the city's debenture debt increased by approximately $11,000,000 was approved yesterday by city council at a special meeting.

The capital works budget will now go to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval.

And as a further safeguard individual applications will have to go to the O.M.B. for approval before specific projects can go ahead.

Included in the city's capital works budget for the next five years is the construction of a new addition at Belleville General Hospital, three new bridges, annual expenditures by the public works department ranging from $692,000 to $979,000, heavy expenditures by the public utilities commission and $1,500,000 for public and high schools.

DEBENTURE DEBT UP

City manager J. R. Reynolds estimated that after annual debenture retirements were taken into consideration and if all proposed work was carried out, the city's debenture debt by the end of 1967 would be just over $17,100,000.

The actual debenture debt as of December 31st, 1962, was given as $5,374,304, to which must be added another $325,111 for approved work in 1962 making a total debt at January 1st of $5,699,415.

A mill rate of 12.85 was estimated as necessary to meet debt retirements for this year. If all proposed capital works are carried out, the estimated mill requirement for debt retirement by 1967 (using present assessment value) would be increased to 19.9 mills.

Causing possibly the greatest discussion at yesterday's meeting was the proposal of the city works department and the public utilities commission to construct separate service buildings.

TWO BUILDINGS PROPOSED

Figures of $175,000 for a new public works building and of $250,000 for the public utilities building were included for this year's capital works program.

The general feeling on the part of councillors was that some sort of a combined service building to take care of city, transit commission, and public utilities commission requirements could be worked out at a considerable saving thereby to all departments.

In the end council cut out the $250,000 figure for the public utilities building and increased the public works building figure to $350,000 with the recommendation that the possibility of a combined service building be further investigated.

Opposed to this proposal, however, was the statement that this had been looked in years already been considered by the two departments.

MAY BUILD LIBRARY

An item of $25,000 for a new branch library in the east end of the city also drew objection.

"There is great urgency for a branch library," stated Deputy Mayor Ben Corke. "Surely the item has come down cost must enter the picture in municipal planning".

Mayor M. Haig and Alderman Frank Murray took a different view, however, and said that inclusion of the $25,000 figure to allow the building to go ahead would be encouraging to the library board.

No action was taken on a recommendation to postpone construction until 1964.

Biggest item in terms of dollar value in the five year capital works budget was the addition to Belleville General Hospital.

MILLION APPROVED

Included in this year's works program for hospital purposes was an amount of $3,250,000 which Mayor Haig said represented the estimated cost to the city and county after receipt of government and other grants.

The above figure would be divided on the basis of 60 per cent for the city and 35 per cent for the county, the division of hospital costs to be assumed by the two municipalities under the proposed "joint hospital ownership plan.

Mayor Haig said the figure was purely an estimate and the final figure would vary.

He said that the annual cost spread over a 20 year debenture period would be less than the gross figure indicated.

The mayor doubted if all of the money would be required this year and suggested, most of the amount could be transferred to 1964.

In the end a hospital figure of $1,000,000 for this year was approved with the balance of $2,250,000 being transferred to 1964.

STRETCH OUT REQUIREMENTS

Council stretched out money requirements for the city parking authority which asked for $150,000 for this and $50,000 for next year to provide additional off-street parking.

Instead figures of $70,000 were approved for 1963 and 1964, and for a $60,000 figure in 1965.

Council was told that plans by the parking authority included purchase of the Doyle and Thompson properties on Pinnacle Street this year, with purchase of the YMCA and Salvation Army Citadel in the two following years.

The capital works budget for 1966 includes an amount of $300,000 for the construction of a new police building.

NOT REALISTIC

Alderman Frank Murray said that the police department with its antiquated quarters was operating under extreme difficulties and suggested that everything possible be done to get the new building sooner—in 1965 if possible.

But it was pointed out that the addition built two years ago had been intended to meet requirements for at least five years.

And with plans to draw O.M.B. approval to be secured, and tenders to call, construction this year was said to be not realistic.

Term Quickly Reduced to Seven Days

A Belleville man heard himself sentenced to 30 days for drunk driving this morning after the crown prosecutor had asked for the minimum one-month term.

A moment later Magistrate Phillip Baker confessed he had not read the driving section of the Criminal Code under which the charge was laid.

He read the driving section to Belleville lawyer Robert Temple, pleaded guilty to the charge.

"Thirty days in jail," said the magistrate.

"How many?" queried Mr. Temple, rising quickly to his feet, "Seven days".

Magistrate Baker scrutinized the Criminal Code section again.

Thank you for drawing that to my attention", he told both counsel, "I will be sentenced to seven days in jail".

Ryan's car was impounded for three months.

Teen-Ager Gets Probation for One Year

Two burglary charges brought a year's suspended sentence against a Belleville teenager this morning.

Magistrate Phillip Baker also placed the youth, Grant Willshire, on probation after he had been guilty of theft of $30 in goods from Parker's grocery store and a break-in at Our Lady of Fatima separate school.

Detective Harold Reid said that securities valued at $30 were recovered. The school was ransacked but there was no malicious damage.

Willshire, 17, of Albert Street was missing in the break-in.

Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson said if restitution were made he would not oppose a suspended sentence.

"I think though Willshire," said the magistrate, "that you had better take stock of yourself and the course that you have launched on."

"It must be brought home to you that this type of thing cannot be tolerated in a community."

Drinking Under Age Cost Youth Month

Magistrate Phillip Baker jailed a Belleville youth for one month today for drinking under age.

The magistrate was told it was the second offence charged against Ronald Cross in three months. The 18-year-old Cross pleaded guilty to the charge.

"You don't seem to learn a lesson Cross," said the magistrate, deputized from Kingston for resident magistrate T. Y. Wills, now on vacation. "You are going to learn the laws are made for everyone and you don't have any special rights to violate the law."

He warned the youth: "It will be a very bad thing for you if you come before the court again on a similar charge."

Youth Pleads Guilty to Three Charges

Everything went wrong for a 19-year-old Belleville youth last night.

He was driving'a car without a licence, He'd been drinking and had a dinner. He crashed the car into the rear of a downtown bus. He decided to flee the scene. He was arrested by a policeman whose car was halted in the same traffic tie-up.

This morning, George Zachariah, 211 Coleman Street, pleaded guilty in magistrate's court to charges of accident, drinking under age and having no licence.

Police inspector J. B. McLauchlan said Zachariah's car collided with the bus at the intersection of Pinnacle and Station Streets, causing $200 total property damage. He left the car and took off through nearby streets. But, added the inspector, a provincial police constable was driving by and saw him . . . and identified him."

"This boy is on probation since October 16," said assistant Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson.

Magistrate Phillip Baker remanded Zachariah a week for sentence.

A.N.A.F. Weekly News

The Ladies' Auxiliary's executive met with Unit 201's executive last Thursday evening and it was a most co-operative meeting. President Cec Brown opened the meeting with two minutes silence. He then introduced the members of his executive to the ladies and president Marion Dracup introduced her members to the men.

Many subjects of mutual interest were discussed and new ideas and projects for the future welfare of the clubs were brought forward. A most amicable and informative hour ended with better understanding resulting between the members of both executives.

The men's executive then held their own meeting. After the regular business was finished, president Cec Brown gave a short report on the Provincial Command meeting, held last Saturday, Unit 201 was congratulated on its clear and concise progress report which was very well received by the other members present. The Provincial Sports Day will be held at Kitchener in June. At some time in May, the definite date will be announced later. This meeting will be held in conjunction with the grand opening of Lakeview's new $75,000 Wing. This should be quite an event and it is hoped that the unit will be well represented.

While on the subject of sports, Comrade George Christopher, reports that our semi-annual feud with the 48th Club of Toronto will be held in Belleville on May 11th. It looks like May will be a busy month for sports. He also says that the date for the tournament mentioned last week are now on the notice board.

It should be good prizes for the winners of each event. Closing date for entries will be placed on the notice board.

Comrade Don Andrews, entertainment chairman, announced that there would be a semi-monthly dance on Friday, March 1st so here is a chance to take your wives and girl friends out for an enoyable evening. Details in Coming Events column.

Comrades Knowlton, Brenton, Phillips and Ellis are in Belleville General Hospital. The members were sincerly sorry to hear of the heart attack suffered by Dick Ellis and hope he will soon recover.

Most everyone agrees that the drill team is a good idea but seem to have the feeling, let George do it. Names are quite slow coming on the list. With approximately over 500 members should be able to get 30 or 40 names.

A pleasant interlude on Saturday afternoon was introduced by Pres. Cec. Brown, when he presented a birthday cake and a card signed by most of the members present to our well-liked Secretary and entertainer Bert Wells, on his 39th? plus birthday. Happy Birthday and For He's a Jolly Good Fellow, were sung to Bert by the comrades. He was pleasantly surprised and thanked them for their wishes.

Don't forget the 31st of March will soon be here so remember your "X".

So, until next week, the best of luck to all.

Tom Kent Will Oppose Douglas

COQUITLAM, B.C. (CP)—Liberal Organizer Tom Kent of Ottawa was nominated Monday night as his party's candidate in Burnaby-Coquitlam in the April 8 federal election.

The nomination pits Mr. Kent, one of Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson's top aides, against T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party. Mr. Douglas won the seat in a by-election last year and was renominated recently as NDP candidate.

Mr. Kent told the meeting a Liberal government would extend family allowances past the age of 16 as a means of encouraging teen - agers to stay in school and would combat unemployment by encouraging export and improving public services.

He said the Liberals would increase old - age pensions gradually over a 10-year period and introduce a portable pensions plan.

Senator O'Leary S ys Bomarc 'No Damn Good'

HAMILTON (CP) — Senator Grattan O'Leary says the Bomarc missile is "no damn good" and the current defence controversy is a phoney election issue.

The Senator told a Hamilton West Progregsive Conservative nomination meeting Wednesday that first-strike missiles — he mentioned U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara and Gen. Guy Simonds, retired Canadian Army chief of staff—are united in the belief that the Bomarc is not an effective military weapon.

Talk of Canada being "committed" to accept the defensive missiles, now installed at North Bay, and La Macaza, Que., is "nonsense and inaccurate," Senator O'Leary said. All that existed were "plans, arrangements and proposals" made on the basis of conditions four years ago.

He described a recent cover story in Newsweek magazine on Prime Minister Diefenbaker as the "most scabrous and scurrilous" attack he had seen in 53 years as a newspaper man. Senator O'Leary is president of the Ottawa Journal.

Newsweek was owned by the Washington Post, which in turn was owned by Philip Graham, "one of the closest personal associates of President Kennedy."

"I'm not going to draw any conclusions from this," the senator said. "I will leave that up to you."

See Compromise On Nuclear Test Ban Issue

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH

GENEVA (AP) — Neutral delegates said today they see an ultimate compromise on the nuclear test ban issue involving five annual on-site inspections in the United States and the Soviet Union.

They based this analysis on speech in Monday's session of the 17-nation disarmament conference by U.S. delegate William C. Foster and Romanian Deputy Foreign Minister George Macovescu.

The neutral delegates stressed, however, that they believed agreement is still a long way off and may come about only after some top-level bargaining on the far - removed cold war issues as Berlin and Germany.

Foster and Macovescu seemed to leave the door open for on-site inspection quota compromise between the U.S. minimum demand of seven and the Russian maximum offer of three.

MAY AGREE ON FIVE

"The natural conclusion to draw from this is that the two sides ultimately will 'come together on five inspections," said a well - informed neutral source.

Such a compromise would involve a major political concession by each side.

The United States for months has warned the Soviet negotiators that the fewer inspections they agree to on a test ban conclusion it would be for the Kennedy administration to get a treaty ratified by the U.S. Senate.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vassily V. Kuznetsov, in turn threatened to withdraw the Soviet Union altogether if the United States continued to insist on more than three inspections.

Foster is trying to bypass the numbers deadlock temporarily by getting the Russians to explain exactly what they mean by an on-site inspection.

Many western and neutral delegates have suspected that the Soviet offer of three inspections may itself be a trap.

They fear that the Russian idea of on-site inspection may burn out to be little more than a meaningless formality.

The Soviet Union has refused to spell out its proposed inspection procedure unless the West first commits itself to accepting an annual maximum of three inspections.

Canada's Gen. E. L. M. Burns described this as "the argument over whether the chicken or the egg came first."-.

To break the stalemate, the United States is reported preparing a complete treaty draft which will spell out the missing details.

Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, Noted Military, Judicial Figure in County, Dies

Lieutenant-Colonel Bryson Carslyn Donnan, K.C., one of the city's outstanding military and judicial figures, passed away at Belleville General Hospital on Monday.

Col. Donnan, who was in his 68th year, resided at 91 Hillcrest Avenue. He had been ill for upwards of a year.

A moving figure in military and legal circles for years, Col. Donnan achieved high status in both callings.

He served his country honorably and efficiently in the militia and overseas in World War One. His active service in France with the Second Battalion, C.E.F. was such that he was commissioned a lieutenant on the field at the Battle of the Somme.

In private life he was a highly respected and esteemed member of the legal profession.

He was the senior partner in the law firm of Donnan and Butler, after being associated with the late William Carnew. He was created a King's Counsel in 1933.

In 1933 Col. Donnan was appointed crown attorney for Hastings County, a position he held until he retired in 1954. He was appointed a deputy judge in 1953.

Born in St. Catharines, Ont., the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Donnan, he received his early education in the Stirling, Ont., public and high schools.

After graduation he attended the University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall. He read law with the former firm of Morris and Roach, and was called to the bar in 1920.

Col. Donnan was attracted to the military at an early age. He enlisted in 1908 when a boy soldier with the 49th Regiment and continued in the service, enlisting as a signaller in the Second Battalion C.E.F., in 1914.

WAS WOUNDED

After receiving his field commission, he was wounded and invalided to England in March, 1918.

Returning to Canada he maintained his associations with the militia and received a lieutenancy in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in 1918.

Two years later he was promoted to the rank of captain and in 1929 received his majority. He was exceptionally active in the administration and training of the militia and in 1937 was promoted to the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

Given command of the First Battalion of the regiment in June of the same year, he held that capacity until 1939 when he was tired after assisting in readying the unit for mobilization.

In 1942 following militia reorganization he was given command of the Anti-Tank Regiment taking over from the late Lieut. Col. A. B. Gribble. He remained as commanding officer of the anti-tank unit (the former Argyll Light Infantry Regiment) until 1945 when he was formally retired from military life.

He never lost touch with the military. He was a guest at local militia functions both social and training.

Fraternally Col. Donnan was an outstanding member of the Masonic Lodge. He was a life member of Stirling Lodge No. 435, A.F. and A.M., a past master of the Quinte Friendship Chapter No. 127; a member of the King Solomon Preceptory No. 6; the Scottish Rite and a 32nd degree Mason.

He was an honorary director of the Belleville Club and a former member of the Bay of Quinte Country Club. He was also a member of the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club.

GIVEN HONORS

In the earlier days his legal associates honored him with the presidency of the then Hastings Bar Association, and he was a member of the Canadian Bar Association.

The funeral will be held from the Pinkston and Luscombe Funeral Home to St. Thomas Anglican Church on Thursday, February 28th, with service at two p.m.

Postpone Fight Until April 10 Or Eleventh

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—After three days of uncertainty, postponement of the Sonny Liston-Floyd Patterson fight until April 10 or 11 was officially announced today by Championship Sports, Inc.

Jack Nilon, heavyweight champion Liston's adviser, asked for April 11. General Manager Al Bolan of the promoting firm said: "We hope to talk him into accepting April 10."

The rematch originally was scheduled for April 4 at Miami Beach Convention Hall.

The postponement was asked because of a right knee injury suffered last Thursday by Liston in training. The knee while swinging a golf club for a photographer's posed shot.

250 Candidates Nominated in Last Week

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada's political parties are stepping up the pace of nominations for the 3 federal election but they still have a long way to go to match the record set in 1958.

More than 250 candidates were nominated in the last week, raising to 745 the total in an unofficial compilation by The Canadian Press. In the 1962 election, 1,036 names appeared on the ballots, the greatest number in any Canadian election.

Nominations close March 25 in 6 constituencies in which return two members apiece and two weeks earlier, March 11, in 3 dual-member ridings where extra time is needed to distribute election supplies.

Liberals, with 240 candidates, are more than half way to their goal of 265 and top all parties so nominated. The Social Credit follows with 120, including 114 full slates, in Quebec where they won 26 of their 30 seats in the last election.

NDP THIRD

The New Democratic Party and Progressive Conservatives follow with 89 and 85 candidates, respectively. Liberals are also nine Communists and six independents in the running.

In 1958, the PCs contested every seat, the Liberals 264, Social Credit 220, NDP 218, Communists 12, and Unaffiliated 27.

Liberal Leader Pearson, in Algoma East, and NDP chief Douglas-in Burnaby-Coquitlam, B.C., are unopposed. But other leaders' names will be placed in the election race officially this week. Robert Thompson, Social Credit, will be nominated at Red Deer, Alta., Wednesday and Prime Minister Diefenbaker at Prince Albert, Sask., Saturday.

Real estate, deputy Social Credit leader, is seeking re-election in the northwestern Quebec riding of Villeneuve. His son, Gilles, 23, is SC candidate in provincial Gaspe.

Fifteen women candidates have been named so far, compared with 27 last June when five were elected.

Oppose "Home and School"

Congratulations are in order for the teachers of Osler senior public school in Toronto and for parents of students at this school. Both groups have voted against the formation of a home and school association.

Our sense of approval springs from virtual ignorance of the operations of such a group, an ignorance for which we give due thanks and which, we think, qualifies us to speak with reasonable objectivity. This objectivity would inevitably have been lost by any lengthy exposure to such strains as waiting to see which room was going to be awarded the banner for attendance of parents at Home and School.

We do not know whether Admiral Hyman G. Rickover, father of the atomic submarine, shares a like happy ignorance, but we suspect he does. Otherwise he would never have summoned the energy to announce that women members of parent-teacher groups are "infernal nuisances" who "ought to stay home and take care of their husbands."

Admiral Rickover's sentiments, however, are obviously echoed by teachers at Osler public school. While parents voted down a home and school association by only a narrow margin, 197 ot 164, they voted by a vast out of 32 favored such an organization, with half the remainder registering negative votes and the other half abstaining.

An unidentified teacher is reported to have said that he, (or she), did not want parents "poking their noses" into teachers' professional responsibilities.

This stand deserves sympathy and approval —but it is essential that this be registered with reservations.

Sometimes professionals presume to annex too large a territory as their domain. How children are taught, and in large measure what subjects they are taught, ought to be the realm of the teacher, with no interference from parents, except in those rare cases where it is self-evident that methods are out of step with aims. The aims of education, though, are no preserve for teachers. Here parents have a right to be heard, along with teachers and all other citizens. Education, like war, is too important to be trusted to the professionals when it comes to deciding objectives, though the professionals must determine whether objectives which have been ruled desirable are also achievable.

It was the feeling of the majority of parents of Osler students that home and school associations, as at present constituted, do not give parents this right to be heard in connection with the determination of broad educational policies. The parents, it is said, were fed up with bazaars, teas and whist drives, with raising money for hockey sweaters, with collecting books and clothing, with staging "fun fairs." Instead, they wanted to get down to the serious business of influencing the politics of education, of providing a counter-balance to teachers' federations and trustees' associations.

More power to them!

Lobster War Possible

Tempers are frayed in Paris and Rio de Janeiro.

French fishing boats taking lobsters off Brazil's northeast coast have been told to depart. The Brazilian Navy has patrols out to enforce the order. France has sent a warship to the area to protect the fishermen.

Really, this is no laughing matter. It is all part and parcel of a troublesome world problem—how to cut to seaward should a nation's control of the waters bordering its shores extend? The nations have been unable to agree. Most of them have been talking in terms of three, six or twelve miles. The Brazilian lobster grounds, though, lie as far as 60 miles offshore. And Peru claims control 200 or 300 miles out, because that is where the tuna play.

This makes the recent Canadian action in demanding that Russian trawlers keep out of the Bay of Fundy sound eminently reasonable. The presence of Russian ships off New England and on Newfoundland's Grand Banks is, however, a continuing irritation. And Britain and Iceland have already staged their own little "war" up near the Arctic Circle.

These disagreements, though, may pale into insignificance before the threatened clash between the French and Brazilians. This is understandable. Battling over a codfish would be ridiculous—but any lover of sea food can tell you that lobster is worth fighting for.

All that is human must retrograde if it does not advance.—Edward Gibbon.

Mackenzie Bowell Victim Of Treachery in His Day

By RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — The Scene: The East Block on Parliament Hill.

The Prime Minister speaks: "I seem to have been living in a pest of traitors." He has learned that some of his key Cabinet Ministers have privately indulged in a "palace revolution" plotted to overthrow and replace him.

This the political drama of John Diefenbaker in February of 1963?

No. But the strangely parallel story of another Prime Minister, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, also a Conservative beset by party dissatisfaction and Cabinet disunity in April of 1896.

And what happened then, just before the turn of the century, will be of cold comfort to Conservatives (? years later, wondering what is going to happen now.

This current Cabinet "revolt" has been the biggest since his "traitor" ministers, as he called them, tried—and succeeded—to cut Bowell's political throat.

The "palace revolution" against Bowell was mounted in the last-gap months of the long Conservative regime of Sir John A. Macdonald.

DECISION THE ISSUE

Sir John, he had died, and so had his first successor, Sir John Abbott, and when the third in the line, Sir John Thompson suddenly dropped dead, the Conservative leader in the Senate, Governor Frankenie Bowell was drafted as Prime Minister.

Within a year, he was in trouble. The Cabinet was carping over his lack of decision, and before Parliament met in session complaining that he was letting Quebec go sour on the Conservatives.

A key Cabinet Minister from Quebec visited the editorial offices of the newspapers which had been supporting Bowell and his administration, and, in consideration, turned savagely on him.

Familiar story?

That was the situation in the Spring of 1896 when Parliament was opening and the Prime Minister was "the unhappy and helpless victim — for what defence is there against gossip or of a vicious whisper?" he interpolated.

The Session had barely started when Sir Charles Tupper, the Bowell Cabinet, led by Finance Minister George Foster, went to Lord Aberdeen, the Governor General, with their resignations.

He sent them away. They could not, he told them, for he could deal only with the Prime Minister. So back they trudged from Rideau Hall to Parliament Hill and gave the beleaguered Prime Minister their resignations.

"I scorn", he said, then, getting off a remark that would live down through the political year, "to have been living in a nest of traitors."

A DISASTER

Frantically, the desperate Prime Minister tried to rebuild his shattered Cabinet.

But that "nest of traitors" got to every potential Cabinet replacement before he did and talked or pressured them out of whatever ideas they might have had of helping the hard-pressed Prime Minister.

History does not make clear what threats or inducements the "rebels" might have used to frighten or lure old recruits for the Bowell Cabinet.

Finally, the Prime Minister carved in a

It was all but uncoditional surrender to the conspirators of the "palace revolution".

They had themselves a deal. The Cabinet was reformed to assign in favor of Sir Charles Tupper, then Canada's High Commissioner to Great Britain who had hurried home from London to masterminded the political operations on Sgeorge Foster behind the scenes.

On the promise of the Prime Minister's resignation, the cabinet "rebels" returned.

Bowell called the election and resigned the very next day, leaving Tupper, as the new leader, to direct the campaign.

And how did Tupper and the Cabinet conspirators do?

They got such a beating at the polls that it was not until after the turn of the century, 15 years later, in 1911, that they managed to regain power.

As it turned out, Bowell had the last laugh.

For while the "nest of traitors" were all politically unemployed after the election, he still had his seat in the Senate.

How to Win Or Lose Playing Bridge

By SYDNEY HARRIS

I happen to know a bridge player in Florida who wins consistently, year in and year out, against some of the finest players in the country. Technically, most of his opponents are better than he is, and they cannot understand the reason for his success.

In bridge, as in most competitions of skill, the technical ability is not the determining factor. Above a certain plateau of prowess, it is the psychological elements that swing the balance one way or the other.

A couple of years ago, I picked up a master work on bridge, written by the two French champions, Albarran and Jais, called "Commnet Gagner au Bridge (Vous aussi, Lecteur)." The authors insisted that there are three factors that make the difference between a winning and a losing player.

In the order of importance, they are (1) Strength or weakness of personality; that is, of temperament and psychological qualities; (2) The methods employed; and (3) Technical ability. And it is true that some of the finest technicians are the biggest losers across the table.

Then the authors listed the five commonest faults among bridge players, which are the greatest number of points. It will surprise the layman to learn that some of these has to do with ability per se:

These five crucial failings are: (1) Carelessness and lack of concentration; (2) Selfishness and obstinacy; (3) The art of making simple situations difficult; (4) Arrogance and conceit; (5) Obvious contempt for partner and opponents.

All these failings, by it notred, are psychological or temperamental; not one is connected with the actual play of the cards, with odors and elimisations and throw-ins and endplays. Indeed, as the authors take pains to point out with plentiful illustrations, the good players suffer more from these above faults than the mediocre players do.

This is not a column on bridge, but on conversation generally, and on the over-estimation we commonly make on technical skill in social behavior. It is true that we need to master the rudiments of any given game, but technical mastery is often a boomerang if it is not accompanied by the power attitudes and reactions.

In bridge, as in most pursuits, fine technical ability is called for on occasion only one hand out of ten, and here the expert outlines. But it is on the ordinary hands that temperament and character prevail; and this is where stubbornness, conceit, contempt, carelessness and the temptation to be over-clever as many otherwise good players. The winner, in more serious games than bridge, is the man who understands himself, his partner and his opponents more than the cards.

Right Use Of Aid

Chicago Daily News

If, where economic progress can be produced in underdeveloped countries with our aid, we expect that democracy will naturally result, we are living in a fool's paradise. The Soviet Union has made tremendous economic strides in four decades, but it is scarcely a democracy. The question to raise in each case is: Are what are we trying to accomplish within the realm of the possible?

One Nation

Hamilton Spectator

If we do not understand French Canada, it is in no small part because quite often she gives other Canadians very little chance to understand her. One thing we know, and certainly Quebec must know, is that we go on living as one nation or we die in trying to create two.

20 YEARS AGO

February 25th, 1943.

Twenty-three years ago to morrow the first Kinsmen Club was organized in Hamilton by H. A. "Hal" Rogers who had just returned home from overseas and fighting a common enemy. On Saturday the Kinsmen of Belleville will be host to Hal. Rogers, Jerry Kenchiel, National President and Monty Bantick, secretary of the association of Kinsmen Clubs on the occasion of the 23rd anniversary of the founding of an all-Canadian service club that boasts of membership stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Mr. Harold Seldon, chairman of the A.R.P. Commitee of Belleville, appeared before the Board of Trade and asked the Chamber of Commerce at their meeting held yesterday and gave a most interesting account of the work so far accomplished in our city. Not long after the organization into the Department definitely placed Belleville in Class 'B' in regard to enemy hazard. Under this category the Department supplied the city with an assortment of apparatus and equipment for emergency use in case of an attack from the air. Among the pieces of equipment was a pump. The pump was capable of throwing three streams simultaneously over the highest building in the city. All of this equipment is now stored here without any cost whatever to the citizens. However the Department would like to see a more widespread interest in this work than so far has been manifested in Belleville. According to Departmental regulations and ideas, there should be an enrollment here of not less than 200 men for work. Instead of that the present figure is only around 100.

Parental Revolt Brews

Chicago Tribune

If young Republicans has just kicked grandpa, lugged father for not keeping the family car full of gasoline, flunked English for the fourth time, and condemned mother to Squaresville, don't take the gas. Take pep—from the British. A parental rebellion is brewing among the fogs of London town.

Tired of the plethora of pamphlets and books aimed at helping parents understand teen-agers, a British organization has put the shoe on the other foot. It's time, says "Parents," a booklet produced by the National Marriage Guidance bouncil in London, for teenagers, to realize that their parents did not grow up in a culture catering to every caprice of an adolescent.

It was a different world. In those days, children didn't have much money, much freedom, much independence. No one designed teen-age fashions for impressible eggs. The family car had more uses than fraternity junior and his pals whenever he wanted to go, go, go.

The pamphlet wishes the teen-age monster to realize that when a parent says, "This is a fine time of night to get home," the old cracker really means, "I've been worried about you. Why can't you warn me if you're going to be late, or I don't have to sit here imagining all sorts of awful things are happening to you?"

Or, when a harassed parent hurls out the age-old aphorism: "I don't know what young people are coming to these days," what he means to convey is, "Please tell me a bit more about the way you think and feel because things are so different nowadays and it's very

Torus Irritating Growth In Roof of the Mouth

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.*

Dear Dr. Molner: What would a growth or lump back in the roof of the mouth mean? It is like a bone or a hardened gum. I dont know if it is growing but I just discovered it. I am making myself sick thinking it is cancer.—Mrs. H.H.

Dear Doctor: Is it natural to have something in the roof of the mouth, like a bone? It isn't sore but it seems to be getting larger. — Mrs. M.

The same question has come from two readers in far-distant cities.

If I were making myself sick, thinking it is cancer, I know what I'd do: I'd go to the doctor at once. And in this instance, I could pretty well predict what the answer would be.

While obviously I can't identify a lump just from reading about it, I can point out that a torus occasionally forms in the roof of the mouth and toward the back part in the hard palate, to be precise.

That is the point at which two bones forming the roof have joined, and sometimes an overgrowth of bone occurs there. It isn't cancerous. It's just a quirk of growth

A torus, if the patient has dentures, can be a nuisance by interfering with proper fit of the upper plate. If the lump isn't too large, the plate can be fitted around it.

Ordinarily nothing is done about a torus, although in some cases it can be removed surgically if size seems to warrant it.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have been taking a daily capsule of iron and liver and recently noticed that my stool is very dark, almost black. Is this caused by the iron? — Mrs. J.E.

It is quite usual for iron to cause such a color change, but I would add this word of warning: Be sure it is the iron, not some subtle loss of blood in the intestine which is causing it. For bleeding can cause that dark color, too.

Dear Dr. Molner: My daughter, 13, weighs 130 and is only 5 feet 2. Isn't she too heavy? What can I do about it?

She has tried eating less and cutting down on sweets. Nothing has helped.

I think one reason for her weight is that she doesn't get enough exercise. When she comes home from school she does her homework and then sits and watches TV the rest of the day She really wants to lose weight but can't. — Mrs. E.J.

She's not just overweight. She's obese, Fat.

Cutting down on sweets obviously is not the answer. She should eliminate them entirely. It won't hurt her. She should have a balanced diet, high in protein, vegetables, fruit and milk (skim milk, I'd say), and limited in starchy foods, fats and sugar in all forms. And no between-meal snacks except, if she wants to chew something, carrot sticks, celery or such.

I can't accept the assertion that she "really wants to lose weight" unless she changes her eating habits radically.

Nor does sitting in front of TV indicate any desire to lose weight. I'd make a rule that the set isn't to be turned on until she has had at least an hour of brisk exercise every afternoon. Even a couple of fast walking (not just strolling) every day will help. Skating, riding a bike, basketball, swimming or other sports would be even better.

Says Kennedy Favors Quebec Independence

MONTREAL (CP) — Separatist leader Raymond Barbeau said Monday night he has it on good authority that United States president Kennedy "favors" an independent Quebec republic.

The founder and president of L'Alliance Laurentienne, described as the oldest surviving separatist movement, said "persons close to President Kennedy" had told him of the president's" attitude toward a free Quebec — free politically and economically."

Mr. Barbeau made the statement in an interview following the launching Monday of his book, Quebec's Economic Liberation.

L'Alliance Laurentienne was founded in 1957.

Sino-Soviet Relations Move Back on Better Terms

By CARMAN CUMMING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Soviet Union and Communist China are moving cautiously to settle ideological differences that only a month ago seemed certain to cause an open break between them.

On Jan 18 China's delegate to the East German Communist party congress was publicly humiliated by boos, shouts and foot-stamping from his Communist colleagues. Many in the West — red in the Eastern bloc as well — felt the split had one beyond the point of no return.

Since then the temper of Sino-Soviet relations has swung slowly in the other direction.

On Feb. 9, in an interview with Canadian publisher Roy Thomson, Premier Khrushchev reached deep into his store of Russian proverbs for one explaining that "when dear friends quarrel they are just amusing themselves."

SUGGEST TALKS

The next day Pravda, organ of the Soviet Communist party, said the Soviet leadership was ready for a meeting with the Chinese "at any level" as a first step towards a broader conference that would decide the correct road to world communism.

Peking — although it had proposed such a conference earlier only to be rebuffed by Moscow —reacted without enthusiasm to the Pravda editoria. It said in effect that Moscow would have to repudiate Yugoslav "revisionism" before a meeting would be possible.

But only a few days later Khrushchev warmly welcomed a new Chinese ambassador to Moscow and promised that "when the last spadeful of earth is thrown on grave of capitalism we will do it together with China."

And on Feb. 19, the Peking People's Daily, Chinese counterpart of Pravda, began publishing detailed criticisms of the Chinese from other Communist parties — including speeches by Khrushchev and Pravda editorials.

MAO TAKES HAND

These developments appear to have cleared the way for the series of conciliatory meetings and statements of the last few days, notably the "friendship" meeting in Peking Saturday between party leader Mao Tse-tung and Soviet Ambassador S. V. Chervonenko.

There was immediate speculation that Mao, who now seldom engages in working-level diplomacy, had given Moscow a reply on possibilities for bilateral meetings and a general Communist gathering.

Still unclear is the question of whether any substantive progress has been made towards a policy reconciliation or whether the current moves involve only an attempt to plaster over the crack.

Pravda's Feb. 10 editorial, now released in Peking, indicated real progress had been made.

Arguing that conditions were right for healing the rift, it said the Chinese party has stressed that it "is striving to avert another world war and believes in the feasibility of achieving this, advocates peaceful coexistence between states with differing social systems and admits the possibility of also using peaceful forms besides the armed forms of struggle for the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat."

Such a statement, if true, is good news indeed for the West. Peking has yet to confirm it.

Mansfield Says U.S. Volunteers Aided Invaders

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield has acknowledged that during the height of the 1961 Cuban invasion several Americans volunteered to fly combat missions and four lost their lives.

Thus the Senate's Republican leader, Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, got no argument from the Kennedy administration's chief Senate spokesman on his charge that four Americans had been shot down in the Bay of Pigs invasion.

Mansfield, who said that in this case he was speaking only for himself, added some details in his statement:

"It is known that a few experienced American airmen were employed to train Cuban pilots, navigators and radio operators. Because of exhaustion of Cuban pilots, several of these American volunteered to fly combat missions. Apparently a decision was made by those directing operations to accept this offer. Several planes were attacked and four of these Americans lost their lives."

COUPLES MOVE OUT

ST. SEVERE, Que. (CP)—No share in the population explosions seems to be in store for this village. All 13 couples married here in 1962 have made their home elsewhere.

Bancroft Was Coldest Spot In Country

Quinte district residents hoping to turn a collective back on winter found the season still had a kick in it today.

Temperatures plummetted down below zero as the sun came across the district this morning.

At Bancroft and Gilmour it didn't stop until it hit 24 below — the lowest official reading in the region. At Flevna and near Picton at opposite ends of the district — temperatures were reported as low as 20 below. In between, Belleville recorded a low of 13 below at 7.30 a.m.

Other district lows were:

Tweed: —11
White Lake: —18
Dacre: —11.

The Department of Lands and Forests reported average temperatures in the Tweed area 10-15 degrees below normal in February, compared to the same time last year.

Meantime, most of the district still is heavily covered by snow. The steepest ground reading has been taken at Wellington — the centre of Lake Ontario blizzards since winter started. Snow is at a depth of 24.2 inches around the lakeshore village. At Bancroft ground depth still is 23 inches, and 17 inches at Tweed.

Automation Could Displace 2,500 a Week

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—Up to 2,500 workers a week could be displaced if automation in industry continues at its present rate, Labor Minister Michael Starr said Monday night.

He said at a press conference that a government bill presented before dissolution of Parliament contained provisions for the retraining and movement of displaced workers.

Mr. Starr said the bill was aimed at providing a displaced worker with a job in the same factory or "at another location" at the worker's expense.

ANTHROPOLOGIST DIES

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP)—Professor Melville Herskovits, internationally known anthropologist and founder of the first university program of African studies in the United States at Northwestern University, in 1947 died Monday night. Herskovits, 68, died in his home after suffering a heart attack Feb. 20.

Vida Peene Has Simple Formula for Promoting Arts, Set Up Committee

By PATRICIA RUSAK

TORONTO (CP)—Vida Peene has a strikingly simple formula for promoting the arts—set up a committee.

"Organizing a working committee is the most effective way to get things done," says the president of the Dominion Drama Festival.

It's not only in the DDF, however, that the organizational talents of this tall, energetic woman have been put to work with positive results.

She initiated the Canadian Opera Guild, of which she now is chairman, helped found the ballet guild, and was responsible for the appointment of women directors on the board of the Canadian Opera Association.

One of the original members of the Canada Council, Miss Peene is also a director of the Canadian Players Foundation and represents the Canadian Federation of University Women on the Canadian Centenary Committee.

Always tastefully dressed in clothes that complement her greying brown hair, Miss Peene is likely to be present anywhere in Canada that matters of culture are being discussed. And one of the secrets of her success is a combination of charm and efficiency.

However, while she is an enthusiastic proponent of organization as a means of helping the arts she fully recognizes that it's folly to try to impose ideas on the artists themselves; they need freedom to develop their talents.

MONEY WISE

One of her strong points is that dealing with cultural activities in, which there is a chronic shortage of money, she knows how it can be raised. And she tries to be scrupulously fair in distributing funds to the different branches of the arts.

Miss Peene is convinced that organization is effective without rules and she insists on strict adherence.

As an example, when she became president of the women's committee of the Canadian Opera Association five years ago she discovered there was no constitution.

"I just can't operate that way," she said, explaining that she immediately set up a constitution committee.

And as chairman of the committee she discovered many things that needed clarification.

"For one thing, there were no women on the men's board and the women's committee could never get to first base with its ideas."

So, as what she calls "a historic meeting," she presented a 14-point program to the men's board. Twelve points are half a dozen women on the board and it worked beautifully."

PLANS FOR 1967

As president of the Dominion Drama Festival, Miss Peene wants to attend as many of the 16 regionals as possible before the national festival in Kitchener, Ont., May 13-18.

She is also working on a history of the DDF which is to be published before 1967, and that set next summer as her deadline for getting out the first mimeographed copy of a catalogue of Canadian plays for the centennial year festival.

During 1967 the DDF will produce only Canadian plays, even in the regionals. This means there will be over 110 Canadian plays put on that year."

And for those who wonder where all the Canadian plays will come from, she has an answer. In research back to 1750, she says she has discovered almost 800 Canadian plays in English.

"You can imagine the French picking up their ears when they heard this. Naturally they wanted to come in on it so I let them, providing they didn't hold us up."

CHAIN REACTION

Miss Peene can't remember how she first became involved in the arts. "But by joining one thing I have always ended up by getting involved in five or six others."

As a child she attended the theatre and concerts frequently with her parents. After graduating from the University of Toronto she took the first director decorating course for the U. of T. extension department, and during the Second World War worked in food administration for the Red Cross. Afterward she wrote a decorating column for the Toronto Star under the pseudonym Susan Proctor.

When Miss Peene isn't travelling for the DDF or other committees she handsomes red brick home in the Toronto suburb of Forest Hill Village is the meeting place of many working groups.

And she is constantly trying to improve them with the belief that to be successful one must keep working.

Success alone doesn't mean continued success. When you think this, that's when you begin to collapse."

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: My husband and I are separated but I soon will file suit for divorce. I've continued to wear my wedding ring, but wonder if this is in good taste considering the ill feelings between us. How long is a ring correctly worn after such a situation? Should I continue to wear it until the divorce is final? We have no children, so I don't have to worry about "appearances" in that respect. — Mrs. F.F., Trenton, N.J.

Answer: A wedding ring usually is worn during a period of separation, but it may be removed, if the divorcee prefers, once the marriage is legally dissolved.

Question: My husband recently was promoted to an executive position in his firm. We had dinner at the home of the president a month ago, and now we plan to have both the president and vice-president and their wives to our home in a few weeks. There will be no other guests. How should the seating for dinner be properly arranged according to rank? — Mrs. P. C., Philadelphia, Pa.

Answer: The president is seated to your right and his wife to the right of your husband. The vice-president is seated to your left and his wife to your husband's left.

Question: My husband and I were invited to a dinner party. The invitation included my name and her husband's who were visiting for the week-end. When we arrived, our hostess told me to take our guests and make sure they met everyone. Since she was busy greeting late arrivals, I did as I was told, but thought this was rather an unwelcome gesture on behalf of our guests. Shouldn't she have made the introductions instead of leaving it up to me? — Mrs. R.M., Stamford, Conn.

Question: My husband and I have been invited to visit at the home of some friends for a few days next month. We've been told to bring evening clothes for community club dance. Since they've planned to entertain us so nicely while we're with them, I feel obligated to be should offer to pay all, or at least part, of the check at the dance. Would this be proper on the part of a guest? — Mrs. K.H., Washington, D.C.

Answer: No, the host takes care of the entire check at the dance, as well as most expenses, other than personal ones, during the weekend.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mrs. C. Y.—How can two brothers turn out so differently?

George Y.— Why not? He's Dan and I'm me, George.

• • •

Mrs. C.Y.—Our sons are a year-and-a-half apart in age, yet they are miles apart in temperament and accomplishments. George enrolled in our state university and flunked out during his freshman year, while Dan, who followed him there a year later will be graduated this June as a Phi Beta Kappa honor student.

And its not a matter of brains, because George was an A student right through high school. My husband and I are puzzled. What went wrong? We treated both boys alike, tried not to spoil them but gave them every encouragement. Now, at-this late date and after he completes military service next year, George talks of returning to college. But he'll be 23, and will he feel among the teen-age freshmen?

George Y.—I don't know how my folks can expect me to be a carbon copy of Dan, their pride and joy. He studies all the time, books, rules and regulations, like a duck to water. I didn't, when I got to U. Not after being in the Army this long I think I can get used to the grind—there will be heavy assignments, and all those do's and don'ts.

Of course I'm sorry I couldn't breeze through the four years like Dan. Maybe being a college graduate is my head. It was my first experience being in the company of older fellows. Whatever I did, I did, even if it was drinking, gambling, and staying out late. Lots of that during Army leaves is all right, but in college it got me in trouble, and pushed my marks below the water-line!

The Council: One of the most common fallacies parents labor under is the belief that their children had the "same parents," the "same" supbringing, the "same" home. Mrs. Y. was older when her second son was born, Mr. Y. may have had more worries as the father of two with less time and patience for handling them. No two children ever have the "same" environment, and even if they did, by some fool-like miracle, they would react to it differently. So you can't win, Mrs. Y., if you expect childtalog to be something like cakebaking — same ingredients, same results.

George's dropping out of school is no calamity. It's a frequent occurrence and, according to guidance officials in many universities, often a good thing. The leap from high school to college involves a major emotional adjustment. We speak of a high school "boy," but a college "man." There are new freedoms. Too many freedoms too soon gives some young folks trouble. As George suspects, they went to his head.

Actually a good percentage of freshmen who drop out do return, when they have a clearer idea of what they want out of life, what is expected of them on the campus, and why they crumpled up on their previous try. George's absence was not time wasted. He'll return more mature, more disciplined, more determined.

The age factor doesn't count for much on the college level. With older graduate students and back-to-school retirees checkering the ranks a 23-year-old freshman will just be one of the hot pollod.

We urge Mrs. Y. to avoid recrimination with George. His rebellion came fast and may be past. Who knows whether Dan's may be seething to boil quietly to burst forth at a later date? Such life? We hope not. But comparing is a dangerous game for parents. Certainly there's no law of nature that makes brothers alike.

William Perry, Jr., 24 guidance official at Harvard University, says that his office advises many freshmen to leave and return later.

Parkdale H-S Pres. Presented With Gifts

Last Thursday evening Mrs. M. Wilkie and Mrs. H. Reddick were hostesses at a shower held in the latter's home. The many guests were greeted at the door and introduced to the gathering.

During the evening tasty punch and candies were served. The hostesses received a handper full of gift-wrapped parcels to Mrs. D. Reid, president of the Parkdale Senior and School Association. Upon opening by the president, gifts for the association were seen, and included tea towels, several dozen spoons, cake plates, cream and sugar sets, serviettes, an electric tea kettle from the teachers and various other sundry items.

Petite Cream Cheese Pastries

by Mary Moore

Attention all pastry cooks! I have a little bearing for you. Tender, flaky, mouth-watering and easy. What more could you ask?

The charm of these is in their variability. From one batch of dough you make 3 or 4 different shapes. Each shape is topped with a different filling which changed its appearance.

If you have a two-or-three tiered sandwich server, you can arrange one variety at each tier and these with coffee will be the refreshments for an afternoon party or a late snack. Indeed it is quite elegant and a compliment-stimulator.

CREAM CHEESE PASTRIES with Variations

1) cup butter or margarine, room temperature, 2 3 oz. packages white cream cheese, room temperature, 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour.

Soften butter at room temperature. Add cream cheese. Beat until smooth. If electric beater is used beat on "low" for about 2 minutes; if by hand about 75 to 100 strokes. Add flour, ¼ cup at a time, beating well after each addition. Work with fingers to smooth dough. This dough is very easy to handle. Roll out and shape on floured board according to individual pastry recipes below, and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 18 to 20 minutes or until barely browned. Makes enough for about 3 dozen pastries.

1) Preserve and Cream Pastries: Roll pastry ½" thick. Cut into 2" squares, then diagonally into triangles. Make a deep depression in centre of each triangle (see note). Bake as above. Top with dim slice white cream cheese or thick dairy sour cream. Top with cherry preserves or apricot jam or bramble or currant jelly.

2) Liver Pate Pastries: Roll pastry ⅛" thick. Cut into oblongs, about 1 x 1½" each. Make a deep trough-like depression in each oblong. Bake as above. Fill with canned liver pate (or combine 3oz. can liver pate, 1 packed hard-cooked egg, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard, 2 teaspoons mayonnaise and 2 teaspoons drained sweet pickle). Garnish with chopped pimiento.

3) Lobster Mayonnaise Pastries: Shape pastry in balls between palms about 1" in diameter. With thumb make a deep depression in each ball. Bake as above. Fill with Lobster Mayonnaise: (Dice small can lobster meat. Add snipped chives or green onion tops and enough mayonnaise to hold together.) Garnish with sliced, pitted green or ripe olives.

Note: The depressions and troughs in these pastries tend to puff up and disappear, but never mind. You've tried. Pile the toppings on neatly enough to avoid overflow. Make only ½ amount of each topping if you want 3 variations from one batch of dough.

PITY THE POOR HISTORIANS

The study of costumes, through the ages is fascinating, leading historians to conclusions about the social structures of the past. If all the fashions for 1963 were sealed in a capsule and stored in the nation's capital, to be opened 1000 years from now, what conclusions would the historians of the year 2963 reach?

These historians would be justified in supposing that Canada was invaded by Spain, early in the spring of 1963. How else could they explain the Flamenco hat of stitched straw, labelled "Madrid—1963"? How else explain the fine quality leather coats, also labelled "Spain"? When they discover ponchos in bright aquas and pinks, they might think that some of the South American countries, or perhaps Mexico, joined the invaders.

They would, no doubt, believe that Egypt had left its mark on Canada, when they found the case of elaborate eye make-up along with a wig of human hair. This thought would be further supported by the discovery of some loose, shift dresses of real and synthetic linen. (After all, the rulers of Ancient Egypt wore wigs and linen was first produced along the Nile). Heavily jeweled pins and slave bracelets found near the linen area would strengthen this theory.

Their next discovery, the rajah coat, cut on tunic lines, placed near a silken sari might lead them to conclude that India had a hand in the conquest of Canada. Their thinking along these lines would be further fostered on finding the knitted cap of grey pertile lamb, tagged "Winter 1962-63."

Confusion might reign when they unpacked a hat of twisted straw with flowing draperies of red and blue. When they read the card, "Lawrence of Arabia," we can only guess at the state of their minds. The discovery of another straw hat, resembling a man's bowler, but pyramid-top with silk veiling and ribbons and tagged "Spring 1963," would only deepen the mystery.

The finding of a handbag made entirely of plastic and accompanied by a pair of shoes with synthetic soles, might lead these thoughtful gentlemen to conclude that the use of leather was unknown in Ancient Canada.

Slinky, shiny bathing suits, tagged, "The Wet Look" might lead to the unfair thought that the girls went without bathing suits; that is, if the historians of the future lack any background knowledge of beach bunnies and other unathletic types, who don't go near the water.

Frankly, we don't envy the historians of the year 2963!

Community Nursing Registry Gives Reports, Names Officers

The Belleville Community Nursing Registry held its annual meeting last Wednesday at Education Hall, Belleville General Hospital.

Prior the meeting, a special film was shown by Miss Marion Gomme, on "Progressive Nursing Care", an improved type of Nursing Service now being used effectively in several United States hospitals.

Mrs. Marguerite Lucas, president, welcomed the fine attendance of Board of Directors and members of the Registry. She thanked the Board of Directors, Registry personnel and members for their co-operation and wished them well in 1963.

A summary of the year's meetings was submitted by secretary, Mrs. Mary Newman, which showed there had been three general and two executive meetings during 1962. Miss Irene Lawson, field secretary for the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario, attended one of the executive meetings concerning finances of the Registry, at which time she stressed the importance of keeping a director in order to maintain professional status of the registry.

The corresponding secretary's report was given by Mrs. E. McLennan and the treasurer's report submitted by Mrs. E. Barclay.

Mrs. J. Glen presented the financial report, indicating that five finance meetings were held concerning budget revision, and that in September an additional fee of $32 was requested from each member to meet the registry obligations. Appreciation was expressed to the Women's Hospital Auxiliary and to the Board of Governors of the Hospital for their financial assistance.

Still Insists Riel Fought For the Right

WINNIPEG (CP) — Mrs. Harry Cumming celebrated her 95th birthday still insisting that Louis Riel fought for the right cause in his ill-starred rebellion of 1885.

Born Feb. 4, 1868, of white and Indian parents at Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask., when it was called Cherry Island, Mrs. Cumming carried bandages for the Metis rebels of Riel when she was 17.

Despite the fateful battle of Batoche Ferry, where the rebel movement was crushed, she nursed Indian and Metis wounded.

Even today, blind and nearly deaf, she replies firmly when asked whether she thought Riel was right:

"He sure was. He fought for the rights of the country."

Riel, who was hanged for treason, led two uprisings, in 1869-70 and 1885, when Metis furriders and Indians reacted in fear their rights and lands would be overrun by agricultural settlers moving to the prairies.

MAKING PLANS

RICHIBUCTO, N.B. (CP) — Ratepayers of this eastern New Brunswick community have voted to set up a local improvement district, as the first step toward incorporation as a village or town. The plans were spurred by announcement that a $2,500,000 distillery will be built here.

Trend to the Two-Storey Home Appears General

By EDNA BLAKELY

OTTAWA (CP) — Because women want the living quarters of their homes separated from the sleeping quarters, there's a definite trend to the two-storey, four bedroom home, real estate brokers from five Ontario municipalities say.

The five, interviewed Monday during the 41st annual convention of the Ontario Association of Real Estate Boards, agreed that it's the wife who has the most say when it comes to buying a house.

"If he's enthusiastic and she doesn't like it, they don't buy the house," said Vic Holmes of North Bay. "But if she's enthusiastic and he doesn't like it, he buys it anyway."

Mr. Holmes says he's impressed by how well versed women are about housing. "They're well informed on the topic from newspaper and magazine articles," he said. He estimated that 90 per cent of the homes he sold were chosen by women.

The trend to the two-storey home appeared general throughout the provinces. Mrs. Norma Bland of Ottawa said the two-storey home afforded more privacy, allowed larger rooms and the taxes were lower.

WATCH FOR PATTERNS

She says women look for "traffic patterns" in the house. They want houses where the children can get to the play areas from the back door without tracking through the living room.

The same pattern is developing in the Kitchener-Waterloo area, Abe Wiebe of Kitchener said.

"There's a pronounced trend to the two-storey home particularly in the middle and higher price classes," Mr. Wiebe explained. He said the one-level style houses sold from $18,000 to $40,000. This type of home offered more spacious living.

Mr. Wiebe said the concept of the living room as a parlor was returning and people were looking for homes with family rooms as well as living rooms.

Splitlevels were not popular because it was hard to overcome the noise factor and the necessity for a number of sets of stairs, he said.

MAY MAKE COMEBACK

Mrs. Shirley Brunke of Toronto said she wouldn't be surprised to see three-storey homes making a strong comeback. Some people were now putting their playrooms in the attic.

In Sault Ste. Marie, there is an increased interest in luxury accommodation, Henry L. Bullock said. More people wanted larger and more expensive homes and were willing to pay up to $50,000.

Although bungalows and split-level homes were being built, the trend was to the two-storey

Cannifton U.C.W. Plan Spring Tea

The regular monthly meeting of the Bowering Group of Cannifton United Church Women was held in the church on Monday evening with 15 members and two visitors present.

The president Mrs. Vera Mitchell led in prayer and welcomed the visitors. The secretary Mrs. Doris Pound read the minutes of the last meeting. The treasurer Miss Gladys Brenton gave her report and Mrs. Jop Putman gave the card report.

It was agreed to buy a high chair and play pen for the nursery and Mrs. Phyllis Parks offered to donate a crib. It was decided to have the roll call in March answered by a small toy acceptable for use in the nursery and that the nursery start operation on March 10th. It was decided to hold a spring tea and it was suggested that the members should begin work on articles for the sewing table. The members have agreed to change the time of meeting from 8.30 to 8 p.m.

Phyllis Parks, Helen Holgate, Joy Putman and Doris Pound were in charge of the worship service which opened with prayer by Doris Pound. Joy Putman gave a most interesting talk on the second part of the "World and the Way", "God the Creator". The furniture of the Creation was read from Genesis. The members divided into groups and discussed questions based on their own feelings of creation.

Gladys Brenton and Doris Pound sang a duet "O Lord My God" with the group joining in the chorus.

The members enjoyed a delicious refreshments consisting of ice cream and birthday cake as the group was celebrating its first birthday.

An invitation was received from Centenary United Church to attend the World Day of Prayer on Friday, March 1st. Mrs. Albert Jones offered her home for the next meeting on Wednesday evening March 20th. Mrs. Jermyn Palmer will be in charge of the devotions and Mrs. George Bilham and Mrs. Eric Jones will provide the refreshments.

There was a discussion on ways of making money and it was decided to have a copper-a-day offering. Mrs. Arbuckle offered to donate an apron to pass along to sew on contributions, and it was decided to have a "Bring and Buy" table for March.

A game was played with Mrs. Bilham winning the prize of cup cakes and Mrs. Bilham also received the prize of a daily reminder for having the lucky cup.

Dainty refreshments were served and a social time was enjoyed. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the hostess.

The Know How of Table Setting

Cookbook No. 15—Recipe No. 2

ENTERTAINING SIX OR EIGHT

An invaluable feature of this new Ontario Intelligencer's Cookbook Entertaining Six or Eight is the introductory material to be found before each section. These introductions outline the "Know-How" of table setting and service that will enable you to plan effectively and with the comforting assurance of being correct. Practically all entertaining done by the average hostess is informal. Even a simple afternoon tea will be long remembered if served nicely and in a proper manner. And a dinner party, whether formal or informal, will always be more successful if well planned in detail. Here is a recipe for Almond Cookies (a great Oriental favorite) which is bound to please.

ALMOND COOKIES

Set out cookie sheets.

Set out 1 cup (about 5½ oz.) blanched almonds. Grate ½ cup of the almonds (about 2 cups, grated). Toast the remaining almonds and set aside for garnish.

Measure 1 cup sifted flour. Mix flour and grated almonds together. Cream until softened ½ cup butter. Add gradually, creaming until fluffy after each addition ½ cup firmly packed light brown sugar. Mixing until well blended after each addition, add dry ingredients in fourths. Wrap tightly in waxed paper or moisture-vapor-proof material and chill in refrigerator until easy to handle.

Shape dough into 1-inch balls. Place balls on cookie sheet about 2 inches apart and flatten each until about ½ inch thick. Press a toasted almond into top of each cookie.

Bake at 325 degrees 10 to 15 minutes, or until light golden brown. Using a spatula, immediately remove cookies to cooling rack; cool completely. About 2½ dozen cookies.

Entertaining Six or Eight offers a complete guide for every occasion whether formal or casual.

Molten Sulphur Shipped In Special Tank Cars, Is Delivered Piping Hot

By ED TREFIAK

WINDFALL, Alta. (CP)—Molten sulphur is being shipped from here in special railway tank cars designed to deliver the dark brown product piping hot at eastern markets 2,200 miles away.

Liquid sulphur is produced in the Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. plant, part of a $20,000,000 natural gas processing complex in this rich producing area 127 miles northwest of Edmonton.

The cars, built by Union Tank Car Co. of Chicago and its Canadian affiliate, Procor Ltd. of Toronto, are leased to Texas Gulf, and guaranteed to keep the sulphur cosy until it reaches customers in Hamilton and Edmundston, N.B.

Insulation on the black carriers consists of a six-inch thick layer of fibreglass covered by a metal jacket. The insulation retards but does not prevent the liquid from cooling and solidifying in transit.

REHEATED BY STEAM

However, the cars are equipped with 20 runs of two-inch pipe which serve as a heater system. Steam is pumped into the system when the cars arrive at their destination, restoring solidified sulphur to the molten state.

Sulphur, a versatile chemical with a variety of uses including production of wood pulp, steel, fertilizer and synthetic fabrics, can be handled, most economically and efficiently in liquid form. Both loading and unloading are easier.

The 36-foot-long tank cars, each with an 85-ton capacity, are top-loaded through their hatches and may be drained either from the top or by a bottom-operated ball valve.

Cars are equipped with safety valves—discs designed to rupture when inside pressure reaches 75 pounds a square inch.

A Texas Gulf official said his firm plans to ship 100 railway tankers a month of liquid sulphur by early spring, and hopes to increase shipments to 200 cars a month in 1964.

STORED UNDERGROUND

The first liquid sulphur was shipped in early December following completion of a CNR branch line from Whitecourt, 27 miles south. The plant began operation last April.

Sulphur comes to the plant as a byproduct of the gas-cleaning process. It is condensed to the dark brown liquid state by water-cooled tubular condensers.

The liquid is stored in underground pits of 500 tons capacity. Some of the molten sulphur is pumped at 225 degrees fahrenheit through a 1,000-foot steam-insulated transfer line to a vat where it is allowed to solidify, turning from brown to orange and then to bright yellow as it cools.

The rest of the output is piped to a loading platform capable of filling six tank cars simultaneously.

PIPING HOT FOR 2,200 MILES — A loading crew pumps molten sulphur into insulated railway tank cars at Windfall, Alta., for shipment piping hot to eastern markets 2,200 miles away. ain and the U.S. had differed in the Washington talks were "incomplete."

Officials in London maintained there was no intention of reaching a cut and dried agreement on the structure of the force which might not be acceptable to other members of the 15-nation Atlantic alliance.

The official said the British government regarded the Washington talks as "highly satisfactory" and hoped NATO would make good progress on the first stage nuclear force.

U.S. authorities disclosed in Washington Monday that the United States is suggesting to its NATO allies that they agree to take part in a multilateral nuclear force made up of Polaris-armed surface cargo ships with the U.S. retaining veto power over the warheads.

Any NATO nuclear force developed would be composed of two distinct elements — Polaris atomic submarines assigned by the U.S. and Britain, and surface ships contributed by other NATO powers such as West Germany, Italy and Belgium.

BRITAIN'S CONTRIBUTION

British and U.S. Polaris submarines would be manned and controlled by those two countries. No crews from other NATO countries would be allowed to participate.

However, the U.S. also is ready to support the second proposed component made up of surface ships that could be manned by mixed crews, such as Turks, Belgians and Italians.

But the warhead, which would be on a U.S. Polaris missile, would be U.S.-built and the key to the use of the warhead would be retained by President Kennedy.

the Lord Mayor said.

Diefenbaker, who flew back to Canada Monday night and into a sustained bout of political campaigning, said he was so impressed by the speeches paid him in the two functions that "I wish it were possible to take some of you over to Canada, with me for the next few weeks."

"I can use you," he said with a smile.

Diefenbaker spoke off the cuff at a luncheon at Mansion House after telling the Guildhall audience that he sees the Commonwealth continuing to grow and becoming a real force in international affairs that might again parallel the power of the old British Empire.

With traditional Guildhall ceremony, Diefenbaker received the scroll which made him the seventh Canadian prime minister to be enrolled as a Freeman of the City, London's banking and business centre.

Diefenbaker and Trade Minister Wallace McCutcheon told Britain that a large market awaits British exporters in Canada if they are willing themselves to the North American market.

An authoritative source said today the two made this main point during their separate talks here with Reginald Maudling and Board of Trade President Frederick Erroll.

Diefenbaker left London early Tuesday for Ottawa. The Canadian leader was accompanied by his wife as he left London Airport in a Royal Canadian Air Force Yukon aircraft.

Income Tax Explained

A column designed and written for the working persons, who are not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant or visit an Income Tax Office.

By C. A. MILLER
Former Supervising Assessor
Income Tax Dept.

Many taxpayers who married in the taxation year and who continued working become confused when filling their income tax returns for the first time as married.

The common error is that the husband will consider his wife's income for the entire year and tax himself as a single person. The husband should only take into account when figuring his exemption for his wife, the amount of her earnings after the date of their marriage.

Prior to that she was not his wife and what she earned in that period has no bearing on his exemption. If they were married late in the year and the wife's income before marriage did not exceed $250 he will be allowed to claim $1,000 exemption for her. This would apply if they were married on December 31.

If the wife's income after marriage was over $250 and under $1,230 then the husband may claim an exemption for his wife, the difference between her income and $1,250. This is also applied to any deductible receipts.

Regarding dependents supported before marriage see a previous article on the subject.

Any inquiries will be answered if a self-addressed envelope stamped (5 cent) envelope is enclosed.

QUESTION NO. 1 — I was married in 1962. My wife earned $1,150 which she contributed but nothing afterwards. What can I claim for her?

ANSWER: $1,000, as she had no income after she became your wife. Total exemption for you is $2,000.

QUESTION NO. 2 — We were married in 1962. I file my returns on a fiscal year basis. I will not be showing any income in 1962 for the period after my marriage. Can my wife claim $1,000 exemption for me?

ANSWER: No. She must file as single until such time as the portion of your fiscal year's income that applies to 1962 is determined.

Liberal Trade Experts Wants To Cut Tariffs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mitchell Sharp, Lester Pearson's likely choice as trade minister should he win the April 8 federal election, said Monday Canada should reduce its tariffs and continue trading with Communist China.

The 52-year-old Toronto economist also said in an interview Monday he doesn't think Canada will ever eliminate all its tariffs.

"But there was no need for the jobless total to be anywhere as large as it had been under the Conservatives."

Mr. Sharp is Liberal candidate for Toronto Eglinton in the forthcoming election.

permits issued to a "well-known Tory in the area."

He said sub-contractory working under permits issued to Matthieu Lumber Company had violated the permits by cutting near navigable waters and near nature trails.

Lands Minister Kelso Roberts said the company committed a trespass of the permit and was fined $1,058, but was permitted to continue operations because the infraction was "not a gross trespass."

The Liberal party won the first vote but lost the second in an attempt to force early adjournment.

After 15 minutes of resumed debate on the lands and forest spending estimates, liberal Leader John Wintermeyer moved adjournment of the debate.

Deputy-Speaker W. E. Johnston (PC — Carleton) declared the opposition motion carried on a voice vote, but government members called for a standing vote.

Forty whips spent four minutes scouring the building for members, and the standing vote was 49 to 19 in favor of the opposition motion. Both NDP members present voted with the Liberals.

After the vote, a few more government members filed in and Government House leader Economics Minister Macaulay moved immediate resumption of the adjourned debate.

The government motion carried, 49 to 19 with two NDP members voting with the government. Party standings are: PC 84, Liberal 24, NDP five, with four vacant.

PICARO TO RUN

Liberal Party President Michael Oliver announced in Montreal that Gerard Picard, prominent Quebec trade unionist, will act as chief party lieutenant in the province, running for election to 60 NDP candidates in Quebec.

Mr. Oliver said he expects the main opposition in Quebec to come from Social Crediters, not the NDP, which is quiet.

"We believe the Progressive Conservatives are dead here and that the Liberals are the only real alternative to the Conservatives," he said.

No other records were broken but Leonard Hartman of Ogdensburg, N.Y., kept hammering away at the muskie record of 29 lb. 12 oz. set in the Thousand Islands area of the St. Lawrence River in 1950.

Hartman, also fighting the St. Lawrence, got four muskies into the 1963 rankings. Biggest was a 35-pounder. His smallest was 31 lb. 10 oz., caught on a fly rod.

For Atlantic salmon northern New Brunswick's Restigouche River, always a hot spot, produced the champ — a 32-pounder to John L. Baxter of Brunswick, Me.

Quebec's St. Jean River, on the Gaspe Peninsula, produced 450 miles northeast of Quebec City, came through with second and third places — 28½ pounds to Edith C. Bunnell of Washington, D.C., and 28 pounds to Emile H. Cummings of Lake Forest, Ill.

Top steelhead—rainbow trout which migrate to salt waters—was a 33-pounder caught in Washington's Snake River by Dewey Scott, A brace of 30½ pounds came from the Skeena River in northern British Columbia to Robert L. Hack of Kitwanga, B.C.

TOP FLY-CASTER

In the fly-casting division the winner was Lloyd Mausser of Burlingame, Calif., who took a 23-pounder from the Kispiox River which flows into the Skeena at Hazelton, B.C.

Ontario's Great Lakes tributaries continued to gain prominence in the open division for eastern rainbow trout. Gar Bedford of Brantford, Ont., won with a sunker of 15 lb. 12 oz. from Big Creek, which flows into Lake Erie south of his hometown, while John Allen of Dover Mont., caught one trout of 15 lb 5 oz. in Owen Sound Bay.

Lee Straight of Vancouver took the fly - casting prize for steelhead rainbows with a 10½-pounder from Lake Erie, 20 miles northwest of Prince Edward Co., in Ontario.

Other Canadian winners:

Northern pike — 39½ pounds caught by James L. Burst, St. Louis, Mo., in Saskatchewan's Big Black Lake, 500 miles northeast of Saskatoon.

Lake trout—30½ pounds, Carl L. Deal, Madison, Wis., Great Bear Lake.

Anglers in Search of Big Brook Trout Find New Ground in Northern Que.

NEW YORK (CP) — For the last couple of years fishermen in search of record - smashing brook trout have found a new land of promise in northern Quebec. It's looking more promising all the time.

Its boundaries can be fairly well defined. Start at Chibougamau, a mining centre about 350 miles north of Montreal. Take in such lakes as Assinica, Mistassini, Albanel. Swing north west to James Bay and its tributary rivers such as the Rupert, Broadback, Eastmain and Nemiscau.

Fish from these waters have dominated the brook trout division of Field and Stream magazine's annual fishing contest for the last two years.

The authoritative outdoor magazine, which compiles world - wide records, releases results of the 1962 contest in its March issue.

Northern Quebec waters came through with their best performance to date. Three brookbrook above 10 pounds were recorded.

The biggest, 11½ pounds, was caught by Norman H. Hall of Fitchburg, Mass., last Aug. 28 in the Broadback. He used an Orvis, Norwegian lure on an eight-pound-test line.

CLOSE TO RECORD

Hall's fish is big enough to indicate the brook trout record which has stood almost 50 years may no longer be unbeatable. The all-time champ, 14½ pounds, came from Northwestern Ontario's Nipigon River in 1916.

Other Quebec giants in the open division were 10¼ pounds, caught by George W. Hartman of Spencerport, N.Y., in the Rupert; 10 lb. 3 oz., John McAdam, Chibougamau, Nemiscau River; and 9 lb. 9 oz. B. Brier, Dearborn, Mich., Eastmain Lake.

Three 8½-pounders vied for honors in the fly-casting division. The winners were Stanley Karbouki, Parish, N.Y., Mistassini Lake Donat C. O'Brien, New London, Conn., Assinica Lake; and George H. Sator, Cleveland, Broadback River.

While the brook trout record remained intact, the old mark was broken for its northern cousin, the splendid char.

Lloyd V. McKinney of Springfield, Mass., a 54-pounder from Tree River which flows into Coronation Gulf northeast of Great Bear Lake in the Northwest Territories. It topped the old mark of 19 lb. 15 oz., caught by Mrs. Marvin Quesnel of Hay River, N.W.T.

bines agency recommendations included abolition of patent protection for drugs, wider use of generic - named drugs and tighter government controls on manufacturers and safety. It made no allegations of offences against the anti-combines legislation.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture said in a statement that implementation of the commission's recommendations should follow quickly the good job that has been done by the commission. There could be no excuse for Parliament not to implement the proposal for abolition of patents.

FAVOR PROPOSALS

"The other recommendations of the commission for better inspection, regulation and enforcement and for close supervision and advertising literature and distribution of samples are similarly important and should be implemented," the agricultural federation said.

Mr. Larose said the association intends to present a brief to the government in anticipation of the publication of the Patents Act, possibly next year. It believed the commission, in advocating patent abolition was the only effective way to reduce prices, had stepped well beyond its terms of reference.

He did not think patents had much bearing on price. Nor did he think profits of income would result for major manufacturers, although the field might become even more highly competitive if all patents were abolished.

Mr. Larose said the association will continue to ask for better protection to those willing to exploit patents to the full. Such exploitation included protecting a Canada's pharmaceutical chemicals, which now are mostly imported.

He said the question of the use of generic and brand-named drugs, he defended the manufacturer's right to identify his products with a distinctive name.

Unwelcome Caller Has Heart of Gold

DEAR DORIS—I have this neighbor who insists on coming to visit me every day, rain or shine. She stays from 9.30 a.m. to 12.00 or after every day. Now the trouble is I like this girl; she has a heart of gold and will do just anything for me. She has no children, where I have, and naturally I have work which I must do in the morning.

I have tried asking her nicely not to come over so much. I even told her my husband is getting fed up coming home for lunch finding her here all the time. DORIS CLARK
After all no one likes to sit down to eat with someone glaring at you.

Now I'd like her to visit once in a while, but for Pete's sake not every day. I'm really in a dither. Please help me.—HELPLESS.

DEAR HELPLESS—Take a stand. Or there'll be no friendship.

Pat her on the back for her friendliness. But point out that you simply must use your mornings to work before you can have visitors. Tell her about a hospital or social agency which needs a volunteer visitor with a nice personality like hers.

Next time she calls on the door, ask her to be excused and make a date with her for afternoon tea.

DEAR DORIS—I am seventeen years old and I have dated quite a few boys but when a boy kisses me I can never return the kiss. We were never shown any affection at home so that is probably where my problem stems from.

My father has only sat down and talked to me once. If I ever do anything my mother doesn't like she will go for days and never speak to me, and when she won't speak neither will I. This has become a part of me. I will never give in to anything or anyone.

Every body I have ever gone steady with we broke up because I was so unaffectionate. The last guy I went out with was a policeman. I loved him in a way but I have ever gone with. We broke up before Christmas because he said "How would you like to go out with a guy you had to kiss all evening and he'd never kiss you?"

I know this means a lot to a boy but I cannot help myself. Please tell me if there is anything I can do to overcome this.—BOTTLED UP.

DEAR BOTTLED UP—All humans need affection. Your parents have short-changed you; and justified habits of tight-lipped silence which hold you captive.

Yet you can practise giving affection; and feeling has a way of following the effort to express oneself. Overcome a single stubborn impulse to withdraw and you've made a step forward.

Call up your policeman; say you love him and want to try again.

TO MRS. M. K. H.—I have passed on your very kind gift to Desperate, the woman who was willing to part with an eye in order to meet her financial obligations. This kind of friendly concern will give her a tremendous lift, I know.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER Sports Editor

Genghis Khan, who at 13 commanded the most blood-thirsty army the world has ever known, lived on fighting. When his Mongol-Tartar hordes were not pillaging, murdering and taking prisoners, they "ganged up" on one another just to keep in shape.

Genghis would pit platoons against each other. They used spears, swords and daggers, and the side inflicting the most injuries was declared the winner. Egged on by their officers sometimes the losers would turn on the judges and "dagger" them back to their tents and Turkish Delights.

If gore-loving Genghis were alive today and "sat in" in a hockey game, say any category between midget and junior "A" (inclusive) he'd probably grunt and say "What-ize is-ize?" If Khrushchev had not beaten me to it, I'd say my Mongols invented this game."

Never, according to stories in the public prints from coast-to-coast, has the penalty-box been more popular or populated when teams of these categories have at one another.

True, some clubs of the upper brackets have been known to break out in brawls, bashing and whatnot, but they haven't reached the consistency of the younger fry squads.

Some sort of a maybemic virus seems to have infiltrated the blood-stream of these youngsters. It is not confined to one district or league or club. It is general the province over, at least. It seems that any club that emerges from a game with less than 15 penalties of all kinds, runs the risk of being called "sissies."

Whatever it is that is responsible is doing a good job. Individual chip-carrying hotheads, some of whom, it appears go around looking for provocation are one of the biggest factors in this new epidemic of slashing, hooking, spearing and stick-swinging capers.

In a junior "A" game over the weekend a player was "speared" by an opponent. The "spearing" at the time, did not inflict much injury for the "victim" got to his skated feet and deliberately "speared" the opposing sinner.

True the players involved were penalized as are those who are guilty of less serious infractions. Harassed officials "stick to the book" as far as it is possible to let the deterrent power of penalties seems to have lost some of its effect.

Sometimes a vengeance-bent hothead will start a full-scale brawl. For it seems there's no forgive and forget in minor or junior hockey as far as some players are concerned. Look at the records and note the penalties-in-minutes column.

Officials, in some cases are being blamed for the situation. Players, and in some instances coaches, incensed at the "no-call" of a penalty when the officials did not see the infraction make up their minds to "square matters."

One thing leads to another and usually ends in three or four or more players becoming involved. The Canadian Press wire story of two junior "A" games over the weekend said: "They turned, into penalty and by jury-filled slugfests. A total of 101 minutes were called, including a match misconduct for deliberate intent to injure, a 10-minute misconduct, eight majors for spearing or fighting, and 23 minor penalties."

Nor are the junior "B" squads halo-wearing bevies of innocents. And that includes the Eastern Ontario Junior League. Every entry in the loop including the one from this city has its "tough guys" and those who revel in the rough going. And if those minor games of last Saturday here are any criterion, fans who like their hockey dished up brawl-fashion needn't worry about the future.

So far all hands have been fortunate. There has not as yet been a permanent injury incurred nor a fatality. But that is no guarantee for the future. Have we got to wait "for something of this nature to occur before the top brass puts the proper teeth in punitive regulations?

Hefty suspension is one of the answers. Let the punishment fit the crime if needs be, toss the guilty ones out of hockey for life. Accidents will happen—but deliberate intent to injure is another matter. Not even the hot-headed idiot who is guilty of deliberation to injure knows what the result of his action will be. It could be death.

A good old-fashioned bout of fisticuffs when players threw their sticks and gloves and swapped punches livened any hockey game. There was little if any harm done—and usually the incident was forgotten by all concerned. But vicious stick-swinging and all-out brawls are horses of another color that should be stopped if hockey is to come back to its former status.

Bruins' Williams Top Yankee In NHL

MONTREAL (CP) — Young Tom Williams earned himself an impressive title last week: Highest - scoring National Hockey League player in United States has ever produced.

Competition is tough in the NHL and most U.S.-born players who make the grade have a background of Canadian hockey. Williams, 22, learned the game in his native Minnesota and developed enough skill at it to make the U.S. Olympic team in 1960.

Last week, he scored his 21st and 22nd goals of the current season as a right-winger with Boston Bruins. The previous high for a U.S.-trained player was 20 goals, scored in 1943-44 by Cully Dahlstrom of Chicago Black Hawks.

Dahlstrom, another Minnesota - born player, won the Calder Trophy as rookie of the year in 1937-38.

Much of Williams' success can be traced back to the summer last November when he was put on a forward line with veterans Johnny Bucyk and Murray Oliver.

STARTS SCORING

Scoreless in his first nine games up to that point, he since has racked up 22 goals in 50 games and the Williams-Oliver-Bucyk line has produced the first or second among the league's most productive combinations.

The league's most productive individual last week was Chicago's Stan Mikita, the centre over the scoring leadership with 65 points.

Official NHL statistics released today show the shifty, 22-year-old centre totalled 39 goals and four assists for 10 points in his last three games.

Ranked second was Mikita's individual standings and in output for the week—is Detroit's Gord Howe, who increased his tote by six points to 64.

Bobby Hull of Chicago is tied with Boston's Bronco Horvath at 61, and Andy Bathgate of New York shares fifth spot with Oliver. Bobby Hull

Montreal's Jean Beliveau, who lands the league in assists with 44, ranks seventh in scoring with 59 points and Toronto's Frank Mahovlich is eighth with 58.

SHARE GOALS LEAD

The goal-scoring leadership is split three ways. Howe, Hull and Mahovlich are tied at 64.

With about one-seventh of the schedule remaining, the goal-tenders in the running for Vezina Trophy shapes up exactly as their teams do in the standings.

Glenn Hall, who has personally allowed 2.07 goals in 50 games, leads. Chicago has a goals - against average of 2.36 and tops the standings with 76 points, eight more than second-place Montreal.

Jacques Plante of Canadiens is second with a goals-against average of 2.50 and Toronto's Johnny Bower third with 2.67. Toronto is third in the standings with 69 points, one behind Montreal.

Detroit leads in the penalty department with 760 minutes and Wings defenceman Howie Young, who alone has accounted for 200 minutes, the league record—holds the individual title.

Riders' Back Named to PC Squad

OTTAWA (CP)—Joe Poirier, 24-year-old defensive halfback for Ottawa Rough Riders, became the latest athlete to make the plunge into politics when he was nominated as Progressive Conservative candidate for Russell in the April 8 federal election.

A native of Verdun, Que., who attended Loyola and McGill universities in Montreal and St. Patricks College in Ottawa, Poirier was unopposed Monday night at the nominating convention at an east-end high school auditorium, attended by 250.

Poirier was named to the 1962 all-star team of the Eastern Football Conference. He joined the Riders in 1959 and was named rookie of the year. Russell was represented in the last Parliament by Liberal Paul Tardif.

Avenged Previous Defeats

Charnley KO's Joe Brown

MANCHESTER, England (AP)—Dave Charnley, British light-weight boxing champion, knocked out former world champion Joe Brown in two minutes and 45 seconds of the sixth round of a 10-rounder at Belfvue Stadium Monday night.

The 27-year-old Charnley got revenge for two previous defeats at the hands of the wily, 3-year-old Brown, of Baton Rouge, La., Charnley suffered those defeats in world title bouts.

A crowd of about 8,000 saw the southpaw Charnley storm to the attack from the start. The end came when the British champion got in a hard left to the jaw, followed by four punches to the body that hurt the American.

Charnley charged in for the kill with a hail of punches. He sank the American with a right hook to the body and quickly followed up with a left, a right and a left to the face.

Brown slumped on to the ropes and then curled on the floor. He tried to beat the count but couldn't.

Charnley put himself in line for a possible crack at world champion Carlos Ortiz, who took the crown from Brown last April. Before the fight Brown was rated third challenger and Charnley seventh.

Charnley weighed 136 pounds, Brown 134½.

'Magnificent Shot' Brings Victory

Curling 'Granny' Ranks With Best

ST. JOHN, N.B. (CP)—Mrs. Emily Woolley of Toronto, probably Canada's best - known woman curler, has proved that a grandmother of 64 can match shots with the best of them.

Representing Ontario in the Canadian women's curling championships, Mrs. Woolley provided the big thrill Monday of the first day of competition, even though her rink isn't among the leaders going into today's three - round schedule.

Down 8-1 after four ends to New Brunswick's Mrs. Mabel Deware, Mrs. Woolley showed her years' of experience on one shot. Ontario had five rocks in the house but Mrs. Deware drew to the button on her last shot, almost freezing her rock against an Ontario counter.

The Toronto grandmother, with her last shot, made a magnificent take-out with her sixth and eventually won the game, 14-13, on an extra end.

Only the defending champion British Columbia rink and Alberta were undefeated after the first competitive round of round - robin competition—and they were scheduled to meet in their third round.

In other second - round matches Monday night, Alberta downed Nova Scotia, 10 - 4, British Columbia walloped Prince Edward Island, 13-3, Quebec upset Saskatchewan 10-8 and Newfoundland edged Manitoba 8-6.

In opening - round games in the afternoon, Alberta defeated Quebec, New Brunswick trimmed outclassed Newfoundland 13-8, Saskatchewan edged Ontario 7-6, Nova Scotia trimmed Prince Edward Island 14-2 and Nova Scotia dumped Manitoba 12-4.

Scots Veto Switch To Summer

CP from AP-Reuters

GLASGOW — Scottish League soccer teams have rejected a plan to switch the season to summer from winter.

Three First-Division clubs had led a movement for summer soccer as a way to beat snow-bound pitches, which have caused widespread disruption of winter throughout Britain this winter.

In a special closed meeting Monday, the 18 First-Division and 1 Second - Division Scottish clubs voted to hold next year's season in the usual August-to-April period.

Twelve of the clubs voted for summer football, 25 against.

The current British cold spell, which has caused severe unrest in Scotland from playing since the middle of December, provided ammunition for the clubs in favor of summer soccer. But two of the most powerful clubs in Scotland, Rangers and Celtic, strongly favored leaving the season as it is.

After the meeting, Scottish League secretary Fred Donovan said there seemed a general feeling amongst clubs that the season be extended permanently until the end of May. Such a proposal would have to be ratified at the annual general meeting of the league in June.

Proposal Gets Support

'Foreign Aid For Ducks'

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Jack Peacock, an Ontario sportsman, says he is getting increased support for his "foreign aid for ducks" proposal.

Peacock said Monday game directors of Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta have written him that they are interested in his plans to restore marshes and potholes in the Canadian provinces with money from the U.S.

Eighty - five per cent of the ducks using the central and Mississippi flyways are hatched in these areas of Canada where drought conditions have cut deeply into the duck population.

Peacock proposes that $20,000,000 of the $105,000,000 already appropriated by Congress for use in restoring duck grounds in the Dakotas and Minnesota be diverted to a crash program in Canada. The money would be used to build dikes and lakes to restore the sloughs in southern Saskatchewan and southern Alberta.

Peacock said he has been promised the support of representatives Glen Cunningham of Nebraska and Ben Jensen of Iowa as well as Senators Roman Hruska of Nebraska, Karl Mundt of South Dakota, William Fulbright of Arkansas and Jack Miller of Iowa.

Bo Needs $40,000 Salary And Intends to Get it

By JOE REICHLER

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP)—Bo Belinsky came to the Baseball Writers' Association of America training camp this winter. He had to make up his mind whether it would be baseball or baseball in 1963 and he chose business—not without some reluctance.

Belinsky business is baseball, a game which the glib-tongued Los Angeles Angels' pitching ace has given him lots of promises, some fleeting fame and little money.

"Money kind of ruined it, is what Belinsky wants. He thinks he can make a lot of it if he throws a no-hitter once a while—the good times he likes so much and tends to forget something he wants to do. Belinsky purred, "and I want to become a $40,000-a-year pitcher.

NOT ENOUGH

"I need that kind of cash to live the way I want to. I can't get along with $20,000 or $25,000 a year. Not the way I spend money. Right now, I'm making $15,000, that's only spending money for me.

"I'm giving myself three to four years to get that $40,000 bracket. If I cant do it by that time, the heck with it. Ill just kiss this game goodbye.

Having stated his ambition, Belinsky reflected a moment, then added:

"I like fun. I like people. I like going to night clubs, taking out dates, staying out late. In order to be an outstanding player, you've got to be a loner, avoid meeting hep people, give up good times, deny yourself of lots of pleasures.

"It just isn't worth sacrificing my fun, my youth, and my personality unless you make good dough."

BAD NO-HITTER

Belinsky sky rocketed to fame last May by pitching a no-hitter against Baltimore. He reeled off seven straight victories and appeared about to become baseball's biggest box office honors. But thereafter he hit the headlines more with his antics off the field than with his work on it. He threw a baseball very fast and wildly and enjoyed living the playboy life.

Despite his antics, Belinsky won 10 games while losing 11 last year. He was the only Angels' pitcher to have a winning record. He went through the worst of it last year, said Bo, "and I had a lot of straightening out to do. I wanted to come to spring training in the right frame of mind and be mentally rested. So I passed up a lot of Hollywood and TV offers this winter. I knew that rest vacation in four years had all the fun I wanted and got it out of my system.

"Now im ready. I feel if I can get myself mentally prepared this camp this summer, Argos trainer Don Cochren, who has been studying the subject since last season, has sent the players isometric exercise instructions sheets. The exercises involve tensing of the muscles, which are flexed by either pushing or pulling against a solid object or each other.

Blues Led College Score Race

TORONTO (CP) — University of Toronto Blues players took the top four scoring positions of the Senior Intercollegiate Hockey League season's division scoring race.

Final standings released Monday show the Blues with seven players in the list of 11 top scorers.

Passi's 19 goals were tops in the eastern division.

Blues centre Sonny Osborne took third spot with 28 points. Right winger Gord Cunningham and defenceman Stu McNeil tied for fourth spot with Laval University leftwinger Ric Dedieux. All three had 21 points.

Toronto had the best defensive record in the division. Maurice Grenier of Laval had fewest goals-against average with 3.56.

WAS ROCKEY STAR

MONTREAL (CP) — Funeral service will be held today for Ernie Russell, high-scoring forward with the old Montreal Wanderers when the hockey team won the Stanley Cup three times in the early 1900s. He died Saturday.

A clever skater, Russell was remembered for his feat of scoring three goals a game in five consecutive games. He scored 38 goals in one 12-game schedule.

Russell played with Wanderers when they won the Stanley Cup in 1907, 1908 and 1910. He also excelled at football, playing in the Quebec Rugby Football Union and in the Interprovincial Union, which later became the Big Four.

Wins Unimpressive Victory

By MARVEN MOSS

MONTREAL (CP)—Yvon Durelle, hard, up for cash and disillusioned about his prospects of the Maritimes, has launched his second comeback in boxing with plans to move his wife and four children to Trois-Rivieres, Que., and seek work there.

The 32 - year - old onetime British Empire light heavyweight champ knocked out Cecil Gray of Halifax in a heavyweight bout here Monday night.

But at a flabby 199 pounds, he looked anything but impressive.

Durelle, exuberant and grinning, passed it off later in the dressing room.

"I'm just as strong as ever," he proclaimed, waving a big flat. "I showed the people."

But the reaction of the standing-room crowd of almost 6,500 at the east - end Paul Sauve Sports Centre made it evident what he showed was something else.

ER ROPE CLUTCHES

They jeered his lumbering efforts to catch up with Gray, his wild pawings and his clutches at the top strand of the ropes, a manoeuvre he employed to catch his breath.

Gray, weighing 196, meanwhile hardly seemed disposed to fight. At one point an official of the Montreal Athletic Commission warned his corner to have him mix it up or his purse would be withheld.

The Haligonian was down six times before Durelle lashed across a haymaker left to end it at 2:53 of the seventh in the scheduled 10-rounder. But three times he toppled because he was shoved and once he tripped over his own feet.

Tickets were scaled from $2 to $7 and they had to turn fans away.

Promoter Regis Levesque of Trois - Rivieres said the gross gate was between $20,000 and $21,000. He also announced plans to match Yvon against Phonse LeSage of Port au Port, Nfld., in Trois - Rivieres around March. 10.

SPEND THE MONEY

Durelle made it clear before the bout that he's returning to boxing for the usual reason: Money.

"I'm broke now, he said. "I work for the Queen. You know, I get unemployment insurance.

He said there was nothing for him anymore in Baie Ste. Anne, N.B., where he once operated a fleet of six fishing boats.

"I put Baie Ste. Anne on the map and the politicians took it off," he said bitterly. "There is no money there now, no jobs. The place is broke.

His young cousin Joey has already settled in Trois-Rivieres and is employed by a brewery.

Joey, a welterweight contender for the Canadian title, also appeared on Monday night's card and scored a first-round knockout over Don Ackridge of New York. It was the 24-year-old Canadians 25th win against three setbacks with one draw.

EXPRESS DISAPPROVAL

The Canadian Professional Boxing Federation expressed disapproval about Yvon's return. But the Montreal commission said he passed his medicals, and sanctioned the fight.

Durelle came close to stripping Archie Moore of the world light heavyweight title here four years ago. He announced his retirement in 1959, returned the following year and then quit again.

Bob Cleroux of Chomedey, Que., dethroned as Canadian heavyweight champ by a CPBF edict, also appeared on the card Monday night and scored a technical knockout over Garvin Sawyer of Arnold, Pa., in the sixth round of a scheduled 10-rounder.

At Pan-American Games

Lewis to Lift for Canada

For the first time in history this city will be represented at the Pan-American Games.

John Lewis, 26-year-old weightlifting star of the Belleville Apollo Bar-Bell Club has been selected as a member of the three-man lifting team to represent Canada.

Lewis will leave for Sao Paulo, Brazil around the end of April with other team members to take part in the Games.

The young star won the coveted spot in Montreal in recent trials competitions, in which lifters from all parts of Canada took part. He is the only one selected from Ontario. The others come from Quebec.

Lewis tied the Canadian total record with a 910-pounds score. His press was 390 pounds, his clean-and-jerk 340 pounds and he set a new Canadian snatch record with 200 pounds.

He is the holder of a number of Canadian and British Empire records in his division.

The Dotted Line League

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Jackie Brandt, a man in motion in Baltimore Orioles' line-up last year, will be perfectly content to stay put during the 1963 American League baseball season.

Brandt wound up with a .253 batting mark last season, 42 points lower than in 1961. But manager Billy Hitchcock indicated Monday that Brandt, 28, will be the Orioles' regular centre fielder and will be installed as the No. 2 man in the batting order until someone beats him out.

He shuffled around left, centre and right fields in 1962 and ever played third base. At

Do-or-Die For Juniors Friday Night

Kingston Junior Frontenacs made it official last night — a berth in the OHA Eastern Junior Hockey League group finals — by nipping the Peterborough Monarchs 3-2 in Peterborough.

The win was Kingston's third in as many starts.

As far as the Belleville club is concerned, the night team won last night but not by enough goals.

Belleville's is winless in two outings while Peterborough has one win and two defeats. Belleville has a chance to grab the second and final spot in the finals, but it won't be an easy job.

Monsens play here on Friday night and a Belleville win would create a position tie between the two clubs. The Quinte squad winds up the round-robin in Kingston next Tuesday night, March 5.

In case of ties, the club with best goals spread will be awarded second place. Peterborough has a comfortable lead at the present time, having scored 11 goals and allowed ten for a spread of plus one.

Belleville, still smarting over their lop-sided 8-0 defeat in Peterborough, has scored two goals and given up 13 for a spread of minus 11.

A loss or a tie here Friday will eliminate the local "B's" but if they beat Peterborough they get one more chance, in Kingston next Tuesday.

Sweeney Eyes Third Score Title

NEW YORK (AP)—It's been a struggle but Bill Sweeney of Springfield Indians finally is back on top of the American Hockey League scoring race and within sight of his third consecutive title.

The 26-year-old centre from Guelph, Ont., scored nine points including eight goals last week to raise his total to 74 points and jumped from fourth to first.

Sweeney was the leader early in the season but fell from the top when he suffered a leg injury and missed three games. He won the scoring title last year with 108 points and the 161 title with 101.

League statistics, released today, show Art Stratton and Johnnie McKenzie, both of Buffalo Bisons, tied in second place with 73 points.

Denis Dedardy of Buffalo remained the leading goaltender with an average of 2.78.

'Sign-Reader' Turley Says So

Yankee Hurlers In Trouble?

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — A warning to New York Yankees pitchers: Better change your mound habits.

Bob Turley, your former pitching mate, now with Los Angeles, will be there "reading" you the first time the Yankees meet the Angels this year.

Turley, as manager Ralph Houk and all Yankees can attest, has the reputation for being the best sign reader in baseball. He has an uncanny knack of detecting certain peculiarities of pitchers which serve as give-away signs as to what those pitchers are preparing to throw.

As a member of the Yankees from 1954 through 1963, one of Turnely's main functions was to observe the pitchers, both of the enemy and the Yankees. At one time or another, he spotted give-away signs by virtually all of the Yankees pitchers, habits which they immediately tried to eliminate.

Turley says "there'll be three or four guys on the Yankees I'll worry the pants off."

According to Turley, Whitey Ford, the great Yankees southpaw, calls his own pitches instead of taking signs from the catcher.

"Whitey is the only pitcher I know who does that," said Bob. "But there are few, if any, smarter pitchers in the game than Ford."

"I know all of his moves, I can call every one of his pitches beforehand. I can even tell you every time he's going to use that fine pickoff play of his.

Turley, striving to make a comeback says: "My arm feels terrific. Now it remains to be seen if I can throw strikes," added the right - hander, who came to the Angels on a conditional basis.

If Turley makes the club, the Angels must ship a player to the Yankees. Power also led the

Will Quit if Not Traded, Sold

Als' Brewer Wants Move

TORONTO (CP) — Montreal Alouettes linebacker Ron Brewer said Monday night he will quit football unless the Als trade or sell him to Toronto Argonauts or Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Brewer, attending a Balmy Beach Junior football rally here, said business commitments make it impossible to continue with Montreal's Canadian Football League club.

"I've changed jobs and I've just bought 50 more head of cattle," he said. "I can't get the time from my job, and can't look after the 125 head of cattle I now have if I play in Montreal."

Owner of a farm near Walkerton, Ont., Brewer was recently appointed business manager of a publishing company's supermarket division. This will permit him to play for Toronto or Hamilton only.

"And my investment in my farm and cattle is now too big to permit me to leave it for any length of time," he said.

Brewer missed the last seven games last season with a broken leg.

ALL-STAR GAME SET

BUFFALO (AP)—The world champion New York Yankees will play the International League all-stars in an exhibition baseball game here Aug. 19, Tommy Richardson, IL president, said Monday. The game will be played in Buffalo's 34,000-seat War Memorial Stadium, home of Buffalo Bisons of the IL.

Bennett Top Goalie

Gross Wins Senior Title

GALT (CP) — Windsor Bulldog centre Irwin Gross and Chatham Maroons goalie Al Bennett nailed down the top individual awards as the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League season came to a close over the weekend.

Gross wrapped up his second straight league scoring season title with a total of 102 points. Bennett won the Nat Turofsky Trophy with a goals-against average of 2.83.

Gross was the top scorer on a Windsor club which tallied 299 goals and won the league title by four points over Chatham. The powerful Bulldogs had seven men in the top eight scorers, including the first three.

Second to Gross, who led the league in assists with 63, was linemate Bobby Brewn, who picked up 96 points and led the league in goals with 41. The Bulldogs captain, centre Leo Bendo, was third with 83.

Chatham centre Tel Power broke the Windsor monopoly, picking up 80 points—on 39 goals and 41 assists—for fourth place. Power also led the league in penalties with 109 minutes.

Real Cherrelle, Tommy Walker, Jack Costello, and Jacques Begin, all from Windsor, followed with 73, 71, 64, and 53 points respectively.

Bennett, who led in shutouts with six, surrendered 150 goals in 46 starts.

By JACK MORRIS

VANCOUVER (CP)—Last October a 22-year-old pheasant hunter lost his temper because his shotgun was misfiring. He smashed the shotgun over a stump. The weapon discharged, seriously wounding him in the stomach.

Two hunters from Oregon were shooting at a moose from a kneeling position. One stood up, directly in front of his companion's rifle. He was shot through the head.

A 51-year-old hunter was sitting near fresh moose tracks. His 19-year-old companion, also stalking the moose, mistook him for the animal and killed him with a scope-equipped .308-calibre rifle.

These incidents are samples of what the British Columbia fish and game branch found in compiling a report to show what causes hunting accidents in the field.

What it discovered came as no surprise. It's simply that carelessness in gun - handling was a major factor in accidents last year in which 10 hunters were killed and 12 wounded. And often the hunter's worst enemy is himself or his companions.

ACCIDENTAL DISCHARGE

In some cases hunters were shot simply because they didn't know, or didn't care, that it's not a good idea to drag a loaded rifle through the bush muzzle-first.

Several lost fingers or toes when twigs jammed against the trigger and discharged the rifle.

Hunters mistaking a sudden movement in the brush for game were responsible for several deaths.

A cardinal rule often forgotten, or ignored, by some is that a loaded rifle should be on safety when travelling in the woods.

One 45-year-old man neglected to do this as he walked to the edge of a gravel pit. The edge collapsed and his 12-gauge shotgun exploded against his chest, killing him.

A 21-year-old was loading his .30-30 rifle in the front seat of a jeep when it discharged, the slug striking his 20-year-old companion sitting in the back seat.

REVOKE LICENCES

B.C. authorities say they are cracking down on careless hunters. In extreme cases criminal charges may be laid. Licences of hunters who cause an accident through carelessness are being revoked.

The emphasis, however, is still on youngsters, since an estimated 65 per cent of all hunting accidents in the field involve hunters under 25.

Gun - handling classes are sponsored by the B.C. Federation of Fish and Game Clubs throughout the province and more than 2,000 youngsters graduated last year.

The federation insists that hunting is really a safe sport but that it could be made safer. Accidents in the field are decreasing. In 1953 the rate was 8.3 per 10,000 hunters. In 1961 it was 2.65.

Accidents will never be eliminated, authorities say, but they emphasize that "defensive hunting"—checking out for yourself and keeping an eye on the other fellow, too—as well as more caution in gun-handling can cut the toll considerably.

Crawfords, Flyers Win, Hoop Tilts

Crawford Metals whipped the Belleville Lightfoots 83-32 in the first game of their Bay of Quinte Basketball League semi-final series played at the RCAF gym last night.

Meanwhile, RCAF Flyers upset the Trenton Wilsons 42-37 in the opening game of their semi-final. The loss was the first one for Trenton this season. The team won all 17 of its league starts.

Second games in both two-of-three series will be played in the form of a double-header at the Trenton High School gym Wednesday night.

Crawfords used a tight zone defence and a fast-breaking attack to clobber the Lightfoots. The winners opened up a 52-16 lead at half time and eased off a little in the second half.

The winners who finished second behind Wilsons in league play, got a well-balanced scoring output last night. Bill Latchford scored the starter with 18 points, Garry Goyer hooped 17, Ted Belcher 16, Bruce Carter 11 and Larry Campbell 10.

Don Smith was tops for Lightfoots with 15 points while Mike Caswell was next with seven.

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

The federal government is not in the business of underwriting the cost of sending teams to international competition and the Olympics should not be used as a training ground for inexperienced Canadian athletes, says Jim Worrall.

These points were made clear the other night in Toronto by the 48-year-old president of the Canadian - Olympic Association who has been involved in amateur sport in this country as an athlete and official for more than 30 years.

The Toronto lawyer pulled himself up to his full six feet six inches and told a gathering of amateur sports officials and athletes the facts of life about Canada's participation in big-time competition.

NEED $340,000

"This year," he said, "we are faced with the prospect of sending a large team to Brazil for the Pan-American Games. Then, in 1964, we are sending teams to Austria for the Winter Olympic Games and to Tokyo for the Summer Olympics.

"We are faced with a budget of $340,000. Half of this is available from the federal government.

"The federal government should not be asked to pay the entire cost."

The government never has in the past and undoubtedly won't be this time, but Worrall wanted to get his point across that the organizations responsible for sending athletes to Olympics must be dependent on "generous Canadians across the country, provincial governments, larger cities, private industry, private citizens and the sports-governing bodies."

"We look to the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada and other amateur bodies for substantial money to help pay these costs," he added.

Worrall, who competed for Canada in the hurdles in the 1934 British Empire Games and 1936 Olympics, said that "money was not easy to get and there is a resistance on the part of industry which has other commitments."

GOOD ONES WILL GO

"But rest assured that never will we leave at home because of lack of finances a worthy and worthwhile athlete whose efforts would have made a great deal of difference.

He pointed out that the best athletes in the world compete in the Olympic Games and then came up with this punch line:

"The Olympic Games are no

GUELPH (CP) — Guelph Royals of the Ontario Hockey Association Provincial Junior A group have suspended defenceman Bob Plager for the balance of the season and levied a $125 fine on centre Billy Taylor.

Both players failed to appear for an exhibition game Friday night in Brantford and coach Frank Baldigara recommended their suspension.

Lou Passador, Royals general manager confirmed Plager's suspension. Monday but gave Taylor the option of paying the fine in lieu of a suspension.

Taylor is the club's leading scorer with 67 goals, while Plager was named to the coaches' all-star team in mid-season balloting.

The last-place Royals have only three games remaining in the schedule.

Rod Serling Recommends Sabbatical for Everyone

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — How would you like to take every seventh year off from your work, change your family routine and surroundings and pursue knowledge or travel?

Few outside the academic world can entertain such a notion. But Rod Serling did it.

One of the world's highest-paid writers, he left Hollywood last Labor Day to live with his family in the village of Yellow Springs, Ohio, and teach at Antioch College, his Alma Mater. He came back loaded with enthusiasm.

"Everyone, whether he is a writer or a plumber, should take a sabbatical," he argued. "The accidemic tradition of taking every seventh year off to renew your spirit is a marvelous one."

He admitted it might be difficult for most persons to work out the financial details. His experience would have been enough to make his business manager weep. His teaching pay came to $81 a week. WAS M.G.

"But I was able to augment that by emceeing the late late movie on a Columbus television station," he added. "That paid me twice what I earned teaching."

It should also be noted that his CBS television series, Twilight Zone, was earning for him many times his teacher's fee. He flew out here to film introductions to the show, lately expanded to an hour.

Teaching was his own idea, he said. When he proposed it to Antioch, the administration quickly accepted. He taught undergraduate classes in new media and creative writing, as well as an evening course with professional writers.

"It was rewarding but exacting work," he said.

"There were many nights when I was up to midnight and later reading compositions. You can't dismiss students' work the way we reject scripts: With a polite note saying it doesn't fit our format. With students you have to give reasons.

"Out of 24 students I found two that showed real promise. I asked to see their future work because I think they have what it takes."

PITCHER INJURED

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A weird accident gave Jim Constable, lefthander called up from Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League last September, the dubious distinction of being the first Milwaukee Brave to get hurt in spring training. Constable was batting in an intra-squad game Monday when he hit what would normally have been a harmless foul. But the batting cage was being used and the ball hit an iron railing and bounced back to bruise Constable's nose.

AT THE PARK — Carl Boehm starts in the sequence and shooting cinema "Peeping Tom", in Color with Moira Shearer and Anna Massey showing today and Wednesday at the Park Theatre. On the same program more shocks in "All Night Long", starring Patrick Mcgoohan, Keith Mitchell and Betsy Drake. Both features are first showings. Complete showings at 7.00 and 8.45 p.m.

Departmental Hockey

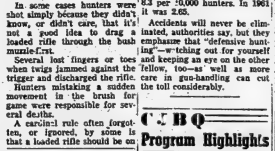
The Public Work nipped Utilities 6-5 in a close interdepartmental Hockey League game last night.



Bradley Lee scored four goals and Roque Davis two for the Public Works. Kaiser and Morgan potted two each, and Ueno one for Utilities.

In the latter game the Firemen defeated The Ontario Intelligencer 6-2.

ONE DEAD, ONE HURT

WHITBY, Ont. (CP)—Stanley Stec, 42, of Toronto, was killed Monday when a truck he was driving swerved off Highway 401 half a mile east of here and struck a tree. His brother Walter, 36, also of Toronto, was taken to a Toronto hospital in critical condition with head injuries.

Bishop Evans Confirms 25 Candidates

PICTON — Bishop of the Diocese of Toronto, Rt. Rev. K. C. Evans, visited the Church of St. Mary Magdalene here on Sunday. His purpose was twofold. First, was the confirmation of a class of 25 candidates presented by the rector, Canon R. B. Wright, and the wardens of two years ago present, Cyril Hilliard and James Bird.

After the service, attended by four hundred, the new addition in the parish hall was dedicated. This was made possible by a $10,000 bequest from the late Harvey R. Stark, and a plaque appropriately commemorates the gift.

This is the church's jubilee year and parishioners were challenged to even greater effort.

Past Noble Grands Occupy Lodge Chairs

PICTON — A red letter day in the history of the Bay of Quinte Lodge, No. 143, I.O.O.F., was the Past Noble Grands' Night, when former PNG's occupied the chairs and impressively conferred the third degree on three candidates from the Picton lodge and four from Trenton lodge.

Harry Palen was acting Noble Grand with Milton Dulmage as Vice-Grand. These and other former officers, along with visitors from several district lodges, were welcomed by the Noble Grand, Tom May.

Adding inspiration to the ceremonies and brief talks were Earl Hall of Stirling, Deputy Grand Master of Grand Lodge in the Province of Ontario; Elgin Adams of Belleville, District Deputy Grand Master, and Charles Anderson of Carrying Place, Past Noble Grand lodge, who is District Deputy Grand Patriarch of the Encampment. Following the meeting refreshments at the banquet tables when the committee under the chairmanship of Harry Hicks served a delectable repast.

It was regretted that Harry Hoad was unable to be present to receive his 50-year jewel and this will be presented later in the year as two other members are to be similarly honored.

Think Shastri Will Step Into Nehru's Shoes

By ALAN M. KENNEDY

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Home Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri is five feet tall, mild mannered and publicity-shy—a man who hides his light under a bushel.

Yet many think he will step into the shoes of Prime Minister Nehru.

Nehru appears to have recovered completely from last year's heart attack and the 73 and speculation about who will succeed him never stops. Shastri is seen as a likely compromise between left and right forces in Nehru's Congress party—the only one among half-a-dozen parties that has the strength to form a government.

Others lean toward Mrs. Indira Gandhi, Nehru's daughter and former president of the Congress party. But her sex and the spur of nepotism might work against her.

NOT ALIGNED

Shastri is non-aligned being thought wrongly, he has few enemies; his policies are the left centrist Indian tradition of selfless public service. He knows Nehru's mind better than almost anyone else.

The 50 year-old minister, son of a village teacher, always wears the village dress—dhoti (diaper-like pantaloons), along with a Gandhi cap and slippers. Shastri is a vegetarian, a teetotaler, a vegetarian and a yoga enthusiast.

Though Shastri was commerce and industry minister for three years, he is not eager to go outside India.

He quit college to join Gandhi's passive resistance movement in 1920 and has never departed from Gandhi's ways.

He spent more than six years in prison in the struggle for independence.

By GRAHAM COX

WINNIPEG (CP) — "If we should win the Canadian title, we could set curling in Scotland back 40 years," said the skip of Manitoba's championship team.

"Imagine, two left - handed Jews and two Ukrainians representing Canada."

The humorous reflection came from Hersh Lerner, a 29-year-old lawyer who will skip the Manitoba entry in the Canadian curling championships starting at Brandon, Man., March 6.

The other left-handed Jew is Lerner's wife - skip, Coleman (Cole) Staniloff.

The right-handed Ukrainians who round out the foursome are second Bob Lemecha and lead Al Dudar, both 32, a pair who are said to be able to sweep all day and never miss a beat.

All are members of the predominantly Jewish Maple Leaf Curling Club. They have been together seven years and have curled as a unit in almost 300 spiels prior to this season. But this will be the first time they started as a club rink and curled all the way as a unit.

TRIP FOR WINNERS

The point of Lerner's remark is, of course, that curling is generally believed to have been invented by the Scots (although the Dutch have also entered a claim) and the Royal Caledonia Curling Club of Scotland is still looked upon as the "mother club."

If the Lerner rink wins the Canadian title it will be invited to Scotland for the annual series of international matches against the Scottish, American and Swedish champions.

However, although three of the previous skips on Canada's Canadian championship—Ian Baird of Nova Scotia, Doug Connell of Prince Edward Island and Glenn Harper of British Columbia—have Scottish names, Lerner has never yet been represented in the international tourney by a rink skipped by a Scot.

Ernie Richardson has been abroad several times with his brothers from Saskatoon and Hec Gervais has taken his Alberta rink over once.

BORN IN PAIRS

All the members of the Lerner rink, except Lemecha, are Winnipeg - born. Lemecha, a salesman, was born near Paris in Ontario and moved to Canada in 1940. He and Dudar started at the Maple Leaf club as juniors.

In earning the right to represent Manitoba, the Lerner rink won its zone competition and then took seven straight games in the double-knockout provincial championships before meeting Bob Picken's Winnipeg rink in a best-of-three playoff in straight games, 9-6 and 17-12.

"We don't play any special type of game," says Lerner, referring to the standard draw or takeout styles. "We've found we can adapt quickly to whatever conditions we face and never plan on anything until the game starts.

"On that swingy arena ice, we just set the rocks up and made them try to knock them out. We knew we couldn't play a takeout game so we didn't try."

ICE CHANGED

Five special sheets were laid in Winnipeg Arena for the provincial championships and competitors agreed the ice appeared to change' end by end and was more impossible to predict.

The result was that none of the members of the Lerner rink scored impressive percentages of their shots. Dudar hit on 61 per cent. Staniloff 60 and Lemecha and Lerner 49.

Staniloff, who calls himself the "old man" of the foursome, is assistant manager of a wool-less-import firm and the only married member of the rink, all of whose members are close year-round friends.

Lerner suffers from chronic asthma and was under constant medical supervision during a provincial finals. He'll have his doctor brother Arthur along in Brandon to treat him if he should have an attack during the Canadian championships.

'Reverse Twist' Addition To Toronto's Subway Opens Soon, Start to Lose Money

By ALAN WALKER

TORONTO (CP)—A two-mile "reverse twist" addition to Toronto's subway opens Feb. 28 and instantly will start losing money.

The Toronto Transit Commission expects the new $45,000,000 addition to Canada's only subway to run deep in the red, as well as 35 feet deep underground, until the other eight miles of the planned east-west system are finished in 1987.

Then the subway under Bloor Street and Danforth Avenue will stretch from Keele Street in the city's west end to Woodbine Avenue in the east, and the University Avenue extension now about to open will be necessary to relieve the burden on the Yonge Street north-south subway.

Meanwhile, the University Avenue extension—begun in November, 1959—will be of limited use since it parallels the nine-year-old Yonge Street line 700 yards to the east which carries passengers through the downtown area. The Yonge Street line, which starts at Eglinton Avenue and runs 4½ miles south, has had its terminus at Union Station. Now it will run a short distance west past Union Station and turn north on University, passing under the Ontario Legislature, in a J-shape to Bloor.

WANTED DELAY

It has been suggested that the TTC should have completed part of the east-west line first, but TTC officials said the new north-south extension was given priority because the Yonge line by itself couldn't absorb all the passengers who will stream in from both ends of the city when the Bloor-Danforth line is built.

Then the critics—and there have been many—suggested delaying opening of the completed University line until the Bloor-Danforth subway was ready. TTC officials replied that it would be absurd to have the service there and not use it even though opening it now means losing money.

The key point in the over-all east-west system will be in the station near St. George Street several blocks west of University and a few yards north of Bloor. There a complex two-level structure will provide for easy transfer from the east-west to the north-south lines. It will also allow trains to switch from the east-west into the University line.

Between Union Station on the south and St. George Street station on the north the new two-mile line will have five stops—at King Street, Queen Street, Dundas Street, College Street and near the Royal Ontario Museum just north of Queen's Park.

WALLS PASTEL

The tiled walls are in lighter pastel shades that in the old stations with different colors for each station so that passengers will know at a glance where they are. The green, grey and blue colors combine with soft fluorescent lights to lull waiting commuters into a daze that ends harshly when the silver or red trains shriek toward the platform from soundproofed tunnels.

On opening day, when Premier John Robarts will officiate, the TTC hopes to start the new service about noon with no noticeable lag in schedule. New trains will be pumped into the network and there will be one leaving each station every four minutes. During rush hours the interval between trains is only 2½ minutes.

Traffic congestion on Toronto's main streets was in danger of clotting 10 years ago. The subway took some pressure off but a spring paralysis started threading through the city again and more underground transit was obviously needed.

Over the years the TTC has done its best in a situation that roughly parallels bailing a boat with a hole in the bottom. By constantly extending subway lines the TTC thinks it will just manage to stay ahead of the game.

PLANS 30 MILES

It plans to have 30 miles of subway by 1980 when Metropolitan Toronto's population will be greater than 2,000,000. All streetcars will be gone by then.

The Metro Toronto Planning Board has joined the TTC in studying the city's steadily increasing traffic problems and several new expressways are planned. But co-operation goes further.

The Yonge subway, with 12 stations, cost $65,000,000 and the TTC paid the whole shot. Then General Manager W. E. P. Duncan told Metro the TTC couldn't afford to build any more subways on its own.

"It is manifestly unfair for the commission to have to purchase a right-of-way, build a subway structure and pay taxes on a facility which in effect replaces a surface car line, when the surface car line was operated on a street built and maintained at the cost of the municipality and on which no taxes were chargeable," he said in a report.

After some dickering it was agreed the TTC would pay about 45 per cent of the total cost of the Bloor-Danforth-University subway, expected to eat up more than $200,000,000.

PROPERTY VALUE UP

Metro will pay the rest and will retain control of all land purchased for the subway right-of-way. It hopes to recover a good deal of property cost by selling air rights over the subway for building construction. This is in line with the experience of the TTC which found that when the Yonge subway opened in 1954 property within two blocks of stations increased in value as much as seven times.

The TTC's share will be financed by a bond issue that will have to be repaid by passenger revenue. Fares may have to rise above the present seven-for-a-dollar rate.

Most of the University Avenue line was built by the "cut and cover" method or by tunnelling. An Italian method used experimentally on a section of the line proved successful and will be used on the eastwest line.

In the "Milan method" narrow trenches are dug at the sides of the street to the level of the subway and are filled with concrete. Then the centre of the road is excavated to the level of the subway roof. A concrete roof is poured and the street is replaced. This forms a frame and work on the subway proceeds inside it while traffic continues on the street above.

LESS NOISE

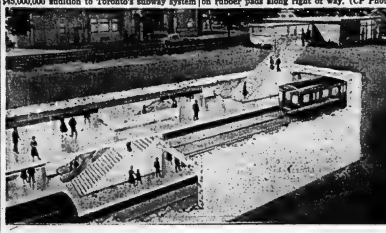
A mile of the University line was tunnelled, which is quieter than the cut-and-cover method used on all the Yonge Street route except for 1¼ miles in an open ravine. Men working from shafts with pneumatic drills burrowed past the city's hospital area with a minimum of disturbance.

Passengers on the old Yonge line have already had a taste of the slick new cars to be used on the extension. The British-built red Yonge cars are steel. The new ones, built by Montreal Locomotive Works Limited, are aluminum and larger but weigh less.



The 36 new silver - colored cars have four doors on each side instead of three. A six-car train of them has the same passenger capacity as an old eight-car train but weighs 40 per cent less.

Lighting is more efficient and heat from braking friction, previously wasted, is channelled through the car.

When operating at top speed five huge roof-mounted ventilating fans can change all the air in each car three times a minute, permitting the use of large, permanently sealed picture windows.

RAILS FLOAT ON RUBBER — A maze of rails and switches will carry traffic along a $45,000,000 addition to Toronto's subway system opening February 28. This switching point is under Avenue Road and Bloor Street. Rails float on rubber pads along right of way. (CP Photo)

FIRST STAGE COMPLETED — An artist's cutaway sketch shows St. George station's two-level structure which will enable Toronto subway users to transfer between east-west and north-south lines. The station is one of six along an addition to the subway system opening Feb. 28. St. George station will link the existing Yonge Street subway to an east-west network opening in about five years. CLASSIC 770

Here are the reasons why Motor Trend Magazine chose the 1963 Rambler as the "Car of the Year"

The coveted Motor Trend magazine "Car of the Year" award was won this year by the entire line of 1963 Ramblers. The popular Classic 6—the powerful Ambassador V8 and the compact American 6. The award was given to Rambler "for outstanding design achievement and engineering leadership." The panel of automotive experts took 26 pages in the February issue of Motor Trend magazine to outline the reasons for their choice of Rambler. The following are excerpts from their remarks to show you why Rambler is "Car of the Year" for 1963.

1 Unisize Construction"... this latest design represents a real advancement and the biggest single reason we chose Rambler Car of the Year. Not only does this new construction method save approximately 150 pounds over the older design, but it results in a unit so strong it'll take punishment longer and naturally hold its resale value."

2 Handling and Driving "... pleasingly light and responsive under all cornering conditions ... a good boulevard and highway ride. There isn't any pitch or choppiness" noticeable even on rough roads."

3 Styling "Progress in design is the theme of Motor Trend's Car of the Year award. American Motors' Ramblers are this year's best examples of outstanding design achievement. New styling is based on lean, clean lines that are apparent from almost any angle."

4 Interior Room and Comfort "The lengthened wheelbase has given more room inside ... and this means increased driver/passenger comfort. The interior offers plenty of leg room. Reclining bucket seats with headrests are options well worth the extra expenditure."

5 Economy "There won't be many cars of this size delivering more fuel economy than the basic-engined Classic."

6 Value and Features "Quality has always been one of American Motors' largest selling points and continues to be on the new models. In addition to the long-recognized owner appreciation features inherent in all Ramblers, the factory has doubled the new-car warranty to 24 months or 24,000 miles.

In summing up, all we can add is that it looks like the new Rambler will be an even better buy than it has been in previous years."

That's what the experts say. They are echoing what Rambler owners have been proudly claiming for years. To prove to yourself Rambler's exceptional value see your Rambler dealer soon. Take a test drive in the "Car of the Year"—the 1963 Rambler.

NDP Member Claims $135,000 Paid In Graft

Says Estimates Padded On 13 Miles of Road

VICTORIA (CP) — Charges that graft in excess of $135,000 was paid in connection with a 13-mile stretch of federal highway near scenic Rogers Pass were made in the British Columbia legislature Tuesday.

Gordon Dowding, New Democratic Party member for Burnaby, told a hushed House that an affidavit and other documents show falsifying and padding of estimates in connection with the Trans-Canada Highway project at Craigellachie, B.C., about 20 miles west of Revelstoke.

His charges were followed by demands from Liberal and NDP members that the Social Credit government either set up a royal commission investigation or call in the RCMP.

Mr. Dowding tabled documents, including an affidavit by Montana contractor Dick Hole worth, alleging that:

1. Highway Minister P. A. Gagiardi influenced a highway contractor to pay off a $6,702 mortgage on the home of a highways employee, and promised the contractor would be "money in his."

2. L. and M. Logging Company had been paying $350 a month to Mrs. Florence Gagne, one-time Social Credit candidate and an official in the Kamloops Progressive Conservative of which Mr. Gaglardi is minister.

3. Estimates on a road project had been padded to show $100,000 more work than was or could be physically done by the contractors."

4. The provincial government paid a contractor $135,000 in excess of work done and this was arranged by falsifying data on an estimate sheet.

DENIES WRONGDOING

Mr. Gaglardi, appcised of the charges by long-distance telephone in Chicago where he is on business, denied any suggestion of wrongdoing by himself or by members of his department.

"This is another one of these anti-Social Credit campaigns that the opposition has been trying to put on for a number of years," he said.

Mrs. Gresty, owner-manager of two children's clothing store in Kamloops, B.C., and another in the town of North Kamloops — also denied the charges.

She said: "Everything I have I've worked hard for — for years."

Mead Johnson Loses Appeal To Tariff Body

OTTAWA (CP) — The Tariff Board has ruled that metrecal is a pharmaceutical—not a food.

The result is that metrecal's makers, Mead Johnson of Canada Limited in Belleville, must pay the 15-per-cent manufacturers' sales tax on the product.

Had the weight-control compound been ruled as a base or concentrate for food, it would have been tax-free.

Mead Johnson appealed to the Tariff Board against the revenue department's ruling that metrecal was subject to sales tax during the period from April, 1960, to May, 1961.

In its Feb. 23 judgment, made public today, the board noted that for sales-tax purposes a pharmaceutical is defined as a substance for treating or estimating an "abnormal physical state" in man.

Overweight is such a state, the board said. Metrecal was advertised as a "dietary plan for weight control." The board said weight control means control of excessive weight. Therefore metrecal was a pharmaceutical and subject to tax.

The same ruling was applied by the board to mimvitine, made by Ovaltine Food products of Peterborough.

Second Leader Of OAS Seized

PARIS (Reuters)—The arrest of another top Secret Army Organization fugitive today threw into a turmoil the trial of 15 men accused of trying to assassinate President de Gaulle last August.

Gyula Sari, one of six defendants being tried in their absence, was arrested after a weekend shooting incident in which a French policeman was wounded, police disclosed today.

The announcement of Sari's arrest followed the capture Tuesday of Antoine Argoud, a former colonel. The top secret army leader was found in the band and foot in a truck near Notre Dame Cathedral after an anonymous telephone tipoff to the nearby Paris police headquarters.

The right - wing newspaper L'Aurore said French secret agents may have kidnapped the terrorist West German for "many to avoid "international complications" over his extradition.

The military court today adjourned until Thursday.

AMNESTY GRANTED

ISTANBUL (Reuters)—About 8,000 to 10,000 prisoners are being released throughout Turkey following parliamentary approval of a general amnesty last week, officials said today.

Highway Toll Rises by 452

OTTAWA (CP) — The death toll on Canada's streets and highways in 1962 showed an increase, of 12.3 per cent over 1961, the bureau of statistics said today.

Motor vehicle traffic accidents took a record 3,878 lives in the year, as against 3,426 in 1961, the previous high.

A total of 111,125 persons were injured in traffic accidents, up from 99,383 a year earlier.

GNR ACCUSED OF HELPING TO RAID UNIONS

Says Charges Have No Basis of Facts

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadian National Railways has been accused of helping one union raid the membership of another.

The publicly - owned carrier immediately denied the charges.

The accusation came from A. A. Hutchinson, vice-president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers and was aimed at the CNR and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General workers.

The executive council of the Canadian Labor Congress, parent body of both unions, was to hear the dispute in Ottawa today.

Mr. Hutchinson said the CNR's action came because it has a "grand design" to reduce the number of unions representing its employees.

He said the CNR has made no secret of its desire to have an industrial union—such as the CBRT — replace international train unions wherever possible.

CNR FORCED MOVE

Mr. Hutchinson quoted CBRT President William Smith as saying that the CBRT's drive to sign up hundreds of ORT members was not of our choosing, but rather the result of circumstances forced on us by the management of the CNR."

The ORT previously has accused the CBRT of raiding its membership. It said the raid came about as a result of the CNR consolidating its freight-handling operations.

The 33,000-member CBRT had no immediate comment on the collusion charge leveled by the ORT, which has 10,000 members.

Remaining in the background of the interunion fight was the personnel friction between the CBRT, a Canadian union, and the other railway unions, all of them affiliating the ORT, are international organizations.

W. T. Wilson, CNR vice-president of labor relations, said the charge had "no basis in fact."

Mr. Hutchinson called on the CLC executive to order the CBRT to withdraw as bargaining agent for the 600 workers involved in the dispute.

Nuclear Arms Debate High Point in Election Campaign

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The nuclear arms debate is continuing at a high pitch in Canada's election contest.

Highlights from the hustings:

Conservative Senator Grattan O'Leary declared in Hamilton that the Bomarc missile, which Canada has acquired without nuclear warheads, is "no damn good."

He said the defence controversy is a phoney election issue.

In Penticton, B.C: Works Minister Fulton said the nuclear arms question, which precipitated the April 8 federal election, is "too serious to make it an election issue."

Liberal Mitchell Sharp, speaking in Edmonton, declared that exports to turn the election into a plebiscite on nuclear arms are adding undesirable emotionalism to the nuclear debate.

He said New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas is making defence policy a central issue in the campaign because "he has nothing very much else to talk about."

In Calgary, Mr. Douglas accused his three rival party leaders of "trying to work both sides of the street on the nuclear issue." The NDP opposes acquisition of nuclear weapons by Canada.

Campaigning in Quebec, Liberal Leader Pearson accused the Social Credit party of hypocrisy on nuclear policy—saying the party favored defensive nuclear arms in speeches everywhere but in Quebec.

In Toronto, Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson conceded that he and his deputy leader, Real Caouette, disagreed personally on the nuclear arms question. But he denied

Liberal Leader Says Socreds Wrong in Doctrines, Actions

MONT-JOLI, Que. (CP)—Liberal Leader Pearson went into strong Social Credit territory Tuesday night and launched a strong counter-attack.

Campaigning along the south shore of the lower St. Lawrence River, Mr. Pearson accused the Social Credit party of contradicting itself in its doctrines and its actions.

"Never in all my career, in democracies, have I seen so much bad faith, so many switches, and such contempt given precedence over the common good, as occurred during the last Parliament," he said.

"Social Credit proved it was wrong in doctrine and wrong in the actions of its representatives."

He labelled the party's delegation to the Commons as "the most inaneere group which ever entered Parliament," and although the party had said it would fair.

However, a NORAD spokesman, asked to comment on the report, said that while Slemon has spoken to a number of Canadian groups he has not campaigned in any way against the prime minister and has no intention of intervening in Canadian politics.

The newspaper says in a report from Colorado Springs that the latest group to be flown there was the Toronto Board of Trade. Previously there had been trips by 28 Canadian weekly newspaper editors and members of the Canadian Institute of International Af-

NEW LEGISLATION ON OPP WILL BE READY SHORTLY

New Commissioner Will Be Appointed

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Wishart Spence has indicated that pending legislation will provide the authority for him to concentrate the day-to-day administration of the provincial police in the hands of a new provincial police commissioner.

During debate Tuesday of the attorney - general's estimates, Liberal Leader Wintermeyer asked if Mr. Cass could give the legislature an assurance that "the Ontario Police Commission will not interfere with the administrative day-to-day operations of the OPP."

Mr. Wintermeyer said that despite government assertions that the commission would relieve the OPP commissioner of part of his duties, the commission had simply taken over both of the commissioner's former duties.

The Liberal leader said the commission, set up at the last session, had intended by the government to assume the responsibility for advising the police forces of all Ontario municipalities.

He said creation of the commission, although protested by the opposition, as "premature" at that time, had been conceded in leaving the OPP chief free to devote all his time to being chief of one of the provincial police force.

TOOK OVER OPP

Mr. Wintermeyer said the opposition had warned, Mr. "Wintermeyer said, the commission "did walk in and take over the OPP lock stock and barrel."

Mr. Cass told the House that he could not disclose details of pending legislation affecting the OPP until the report from the Police Commission arrives.

He repeated a statement he made in the House Monday night that one of the principles of organization would be that the force's head should have the rank of a deputy minister and be responsible to the House through the attorney-general.

WILL HAVE DEPUTY

Mr. Cass added Tuesday that the commissioner under the reorganization system "will not be a policeman." But he would have a deputy commissioner under him who would be a "senior policeman."

The attorney - general again denied opposition allegations that the government has a "police state" in terms of some of the recommendations Mr. Justice W. D. Roach will make in his report.

Elmer Sopha (L—Sudbury) had said he believed that the commissioner would be "a political pipeline" or some form of "political telepathy" to inform himself of the report's contents in advance.

PC Nominee Disagrees With Leader

MONTREAL (CP) — Peter Kerrigan, nominated Progressive Conservative candidate in Montreal St. Antoine-Westmount riding Tuesday night, said in his acceptance speech he does not agree with the Diefenbaker government's stand on nuclear arms.

"I believe that we must accept tactical nuclear weapons for the Canadian component of the air division in NATO," he said, "because our own national security has already been placed in the hands of NATO."

His nomination was not opposed. Mr. Kerrigan said his audience he held made it clear that he could only accept nomination if his personal views were allowed to vary from those of the government.

"There are many policies of the present government which I fully support," he said. "Nuclear arms was not one."

Slashing Attack Made On Mr. K By Peking Paper

Offer to Hold Talks Is Hedged by Demands

TOKYO (AP) — Communist China said today it is ready to hold private talks with the Soviet Union on the ideological issues splitting the Communist bloc. But it coupled this offer with a slashing attack on Premier Khrushchev for "double dealing" and demanded apologies.

The Chinese Communist party made this condition for the peace talks proposed by Moscow in a 7,000-word editorial in the Peking People's Daily. It also demanded that the Russian Communist regime end its renewed friendship with Yugoslavia and cease their attacks on Peking's tiny Balkan ally, Albania.

The editorial and its slashing criticism indicated the Chinese-Soviet relations are as angry as ever despite recent public signs that each had intended to drop Peking's conditions for peace talks are clearly unacceptable to Moscow.

MENTIONS INDIA

The Chinese for the first time took public notice of Premier Nikita's supply of Mi-G-21-jet fighters to India. (2) the Tearing up of Khrushchev's agreements and contracts they had concluded with a fraternal country. These agreements and contracts are to be counted, not in twos or threes or in scores, but in hundreds."

As for Yugoslav President Tito, the paper called him a "renegade" and "the accomplice of the imperialists."

Although Khrushchev was never mentioned by name, the statements attacks were those made by him and he was the Communist who staged the spectacular reconciliation with President Tito.

SAYS K STARTED IT

The editorial accused Khrushchev of starting the squabble in the Communist camp by publicly making sides with India on Sept. 9, 1959, over the border developing China-India border disputes.

This apparently referred to a

Winter Carnival In Quebec Over For This Year

QUEBEC (CP)—Bonhomme Carnival disappeared across St. Lawrence River early today, and the ninth annual Quebec Winter Carnival closed.

Carnival queen Lise Mercier broke into tears as she planted the last lias on the grotesque head of Bonhomme, the animated eight-foot-tall snowman who is to the carnival what Santa Claus is to Christmas.

Thousands watched as Bonhomme boarded the midnight ferry that brings him each year to Quebec from Levis, and each year, at the beginning of the Lenten festival, takes him away.

The carnival opened Feb. 8 with the crowning of the queen. The next day Lieutenant-Governor Paul Comtois flipped the switch that one by one turned on the floodlights illuminating the ice palace in Youville Square, the centre of carnival activities.

300,000 PEOPLE VISIT

It is estimated that more than 300,000 people came to Quebec this year for the carnival activities, which included folk dancing in the streets, ice-sculpture competition, an international peewee hockey tournament, an icecanoe race, numerous parades, a log-sawing competition, a dog derby and plenty of just plain carousing.

Mardi Gras ended the carnival.

The cannon boomed a salute to Bonhomme from the citadel that towers above the city, finally, overlooking the waterfront.

One by one, the lights of the ice palace went out.

Socred Leader Admits Split Over A-Arms

TORONTO (CP) — Social Credit Leader Thompson and Quebec agreed Tuesday that he and Deputy Leader Real Caouette do not see eye to eye on defence policy, but said their differences do not constitute a split in the party.

The Social Credit leader was in Toronto for a series of organizational meetings.

Mr. Thompson said in an interview that while he and Mr. Caouette personally disagree on the nuclear weapons issue, they are agreed on party policy.

"I don't see this as a split at all," he said.

"It is the responsibility of every member of Parliament to fight for what his constituents want."

Christians Receive Reminder Season of Lent Has Begun

By JULES LOH
Associated Press Staff Writer

The custom of marking foreheads with ashes which is not mandatory observance for followers of any denomination—dates back to about the eighth century.

In Roman Catholic, Orthodox and some Episcopalian churches, parishioners will hear these words as they kneel to step up and down the altar rail marking each brow with a cross-shaped smear of ashes:

"Remember, man, that thou art dust and unto dust thou shalt return."

Most Christian denominations in North America have abandoned the traditional Ash Wednesday ceremony but all of them, some now until Easter, will stress in their services the need for contrition and self-denial as preparation for the sing of mankind.

Use Agricultural Building For Classrooms at Quinte Until Addition Completed

Increased school enrolment is making it necessary to use the Quinte Secondary School and until the addition now under construction is completed the agricultural building will be used for classroom accommodation.

Last night at an adjourned meeting of the Bay of Quinte District High School Board, fitting of the agricultural building into space for three classrooms was approved. General contractor for the new school addition, Sirotek Construction, will do the alterations.

The new school addition is scheduled to go into use next September.

A teacher replacement for Homer "Red" Townsend at Belleville Collegiate was authorized by the board. Mr. Townsend injured his leg in a fall from a stepladder while assisting to dismantle stage settings following the recent presentation of Sampson Rapeet and will be away from work for several weeks.

Will Not Raise Offer of Three Inspections

CP from Reuters-AP

MOSCOW — Premier Khrushchev said today it is "impossible" to accept Russia's increase its offer of three on-site inspections annually as part of a nuclear test-ban agreement.

Khrushchev was speaking to voters from his Kalinin election district of Moscow at a meeting in the palace of Congresses in the Kremlin.

He said Russia was following a policy of peaceful coexistence with the West "under complicated conditions."

But Russia would go on, not giving way to the difficulties, to ensure that the world followed the line of solving vexed international issues by means of negotiations.

Khrushchev is a candidate in the Supreme Soviet (Parliament) of the Russian Federation. Elections will be held Sunday.

"In the age of rocket-nuclear weapons, the policy of peaceful coexistence is the only sensible policy," the premier said.

He countered some claims with Peking's views of a tougher policy in dealing with the west.

"The general line of the foreign policy of our state," he said, "is rock solid and strengthen peace, to assert the principles of peaceful coexistence in the relations between states with different social systems."

Canadian Picked To Direct U. S. Satellite Firm

WASHINGTON (CP)—A former Canadian with his eye on the sky has been picked by President Kennedy for a job that may help bring more enlightenment to the world's dark spots and a better picture in your living room.

With a reported $100,000-a-year salary, Dr. Joseph V. Charyk, undersecretary of the U.S. Air Force, will become president of the fledgling Satellite Communications Corporation, to set up a network of space satellites for faster around - the - world telephone service, high-quality transoceanic news photographs and possibly worldwide television networks.

Picked fromsome 30 candidates, the 43-year-old native of Canmore, Alta., says he is "tremendously excited by the challenging undertaking."

Other than a four children, Charyk's career has been rocketing spectacularly over the years of airbreathing and missiles. Now he believes he can help bring troubled parts of the world closer together.

"By means of better communications, international understanding may in time be extremely significant," he said in an interview. "I am sure that satellite communications will have a profound affect on the entire world."

Foxboro Co-op Annual Meeting Hears Reports

The Foxboro District Co-operative Association experienced a sales volume increase amounting to $70,000 for a gross sales figure of $461,000 in 1962, superintendent Ken Bird told the annual meeting held in Gilead Community Hall yesterday evening.

President Bob Burkitt reported that the association membership rose from 1,100 to 1,200 as the co-operative had undergone a period of growth during the past year.

Director Charles Beiss in reporting on the auditor's report noted that a fertilizer "blitz" initiated by one of the large fertilizer companies, had resulted in the co-operative not only meeting the opposition but increasing their share of the market field to a considerable degree.

Mr. Bates said that trucking had been a major operating expense during the past year. The co-operative utilized 4 trucks and measures which should reduce these costs in the future, he added.

Members were urged to voice any complaints, problems or suggestions to the directors so that action could be taken as quickly as possible if such was considered feasible.

Bruce Naylor, the manager reported that a policy of credit extension to hog producers in the area had not only resulted in greater feed sales and higher sales figure for the co-operative but had also allowed the producers to get a greater return by being able to finish feed their hogs.

A hog scale-keeping system had been inaugurated and this spring the co-operative would get a cyclone fertilizer spreader and a seed mixer available for the use of its customers to help speed up their spring planting, he advised.

Mr. Naylor also thanked the directors for their help and the United Co-operative of Ontario for its assistance.

A change in the procedure of electing directors was approved that members in the new areas being serviced by the association would have a chance to have representation on the board.

Three new directors; James Reynolds, Russell Sills and Joe Walsh, were elected.

Over 200 were present for the meeting, which was preceded by a banquet and followed by professional entertainment.

Toronto Man Pleads Guilty Of Entering

TRENTON — Louis Male, 50, of Toronto, no fixed address, was remanded for one week for sentencing by Magistrate A. J. Baker in Trenton court yesterday. Male pleaded guilty to the charge of breaking and entering Brunix Jewellery Store and the theft of 11 rings and 52 watches from the store. The jewellery was valued at $3,000.

Police Chief F. J. Taylor told the court that Male had told him that he had a record and Magistrate Baker asked that it be secured before sentencing.

Carl Rogers of R. R. 1 Frankford, was sentenced to a month in jail when he was found guilty on a charge of careless driving. The court was told that Rogers had been sentenced on three previous charges of careless driving in Trenton, one of speeding and one of making an unnecessary noise.

"You seem to take the laws of the land," remarked the magistrate. "You show utter contempt for conduct that you have a total disregard of the law. A month in jail may bring you up short."

TOOK CAR

Patrick McGrath of Belleville, charged with driving while intoxicated and taking a car without the owner's permission, was remanded in custody for a week. McGrath pleaded guilty to the charges.

Constable Sidney Vickers told the court that the accused had been found in the police driver's licence or other identification when he was approached on February 21. The constable said that McGrath had refused to give his name but a driver's licence in the name of the car he was driving had shown it to be the property of Wesley Louis of 31 Croziers Drive in Belleville.

McGrath admitted taking the car from where it was parked on Henry St. in Trenton, but said that he had been under the influence of liquor at the time. He said that drink was offered to him at the "John Barleycorn gets blamed for a lot of things", said the magistrate. "You'll have a week to think about your problem".

He said that the former owner had told him that the ownership papers were lost and that he had delayed registering the latest because he cause he meant to give the car back to the owner for re-sale.

The court heard from the report of Sennett's previous conviction on charges involving motor vehicles.

"The law doesn't seem to mean anything to you", said the magistrate, "You seem to think it's made for other people. Well I assure you that it's made for you and to protect other people from you".

Sennett was sentenced to a month in jail on the first charge and fined $25 and costs on the second.

George Gill of Belleville pleaded guilty to the charge of theft of 90 crown registration cards from the Queensway Hotel, and was remanded a week for sentence.

Public Speaking Contest Held

TRENTON — Trenton Lions distributed more than $100 in prizes to the winners and contenders in the 30th annual public speaking contest sponsored by the club, held in Trenton High School Auditorium last night.

Winners in the senior division were Maureen Coker and Dennis Senik. Others taking part were Wayne Dow, Isabelle Williamson and Robert Harris.

In the junior competition, Ruth Anne Campbell was the winner with Christopher Spencer and Jayne Simmons tied for second place. Because the practice is to give second prize money to a boy, Jayne was considered to have placed third. Thomas Deforge also competed.

Chairman of the event for the past 14 years, Nostrand Sprague, today deplored the poor attendance at last night's contest. He said that the event had been well publicized and that it was his personal feeling that Trenton citizens showed very little interest in the progress of the youthful speakers when they stayed away from the competitions.

Paul Hellyer Wants Debate With Churchill

WINNIPEG (CP) — Liberal defence critic Paul Hellyer invited Defence Minister Churchill to a home consistency debate and challenged the minister to a public debate on Canada's defence policy.

Mr. Hellyer issued the challenge before about 800 persons at a nonpolitical meeting in the Winnipeg South Centre constituency of Mr. Churchill in the area of federal election.

Charging that Mr. Churchill is evading his responsibility as defence minister, Mr. Hellyer offered to meet him at the time of his choice and on the platform of his choice to debate with me the issue of national defence so the people of this country can judge for themselves and make up their own minds."

He recited as "not good enough" the minister's recent statement that it is up to the NATO high command to decide whether Canada's forces in Europe will get nuclear warheads.

"The decision to accept the arms in the first place was made in Canada," Mr. Hellyer said. "The decision to complete the job must be made in Canada."

New Leadership Give's to Aid City's Youth

Something new in the nature of adult education is being introduced to this community through the co-operative efforts of the Belleville Y.M.C.A., the Rotary Club of Belleville and a number of leaders of the community.

It is a leadership development course designed to meet a need for more experienced leaders in the youth organizations of the community — a need which was discovered by a recent survey conducted by the Rotary Club whilst searching for a service project to help the youth of Belleville.

The course will feature top personnel during its kick-off session on March 6th and 9th. Dr. Marjory King, Ph.D, leadership training director of the Canadian Mental Health Association and University of Toronto lecturer, and Mr. Dick McDonald, M.S.W., program services and research secretary of the National Council of YMCA's in Canada, will be the special guest lecturers.

The course is designed to assist present leaders of youth groups, clubs, "community organizations, sports and Sunday School workers better understand the varying needs of different groups, individuals and age levels.

The course is limited to 50 persons and is given at a nominal fee by the Rotary Club having subsidized the major cost of the four-week course. Clarence D. Funzen is chairman of the course committee.

Further information is available from the local "Y".

Keep Religion Out of Schools Speaker Urges

In a democracy it is basic to keep the public school system free of any subjection to religious groups, no matter how well intended the demands of such groups might be, said Mrs. Doris Dodds, of Toronto, president of the Ethical Education Society at the regular Rhwanis Club meeting yesterday afternoon at the Bridge Centre.

Mrs. Dodds was speaking on the current provision calling for a compulsory hour of Christian Protestant religious education in Ontario from grade one to eight of the public school system, a provision which was established in 1944.

She expressed her disagreement with this procedure because the texts provided teachers to comply with this requirement appeared to turn what should properly be, in her estimation, a Scripture lesson into a devotional period promulgating the teachings of various Protestant faiths.

Mrs. Dodds said that when the Ontario public school system was founded over 100 years ago it was the express concern of the founders to keep sectarian religious teachings out of the classroom because they felt the system would fail otherwise.

She expressed her belief that "if the parents' faith differs with that being taught in the school the child, through being excluded from the classes, will suffer a degree of segregation."

Mrs. Dodds suggested that the United Church in Manitoba had expressed this case well when it came to a matter of whether religious education should be introduced into the Manitoba public school system — the only system which the province has.

The United Church, she said, contended that children should not be any religious instruction in the public schools in order to provide a constitutional safeguard" against the possibility of "sectarian dogma in the classrooms".

"The primary purpose of school is intellectual", she quoted, and there should be no segregation of children during their formative years and there should be no provision of public funds for the propagation of any religious faith.

At the conclusion of her address there was a lively discussion period.

The meeting was conducted by president Ralph Graham.

Quinte District Bible Society Hears Reports

PETERBOROUGH — The annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte District of the Canadian Bible Society, was held in Trinity United Church Hall, Peterborough, on Feb. 21st. Dr. O. B Richardson, President of the District, took the chair.

The Treasurer, Mr. A. Stanley Longhurst, presented the financial report, which showed that the objective of $32,000 set for the District for 1962 by the National Office, had been raised except for about $400. The District Secretary, Rev. C.R. Rudd, pointed out that the objective actually was met, if amounts sent in too late for 1962 could have been counted.

The Canada Bible Society, which is an auxiliary of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and also a member of the World organization known as the United Bible Societies, is to take a prominent share in the distribution of 25 million more volumes of Scripture throughout the world during 1963.

Mr. Rudd told of an increase in contribution for the whole of Canada during 1962 of $87,000. Because of this increase the Canadian Society will be able to increase its distribution in Canada and to assume a greater share in meeting the unprecedented demand for Scriptures in nearly 1200 languages throughout the world.

Several resignations from the Board of Directors of the Bay of Quinte District were received, owing of removal from the District of the members concerned, and the following were elected to fill the vacancies on the Board. The Rev. Morgan McFarlane and Miss Nancy White, Belleville; the Rev. J. D. C. Jack and Mr. J. Kellough, Cobourg; Mrs. Donald Whyte, Peterborough and the Rev. William Piercey, Sharbot Lake.

Giving False Information Cost a Tweed Man $250

A 23-year-old Tweed man was fined $150 today for giving the police false information.

A charge of perjury against Edward Paul Rivers was dismissed in Belleville magistrate's court after he pleaded guilty to the lesser count of public mischief.

"It must be brought home to you, Rivers, that this is a serious offence," said Magistrate Lip Baker said. "Not only must it be brought home to you, it must be brought home to others who might be tempted to follow your lead in this matter."

The magistrate described the offence as "a type that troubles police departments throughout the country."

The chain of incidents leading to the charge stretched back to July 22 when Rivers was arrested outside a house in Actinolite.

Constable Mylo Chapman, Madoc OPP detachment, said he was watching the home of Evelyn Lajoie and Ray Pigden, he saw Rivers leave the house, get in a car and place a case of beer in his car. The case held 12 pints of beer and Rivers was arrested as he drove to Madoc where he made a statement.

"The gist of the statement was that he went to the Lajoie residence and purchased 12 pints of beer from Mrs. Lajoie for $4," said the officer.

Acting on that information Constable Chapman said he spent about seven days seeking out evidence on beer and bootlegging and a bootlegging charge was laid against Mrs. Lajoie. She pleaded not guilty and the charge was dismissed in a case in which Rivers gave evidence.

CHANGED HIS STATEMENT

Substance of his evidence was in direct opposition to his earlier statement.

"It had changed . . . to the extent that he did not purchase any beer from Evelyn Lajoie," said constable Chapman.

"Did he at any time say the original statement was at fault?" asked acting crown attorney, John Lennox.

"Yes," replied the constable.

Rivers subsequently pleaded guilty to a charge of having liquor in a place other than his residence.

Defence counsel Ben Hurley asked the officer if police frequently kept observation on the Lajoie-Pigden residence.

"I could answer your question this way," said the constable. "When we are in the area we keep observation and we are in the area at least once a day."

Mr. Hurley asked if Mr. Pigden was known as one of the local toughs.

"I could not say he is a tough enough," stated the officer, . . . although he is physically capable of looking after himself."

"Have you ever heard of him threatening a witness?"

"No sir, I have never heard of him threatening a witness . . . if he did I would certainly charge him," replied constable Chapman.

Mr. Lennox said the charge of perjury laid Rivers was not that of perjury but since Rivers did not ask for a trial and requested a "substantial fine to the maximum" which is $500.

"If there is going to be a fine it could be a substantial one and still be a long way from $500," declared Mr. Hurley. "I think the accused realized he has made a mistake and is sorry for it."

The perjury charge was dismissed when Mr. Lennox said he would offer no evidence.

Tribal Headman Hacked to Death By 40 Negroes

ENGCOBO, South Africa (Reuters) — Negro tribal headman Sigwanba Deliwe was hacked to death by a band of about 40 Negroes Tuesday as he danced from his burning home near Confimvaba, police said today.

The attackers were believed to be the same men who tried to kill Deliwe two weeks ago in the Confimvaba district of the Transkei, due to become South Africa's first bantustan—an internally self-governing Negro state.

It was reported word reached Deliwe that the gang was hiding in a nearby plantation and he sent 30 of his bodyguards to search for them, leaving 10 in a nearby hut.

Kindergarten Classes May Be Formed

The February meeting of the Belleville Separate School Board was held at the Board Room at St. Michael's Academy on Monday evening, with the chairman, Edward Buckley, presiding.

During the reports of the various committees, a number of matters were discussed, including the subject of a more effective control of purchases and a system of obtaining proper delivery receipts for goods when received, with a further study to be made by the finance committee, and submission made at a later date.

Also under study, is a proposal for the board to supply notebooks, pencils and items of a similar nature to the students as part of the items supplied. Similar practices have been purchased by the students concerned.

The property committee, under the chairmanship of Mr. J. S. Colligan, advised that there were still a number of items to be cleared up with the Colt Contracting Company in respect to the addition to St. Joseph's school before finalizing that project. It was submitted for the consideration of the board and finance committee, that in preparing the budget, was a list of proposed maintenance projects on the various schools in the City, holidays in Florida, whose home here was ransacked by four gun carrying bandits who slugged her son.

There is still some confusion over the actual amount of jewelry stolen," the deputy chief said. Insurance policies on the Boyjen jewels—some of which are in Florida—total $685,000.

Police said there was no overnight progress in the hunt for the robbers. They said they have up the local underworld as a special force of detectives and uniform inspectors interviewed scores of persons with criminal records.

"There just haven't been any developments, period," said Det. Insp. Harold Hodgson.

Meanwhile, a storm broke out over post-robbery statements by Mr. Boylen, 55, a farmer's son who became one of Canada's richest mining magnates, that "foreign-born" thugs robbed the mansion and that "if we got all our foreigners, we'd get rid of 90 per cent of crime."

Mr. Boylen sounded off angrily after flying back from Florida but later retracted, though not in time to stave off counter-blasts from public figures here.

"To make a broad sweeping statement of that sort is the height of nonsense," said Magistrate C. O. Bick, chairman of the Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission.

Attorney-general Cass said he had no comment but "it wasn't a very wise statement for anyone to make."

Casimir Bielski, lawyer and Toronto president of the Canadian Polish Congress, commented:

"Arrogance of the highest order, coming out of the top of Mr. Boylen's unbewitched fedora."

Mr. Boylen, whose grandfather came from Ireland, raged against the foreign-born "underlabrats" and boasted that his son Phil had been slugged but took back his complaints when 24-year-old Phil appeared him a 1½-inch scalp wound from a pistol-whipping was not serious.

But he said he would like to see the stocking-masked gang return—"I've got quite a score to settle with them."

OFFER REWARD

Mr. Boylen offered a $5,000 reward for recovery of the jewels, and Deputy Chief Elliott said insurance companies likely put up another $10,000.

The financier, who admitted the jewels should not have been left in the home, said none of his rich art collection was damaged as the thieves looked for wall safes.

Police said the gunmen knew the senior Boylens were holidaying in Florida and apparently were aware the two resident servants were at a movie. Neither of the watchdogs that normally guard the 18 - room home in suburban Etobicoke were there.

Exporters Say Complaints Are All Wet

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada's two top whisky exporters suggested Tuesday that complaints of "dumping" whisky is taking over the United States market are all wet. The U.S. market simply is growing, they said, and those who don't share in that growth are poor businessmen.

That was the defence of Distillers Corporation - Seagram's Limited and Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts Limited in urging the tariff commission to reject the appeal of Publicker Industries Inc. of Philadelphia for a dumping duty to present $1.25-a-gallon U.S. tariff on Canadian whisky.

Loss in Gems Cut in Half Say Police

TORONTO (CP) — Police today set a valuation of about $300,000 on diamond and sapphire jewels stolen Monday in an armed robbery at a million-dollar home here, dropping a previous estimate by $150,000.

Deputy Chief George Elliott of the Metropolitan Toronto police said the new figure was obtained after a check with Mrs. Boylen, 54, whose holidaying in Florida, whose home here was ransacked by four gun carrying bandits who slugged her son.

30 Years Without Accident Record of Truck Driver

"Forty years an a6 accident free truck driver, is the record of 62-year-old Walter Thompson of R.R. 3 Picton, who recently received his 30-year pin from the commercial vehicle section of the Ontario Safety League.

Mr. Thompson has driven the Prince Edward-Lennox counties route for Belleville Creameries for the past 30 years. But he started driving a cream truck back in 1922.

That was in the days of hard rubber truck tires and gravel roads when winter drifts forced laying trucks up for three to four months per year.

When the roads were impassable Mr. Thompson took to the roads with a team of horses and sleighs to pick up cream and deliver butter.

He now picks up cream from farmers and cheese factories in Prince Edward and Lennox county as far east as Millhaven.

At the same time he delivers butter to stores in the same area.

"Driving a truck today is far different from what it was 40 years ago," Mr. Thompson says.

Cold weather driving in unheated trucks was then very unpleasant. Today high efficiency cab heaters allow driving without gloves even in the coldest weather.

Mr. Thompson started driving for the late Melanthe Robertson and the Belleville creameries back in 1933 and continued on with the same firm when it was taken over by Harold West, the present owner.

No Blame Attached in Man's Death

A five-man coroner's jury in Brighton today decided that 57-year-old Steven Matcher of 301 Jarvis St., Oshawa, died as the result of injuries suffered in a car accident on Highway No. 2, just west of Trenton on Sept. 22. Mr. Matcher, who suffered a ruptured spleen in the accident, died in Oshawa General Hospital on Oct. 18. He was a passenger in the car driven by 50-year-old Julius Szpejky of 327 Beatty Ave., Oshawa, which collided with a car driven by Ralph John Mastin, 31, of R. R. 5, Belleville.

Crown Attorney H. R. Dermon of Cobourg said that no further action would be taken in the matter as Mr. Mastin is in no condition to attend any inquiry. He has been hospitalized in Belleville since the accident. Mr. Szpejky, who was also injured in the accident, has since recovered. A third passenger in the Szpejky car, LAC Earl Jack Vogel of RCAF Station, Trenton, suffered only minor injuries in the accident. Both vehicles were demolished.

statistics said Tuesday the November figure does not include interim payments to the Canadian Pacific Railway which will be shown in year-end statements.

Panic at the Wheel

"Some people freeze, and some people go over to the wrong side of the road," Constable Ronald Cruse of the Hamilton police department told a coroner's jury recently. He was speaking of drivers' reactions to the flashing lights, and sometimes the siren of a police car or ambulance. The jury was investigating the death of a Hamilton man killed in a collision between his own car and a police cruiser, while Constable Cruse was responding to a burglary alarm.

The jury found that the citizen had failed to react properly, in turning in front of the police car.

In Trenton last year, a fire engine responding to a fire was blocked at King and Dundas Streets by a woman driving a new car. Although the fire engine used siren, lights and horn, the woman cruised slowly and serenely down King Street, onto Dundas Street and across the bridge, without giving the firemen a chance to pass. It is possible that she didn't know the fire engine was following or that she didn't know the law required her to pull aside to allow an emergency vehicle to pass. But it is more likely that she was just confused.

Both these cases, and countless others experienced by emergency vehicle operators everywhere are evidence that the average driver is incapable of intelligent reaction to an unusual situation. If a survey could be conducted of the final causes of all accidents, it might find the same incapability a major killer.

One might almost suggest that some emergency be deliberately introduced into driver examinations, and that drivers who make an intelligent response be denied licences. Such a test might make the roads safer, if only by severely limiting the total number of persons licensed to drive.

Does Canadian Capital Exist?

We note that a large American toy manufacturer has decided to build in Canada because of "costs and prejudice against U.S.-made goods."

The real reason is probably costs since we have known very few Canadians who would refuse to buy an American-made article on the grounds of prejudice if it offered better quality or better price than its Canadian-made counterpart.

We strongly suspect the real reason for the American firm's decision to make toys in Canada is because it can do so at a lower cost than its American plant can. Reading between the lines it might be assumed that it may well be expecting to enter the export trade.

One question arises. Why has no Canadian firm been established? We can see no reason for Canada becoming a low-wage employment pool for foreign firms for export trade and then have the profits let out of the country. Surely there must be an opportunity for Canadian firms to get established in the same field, and increase not only the gross national product but also the net national profits.

Relatives Only

Dr. George Davidson, former deputy minister of citizenship and immigration, ran into a hornet's nest the other day when he was addressing a group of United Church ministers. He warned them to end their "tight little island of white supremacy," advice which backfired. Rev. J. R. Hord, secretary-elect of the Church's board of evangelism and social service, demanded to know when the department of which Dr. Davidson had recently been in charge was going to take his advice.

Dr. Davidson had a good reply—Canada is ruled by law and it is the department's job to enforce the law, he said.

He denied that there had been a quota on immigration of Orientals and said the only restriction was that Orientals must have relatives in this country to sponsor them.

This seems a reasonable rule. The only trouble is it was not put into force early enough, from the Orientals' viewpoint. If the first man to come to this continent had taken immediate action, right after he crossed the Bering Strait, the whole continent could have been reserved for Orientals.

Unless, of course, Columbus had taken a Chinese wife.

All the finest qualities to be found in our human natures are found in the nurse, the physical endurance of a marathon runner, the patience of Job, and an understanding of human psychology which enables her to heal the mind as well as the body.—Queen Elizabeth, The Queen Mother.

Modern Funerals Assailed

By Gordon Donaldson in the United Church Observer.

The mid - twentieth - century funeral is almost outdoing the ancient Egyptians in the splendor of its burials. And the true meaning of the burial service is being lost.

The United Church Committee on Christian Faith has made a sweeping condemnation of the modern way of handling death, with its elaborate caskets, vaults, headstones and "costly devices to restore a lifelike appearance to the body."

Churches are concerned that the funeral director is replacing the parson as the chief dignitary at a funeral.

And that the average North American funeral now lays more emphasis on the body, prescribed and cosseted above and below ground, than on the future of the soul.

One Canadian family in 15 will face the problems of bereavement this year — and for them, the high cost of dying.

Until recently, nobody mentioned this cost. Questions on traditional form of funeral was considered indelicate. To question the ways of some undertakers indicated, showed a disrespect for the dead which bordered on blasphemy.

Now, after attacks by the clergy, the matter is coming out into the open.

The present Canadian funeral rites with hygienic equipment and elaborate casket settings remove the unpleasantness of death and substitute a sickly sort of beauty.

This appears vulgar and irreligious to some; but it is the accepted fashion over most of this continent.

• • •

This is what generally happens:

When a death occurs, a member of the family contacts a funeral home (sometimes they call a minister first and ask him to call the funeral directory). There is someone on duty at the funeral home day and night — including all holidays.

Within the hour the funeral director or one of his staff has called at the family home or hospital and picked up the body in a plain service wagon.

There is no talk of money at this stage.

The undertaker then embalms the body. This is done as a matter of course, without consulting the family.

Embalming, any embalmer will tell you, is an essential public health measure. And without it there can be no public viewing of the body.

The body may be tinted with fluids and cosmetics to a lifelike color. A hairdresser — one of the services associated with modern undertaking — sets the hair or shaves the face.

The United Church Committee on Christian Faith says such embalming has no place in Christian practice.

The Funeral Directors' Association defends the practice to this saying that embalming is "to safeguard human life in accordance with health regulations and ease needless pain and suffering on the part of bereaved ones." It points with pride to ward and visible signs of torture that may have been inflicted upon the body prior to death."

The United Church committee says, "comfort the afflicted and, we believe, they may thus be better able to look to Him for that Divine Wisdom and consolation of which they are in such need."

The net cost of embalming with cosmetics, the association adds, is less than $25.

Next the bereaved family visit the funeral home. They are taken to the showroom and confronted with lines of sample caskets, each bearing a price ticket.

The lowest price on a casket in a Toronto showroom is usually around $275, but many funeral homes display an unmarked casket they will sell for what the client is able to pay.

The top-priced casket? That depends on the district and the type of business. In large Canadian cities can pay up to $7,500.

"As likely as buying a gold-plated Cadillac" one director says. "We have a solid bronze one for millionaires."

The price of the casket includes the cost of the funeral. This means the services of collecting and embalming the body, newspaper notices and legal documents use of a viewing room for two or three days, the funeral chapel for a service and the hearse with usually, two other cars on the day of the funeral.

When the cortege enters the cemetery or crematorium a new set of charges begins.

Funeral directors insist they give identical service to the purchaser of the $375 casket and the $7,000 one — "of course", one director added, we may give the $7,000 client a little extra trouble and perhaps a slightly warmer handshake."

The average cost of a city funeral is generally quoted at around $600. (This is the cost up to the point at which the hearse enters the cemetery).

In country areas the cost is much less. A Dominion Bureau of Statistics survey put the average cost in Canada at $404— Ontario, $425; Atlantic provinces $339; Manitoba $348; Saskatchewan $309; Alberta $342; British Columbia $315. (These figures exclude the cost of the vault).

• • •

The "simple funeral" societies which have sprung up all over Canada and the United States exert undertakers into reducing their charges and service charges and advise their members.

The Toronto Memorial Society, formed largely by United, now has members from Unitarian, Anglican, Presbyterian, Baptist and other churches.

It collects signed documents with its members demanding simple funerals without display or embalming.

The documents endeavor to get around the legal fact that you can't control your own funeral.

You can pay for it in advance, state your wishes and make bequests of money dependent on your wishes being carried out. But your survivors can still have things their way.

• • •

Psychiatrist explain the ritua-laborate North American rites in terms of the survivor's feeling of guilt—they should have treated the deceased better when he was alive; in their latent snobbish fear of staging a "cheap" funeral; and their reluctance to face the fact of death.

Certainly the funeral directors cannot be given all the blame for the high cost of dying. The answer is more complex than that.

• • •

As a life insurance agent points out, the person who can least afford it often is those who make most provision for their funerals and make the most show of family bereavements.

Why? The reason may be that social significance of bereavement is outweighing its religious significance.

As fewer funerals are held from churches and the clergy are allowed single, a simple Christian ceremony becomes as unfashionable as a tasteless pagan rite.

'Et' Is Still Good English

Windsor Star

Recently we were surprised, even startled, to hear a well-modulated, feminine voice from overseas using "et" for ate. It reminded us of a generation or so ago in Ontario when was common usage. But even then it was considered to be regarded as rather crude English. Persons using it were apt to be thought of as uneducated, if not wholly illiterate.

This was a somewhat unfair and inaccurate appraisal. "Et" once was a quite proper word. It was brought over from the "old country" by the early settlers and survived a few generations before being replaced by the more "cultured" ate.

Oxonians, however, who pride themselves on their culture, would resent "et" being dismissed as uncultured. Some graduates of the great university still will claim that it is quite a proper pronunciation of ate — and although quite elocutionaries to prove it. It is just that it has come to be rather archaic.

So if you hear someone using "et," don't be too quick to publish scorn. He may know more about the English language than you do.

A Clear Choice

It would be best if the Conservative Party were reasonably conservative and the Liberal Party really liberal. There is an important place in Canada for both political philosophies. This would give voters a clear choice.

Liberal Arts Give Lessons On Living

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Speaking at a college recently, I became involved in the familiar controversy about a "liberal arts" education versus vocational or technical training. Or, more succinctly stated, education for living versus education for making a living.

I am wholly on the side of the liberal arts, and the older I get the more I observe the melancholy consequences of too early specialization. It forces a man into a mold from which he is rarely able to break out in later years.

The French have a phrase — indeed, the French have a phrase for everything — deformation professionelle". This means a professional deformation, a kink of personality that afflicts men who too closely identify their whole selves with their occupation.

This is a dangerous tendency, for oneself and for others, especially among professional people — for it subordinates the whole man to the function of the man, and his spirit loses its individuality and its authenticity.

In his interesting brief book on depth - psychology and pastoral care, Father Joseph Goldbrunner makes this point most tellingly:

"Professional life compels the soul to put on a uniform. For example, the teacher must always know more than the pupils. He loses his modesty authority and power upon him. The preponderance of person as teacher, against person as pupil, is the right time and place, gradually becomes a habit and taken for granted.

"The husband and father, the whole man, acts like a teacher. He gradually begins to schoolmaster everything and everybody. . . Instead of leaving his uniform at school and becoming a 'civilian' again, instead of being the man Nature has intended him to be, there is the danger that the teacher may identify himself with his role and become incapable of separating himself from it.

"He no longer knows he is playing a role and always wear. (as a mask in front of his spiritual face. The mask inserts itself between his real nature and the world, as the Greek actor wore the persona (mask). Thus, we have the persona of the official, the clergyman, the doctor whose a man's nature is, and the greater his personal vanity, the more he runs the danger of mistaking his persona for himself.

"His character fails to develop, it gets set in a groove. The vital energies of the soul are forced into a strait-jacket and fullness of life is rendered impossible. Anything that does not fit into the persona is repressed and slips back into the unconscious."

To Your Good Health

Impetigo Highly Contagious Type of Skin Disease

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have children, aged one and two. My daughter had impetigo when she was 7 months old, and now my son has it. I keep them as clean as I can. What can I do to get rid of this condition?
— Mrs. C.M.

Impetigo is an infection of the skin, not only infectious (caused by germs) but contagious (passed from person to person).

The germ can be either a form of the streptococcus or staphylococcus. Either, once it starts, soon sets up infected pustules. It can, of course, be a dangerous infection as well as a messy, unpleasant one.

True, cleanliness is extremely important but that isn't the whole story. Despite all reasonable care, it is still possible for the infection to spread because you can't see the germs. They may be transmitted by a child touching another, or by use of another's handkerchief, toys, pencils or whatnot.

Today's case gives at least a hint that the first attack of the disease may have been passed, not from child to child, but from adult to child.

Someone in or close to the household may be a carrier of the infection, in this instance the staphylococcus variety. This has been known to happen many times. Some of the worst threats against well-run nurseries are constantly on guard.

These germs may be found in the nose, cause no trouble to the carrier, yet become devilishly mean if they reach a person who possesses poor protection against them.

It sometimes is necessary to have laboratory cultures grown and examined from nose and throat swabbings of others in the family, especially the parents and I think that is the logical starting point in this case.

Dear Dr. Molner: Which, in fact, can the person merely add iron to the diet or is a tonic or liver also required? — Mrs. S.S.

It depends on the type of anemia. There are several. In some cases just adding iron-rich foods is sufficient. In pernicious anemia, Vitamin B (or liver extract) is necessary.

Dear Dr. Molner: A book I read recommends apple cider vinegar in water to reduce high blood pressure. Is this really effective? — S.J.

No. Vinegar, whether from apples or other sources, never lowered anybody's blood pressure. The A.M.A. and other groups have done their best to point out the fallacies of this particular (and amazingly popular) book of nostrums and folk tables.

It isn't that the old "snake-oil" type remedies it lists are necessarily harmful, but when people start putting faith in certain nonsensical folk medicines, they stop looking for some of the really effective ones which do now exist.

The outstanding examples, of course, are people who go to quacks who claim they can "cure" cancer, or become wedded to the idea that some charm or other will "cure" diabetes. The remedies may not harm them directly, but many die because they didn't seek scientific help until too late.

There are various treatments and medications which will reduce or control high blood pressure but none is as simple as cider or any other household remedy, and it is unfortunately childish to pretend that all cases of high blood pressure are alike, how many aren't.

• • •

Note to T.W.: No, by no means very much in the dark as to multiple-sclerosis. Research into causes is getting information steadily, but as yet no cure is in sight.

Hemorrhoids can be cured! If troubled with fissures, fistulae, abscesses or other rectal problems, write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., requesting a copy of the booklet, "The Real Cure For Hemorrhoids," enclosing a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope and 25c to cover printing and handling.

The Reichstag, the German Parliament building, was destroyed by fire 30 years ago today—in 1933—shortly after Adolf Hitler was elected chancellor. The destruction of the Reichstag was seized upon by Hitler's Nazis as a means of consolidating their power. The Nazis blamed the Communists for the fire, though it was in fact staged by the Nazis.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Others must have been as astonished as I was a few evenings ago to find the chief singing out of the radio. After hastily checking my machine and finding it was innocent of on other stations, I called the local CBC station. The program manager got hoarse with me.

The sounds were wholly incredible. Two women are apparently singing the chief number such as ladies might make when having their gall bladders removed without the benefit of anaesthetics. There was an instrumental accompaniment, though not actually an accompaniment, since the instrumental sounds bore no relation to the agonized wails of the ladies. As nearly as I could identify them, they were violins in the hands of untrained persons who were amusing themselves by seeing who could most hilariously imitate the singing of a jackass at sundown.

When I got through to the CBC, I was assured nothing was amiss. The singers were the work of young English composers in the International Society for Contemporary Music.

It is not only the moon that is becoming generation is proposing to explore. It is farther out than that.

Lake-on-the-Mountain Not Bottomless as Thought

PICTON—One of the famed attractions of Prince Edward County is the Lake-on-the-Mountain. It is just that, a lake on a long elevation of land several hundred feet above the waters of the Bay of Quinte below. The view from the point is superb, with Glenora to Adolphustown farms open sting on the bay below. The source of its cold, pure water has always been a mystery. It was usually spoken of as being "bottomless."

But now, one fact stands revealed. The lake is not bottomless. The water is 97 feet and below it 25 feet of sediment for a total of 122 feet to bed rock.

Actually, the bed rock is just 60 feet above the present level of Lake Ontario.

Interesting facts have been uncovered as a result of a survey made by the Geological Survey Branch of the Department of Mines and Technical Surveys at Ottawa. In charge were Dr. Jean Terasmae and Edward Mycock. Floyd Smith of Ottawa and Robert and Alfred Cairns of Amelisburg were assistants in the survey, which also included Roblin's Lake in Amelisburg township.

DEPTH FINDER USED

An electronic depth finder was used to locate the deepest spots in the two lakes. Then a drilling outfit was set up on the ice. Steel tubes were used and these were filled with items from the lake bottoms, including fossils which can be studied. They may reveal the origin of the lakes and their relation to the glacier age.

At Roblin's Lake the water was found to be 45 deep with 67 feet of sediment, making 112 feet to bedrock, not much less than in Lake-on-the-Mountain. Roblin's Lake is also an inland lake though level with the surrounding terrain.

The work has been under way during the past two summers but concluded for the present, in the past few days.

Many Township And Side Roads Still Blocked

PICTON — Many rural areas are still digging themselves out after the weekend snowfalls. While highways and county roads are in good condition, many township and side roads are either still blocked or one way paths.

That part of Prince Edward County south of Mountain View has been an unusual snow belt this winter, heavy falls being experienced while Belleville and Trenton either had sunshine or lightyfalls.

In Picton, Bloomfield and Wellington, banks of snow five feet high line the street sides.

In South Bay, Milford, Point Petre and Salmon Point areas, snow is six feet deep and standing on plowed back snow it is possible to touch telephone wires.

While some have been unable to get out, there are no reported cases of hardship or emergencies.

POOR VISIBILITY BLAMED

Poor visibility was blamed for two accidents which resulted only in property damage.

Cars driven by Douglas Linn of Campbellford and Marjorie Galway, Picton, collided on the Scoharie road. On Cherry Valley-Milford road, cars driven by Allan Hepworth, R.R. 5, Napanee, and C. E. Taylor, Picton, were in collision.

Residents of the area say it is the worst winter for snow since 1946-47 when most roads were blocked and roadside snow was piled up to telephone pole crossbars.

Tuesday saw a low of 16 below zero and a five above temperature most of the day.

Bobby Simpson Files Writ For Damages

Besides damages the dancer-model-cover girl asks reimbursement of hospital expenses and lost earnings.

Christians

came to mean the period of fasting in preparation for Easter. But the fast wasn't always 40 days (the six Sundays aren't counted) as it is today. And the rigor of the fast also has varied over the centuries.

CUSTOMS VARY

The customs of those who observe the fast vary among denominations, but tend to follow this pattern:

Only one full meal is allowed, plus two light collations which combined shouldn't amount to as much as the full meal. There may be no snacks between meals, and meat may be eaten only at the principal meal.

In some areas, the days just before Ash Wednesday are reserved for one final burst of fun and feasting before the fasting begins. Mardi Gras, New Orleans' traditional pre-Lenten festival, literally means "fat Tuesday." The word "carnival" comes from the Latin "carnivale," meaning "farewell to meat."

In the first three centuries the fast generally didn't exceed 40 hours, but it was far more severe. Some strict observers ate nothing at all from Good Friday afternoon until Easter Sunday morning.

The first mention of a 40-day preparatory period occurs in the canons of the Council of Nicaea in the year 325, though the emphasis was less on fasting than on prayer, recollection and other forms of self-examination.

WANTS ROYAL COMMISSION

Robert Strachan, NDP and opposition leader, in a statement outside the legislature, called for a royal commission investigation.

Alan MacFarlane (L — Oak Bay), who spoke following Mr. Dowding, said the RCMP should be called in.

Premier Bennett was not in the House when the charges were made. He was in Chilliwack, B.C., to fulfill a speaking engagement.

As the House rose for the night, Attorney-General Robert Bonner gave notice he will ask that the matter be referred to the public accounts committee, which has powers to call on all documents and persons involved. The motion cannot be considered for two days.

The highway project involved was No. 819, a 12.8-mile portion of the Trans-Canada Highway. L. and M. received a contract for $1,597,335 for this work in 1957.

Slashing

Tass statement issued that day urging both sides to settle the quarrel but refraining from giving full backing to China. It was published just before Khrushchev left for his tour of the United States.

Peking said Soviet attacks on China and Albania picked up following the "Camp David talks" — between Khrushchev and President Eisenhower—and have continued ever since.

"At present," the Chinese party paper said, "certain comrades of fraternal parties, while talking about a halt to the public polemics, are themselves continuing to attack the Chinese Communist party and other fraternal parties. This double-faced attitude actually implies that only you are permitted to attack others and that it is impermissible for others to reply. This will never work."

ASK INDEPENDENCE

ZANZIBAR (Reuters)—Zanzibar's two major political parties—the Nationalists and the opposition Afro-Shirazis — have faced a British official with demands for early elections and independence for this British protectorate. Colonial Secretary Duncan Sandys received leaders of the parties separately after he arrived on this spice island off the east African coast from Kenya Sunday for a three-day stay.

Gertrude R. — She's so unselfish. She expects nothing in return.

Natalie D. — Don't be fooled. She expects everything in return.

Gertrude R. — Our friend Olive is a sweet harmless soul, but Natalie continues to shun and rebuff her. She has a small passion cheque of her late husband's to live on, but she manages to take care of her needs and still do a lot of good for others.

She's one of a half dozen of us who have been neighborhood friends for years. But somehow she rubs Natalie the wrong way. Matters have come to a head because an organization we all belong to is having a convention in Atlantic City and I'm taking our bunch down in my car. Because Olive will be along, Natalie plans to go by train. Of course I can't tell Olive the reason. She likes Natalie and looked forward to being with her on the trip. I can't understand how anyone can find fault with Olive.

Natalie D. — Olive frightens me, when she doesn't mystify me! Once in a while, it seems to me, a person should mind her own business and take care of herself. But Olive can't bear being alone and so she's forever finding reasons to hang around me, Gertrude, and anyone else who lets her. "She can't do enough for others," is Gertrude's explanation of that. I find, however, that for every favor Olive hands out, she expects two in return.

Oh, she doesn't come right out and say it. But when she's plunked her week's food money into a bathrobe for my mother, naturally I'll invite her over for dinner a few nights in a row. It's true she sews for Gertrude, runs errands for other friends. Then she winds up turning to them will all kinds of problems.

I'm trying to break off with her. Her kind of giving has too many strings.

The Council: — It's not only more blessed to give than to receive. It's easier. For giving flatters superiority and strength, whereas receiving indicates need, lack, weakness. This case focuses attention on the problems of the recipient of a favor as well as the donor.

There are two forms of do-gooding. When a person who has a lot, gives a little and still has a lot left, the recipient may thank him, enjoy the loan, and that's the end of the exchange. But when a person who has nothing, or barely enough for his own needs, depletes his own store, "goes without" himself in order to supply another, the latter is beholden to take care of both of them. He must not only dredge up what he needs for himself, but must also see that his "benefactor" is provided for. This is true whether the hand-out was money, food, or companionship.

Too often — and this may sound harsh — the second form of giving is undertaken by people who shouldn't. The recipient, if needy, would be better off turning to organizations. Olive, though indigent, indulges in the good feeling of giving even though she has no right to give. Her first duty is to take care of herself.

Mrs. Helen Stevenson Meyer, in a recent article, described how much her parents, "Bill and Bumpy" Stevenson have given to others. At the same time she mentioned their gratitude for what life had given them: energy, intelligence, good looks, financial ease. This illustrates our point: Giving is fine when it can be done from a position of strength, and when any "return" is not asked, or worse, expected. Otherwise it's not giving, it's obligating.

This long discussion leads into a short comment on Olive. Is her giving really a method of making people "beholden" to her, of wielding power, of gaining attention? And, above all, having a good excuse for self-neglect? Gertrude can think about this. Natalie has thought about it. We agree that the true giver is one who can afford to forget she gave.

tion's council for such people."

Mr. Pearson made an unscheduled stop in Riviere du Loup, 110 miles northeast of Quebec City, to attend the town's winter carnival and commit his party to establishing a year-round farm service and a deep-water port there.

Riviere du Loup was represented in the Commons by Social Credit in the last Parliament.

APPEARS ON TV

Further on, in Rimouski territory where a Liberal won over a Social Credit candidate by only 794 votes, he appeared on a 15-minute television program with area Liberal candidates and repeated his theme that Canada's need is for a strong stable government.

He said the Social Credit vote in Quebec in the last election was an anti-Diefenbaker vote, but that since the Social Credit party had betrayed its voters by supporting the government, a vote for Social Credit is a vote for Mr. Diefenbaker" in this election.

His strongest attack came in a speech at Mont-Joli to some 200 people packed in a small hall.

He said the taxes of thousands of Quebec voters who voted Social Credit "could not know how badly they were being misled."

"I defy anyone to show me a political system in the history of the world that would give each and every citizen the sun, the moon and $20 a month.

"I defy you to find a system that gives without asking anything in return."

Only through hard work were great problems solved.

JETS COME HIGH

MONTREAL (CP)—TCA may have to spend more than $200,000,000 to replace its Viscounts and Vanguards in the late 1970's, air line officials said Tuesday. They said TCA plans to start retiring the turbo-prop airliners in late 1968 or early 1969 and is already shopping around for medium-range jet aircraft to replace them.

this meant a split in the party.

Mr. Thompson reiterated his Quebec declaration that he would personally do all in his power to prevent Canada from becoming a nuclear power.

But, for the first time, he defined what he means by a nuclear power—one that manufactures weapons as opposed to one that employs such weapons for its defence.

Mr. Thompson said in an interview that he still believes Canada must honor its defence commitments, "but I don't know what the formal commitments are."

Senator O'Leary said in his Hamilton speech that there is no commitment—only "plans, arrangements and proposals" made on the basis of conditions four years ago. Talk of Canada being "committed" to accept nuclear-tipped bomarcs is "nonsensical and inaccurate," he said.

In Ottawa, former deputy defence minister C. M. (Dud) Drury, a Liberal candidate, argued that Canada has commitments to participate in the

Honor Aunt On 91st Birthday

On Saturday evening Mrs. H. P. Twiddy, Foster Ave., entertained her aunt, Miss Alcombrack, on the occasion of her 91st birthday.

Miss Alcombrack is the last of the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel (Denyes) Alcombrack and was born at Moira, Ont. However, she spent most of her youth at Hallowray where her fathers operated a grist mill (which is still in operation). For over seventy years she lived with her sister, Mrs. John Archibald in Cannifton, and moved with her to Belleville five years ago.

Up until a few months ago she has been able to do her own shopping, conduct her own business and look after her own home. She does not wear glasses, has fairly good hearing, and has never been to a dentist and seldom to a doctor.

She contributes her long, active life to not being overweight (weighs around a hundred pounds), good plain food, lots of work and walking. When she and her sister were well over eighty they could walk from Cannifton to Belleville once or twice a week.

She greatly enjoyed the birthday celebration with her nieces and nephews.

Mount Pleasant-Rawdon UCW Study "On Asia's Rim"

RAWDON — The regular meeting of Mount Pleasant-Rawdon United Church Women was held one week later than usual at the church hall. There were 16 members and two children in attendance.

The program was arranged by Mrs. Raymond McConnell and Mrs. Clarence Scott and they presided and gave the prayers. Mrs. Garth Joslin was pianist. The service opened with a call to worship and a prayer by the conveners. Mrs. Robert Hoard read a meditation based on a letter from Dr. Allen Knight, an agricultural missionary of the United Church working in Angola, Portuguese West Africa. This gave a glimpse of the fields people, soya beans, vegetables, and other foods. The closing prayer ended with the plea "Give us the vision and the will to share our abundance with our needy brethren whom we serve they may be". The worship closed with "In Christ There is No East Nor West". The offering was gathered by Mrs. Knight and Mrs. Joslin dedicated it. Mrs. James Hoard sang "Bless This House".

PRESENT PLAY

A reading play entitled "Bow Before the Wind" by Hilda Benson Powiche was presented by four members, Shu-Mei, a girl of eighteen — Mrs. Ross Jeffs; Cheng — her best friend, Mrs. Frank Spencer; Mrs. Wang, a widow and mother of Shu-Mei —Mrs. Donald Knight, and Mrs. Wang's sister — Mrs. William McAdam. Mrs. Raymond McConnell introduced the cast and read the message by the author. She pointed to the fact that it takes both effort and understanding to realize that there are real people in China who have the same hopes, fears, problems and reactions as people have in Canada. The church is like the big bamboo tree at the end of the village it often bowed before the wind when the dread storms came, however when the wind ceased the old tree straightened again, thus the church in China is like the bamboo tree.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen introduced the new mission study book entitled "On Asia's Rim" written by Andrew T. Roy. The author says "The problems confronting the church in its mission are tremendous and much prayer and thought are needed in this crucial time".

STUDY BOOK

She synopsized the first two chapters and said, "the book describes the islands and peninsulas of Korea, Okinawa, Taiwan (also known as Formosa) and Hong Kong. Thirty eight million people are crowded in this area and of that amount 15 million are refugees. Promising opportunities are opening up in Hong Kong for reaching the widely scattered Chinese population in South-East Asia. The United Church of Canada has made a contribution of $18,000 toward a permanent radio studio. These regions have a common element. They have ancestor worship and similar ideas re marriage, birth and funeral customs. The Church is a centre of healing and understanding and much is being accomplished, but the big problem is how to clothe, feed and employ the millions who have come to these regions with nothing in their pockets.

Korea has a population of 30 million people and their chief crop is rice. Only two per cent of their land is useable. They also produce barley, wheat, millet, soy beans, fruits, cotton and tobacco. In northern Korea there are mineral resources such as coal, iron, gold, copper, lead and zinc.

The early Protestant missionaries stressed that the Korean church must be self supporting and that members must be educated in the Bible. There were also studies in world geography, lectures on sanitation, child care and practical subjects. There were strict standards of membership — all idols must be put away, a man could have only one wife, a man must not drink, smoke, gamble or break the Sabbath.

In 1960 the University of Seoul had an enrollment of 7,461 students, mission schools have been instituted for women and girls. Each acre of land must support four persons and the government is reclaiming flooded areas around the coast. The chief hope for their economic problem is in the improvement of farming methods. Trade is increasing with Japan, the Christian church is training men of integrity in order to give the people of Korea gifts of purity, renewal, hope and meaning."

Mrs. Herbert Smith synopsized a story entitled "Out of the Storm" by Jessie L. Beattie. This gave a vivid description of one of the faithful mission boats entitled "The Glad Tidings."

The narrative centred around the year 1884 and once when a village of Christian Indians decided to move from British Columbia's mainland to the American territory in Alaska. The Christian Indians' canoes were joined their canoes for 80 miles, as many as 60 canoes at a time and he made several trips to and fro to help these people.

Ships of the marine mission serve both the east and west coasts of Canada. Missionaries visit the small communities and give all the assistance possible. Sometimes the arrival of the missionary is a way to prevent the loss of human life and this was the centre of the story.

Mrs. Donald Knight, 1st vice-president took charge. The usual business was conducted and it was announced that the World Day of Prayer would be held at Bethel United Church.

RESTORES HOME

MONTREAL (CP)—Designer Marie-Josée Nolin, one of the city's best dressed women, has bought a three-story, 100-year-old Victorian building which she plans to remodel as a home and grand salon. Her restoration will be in keeping with Montreal's plans to preserve historic sections of the city for the 1967 world's fair.

Weddings

KLEINSTEUBER — GAGNE

A lovely candlelight wedding was solemnized Friday, February 1, 1963, at 7.00 p.m. in the First Pentecostal Church, Belleville, when Cecile Laura Gagne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gagne, Foxboro, was united in marriage to Mr. Floyd Ernest Roy Kleinsteuber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Kleinsteuber, Belleville R.R. 5. The Rev. B. H. Cross, pastor of the church, officiated at the double-ring ceremony before a background of potted ferns and baskets of white mums and white gladioli.

Miss Linda Pritchard, the church pianist, provided traditional wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mr. Monty Parks, in his renditions of "Because" before the ceremony and "I Love You Truly" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Marcel Gagne, the pretty bride was radiant in a floor-length bridal gown of nylon organza featuring a scoop neckline and a full bouffant skirt with lace panels over taffeta and long sleeves ending in lily points over the wrists. Her Spanish style tulle veil was caught to a coronet headdress of crystals. She carried a bouquet of "Bellertine" red roses with white hyacinth bells and trailing ivy.

Mrs. Shirley Hamilton, the bride's only attendant, wore a tangerine crystal chiffon gown featuring a fitted bodice with rounded neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. She wore matching shoes, white pulled flat and gloves and carried a cascade bouquet of white mums centred with orange delight rose petals.

The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Arthur Hamilton of Belleville, while Mr. Roger Gagne, brother of the bride, and Mr. Kenneth Kleinsteuber, brother of the bridegroom, were the ushers.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents in Foxboro where the bridal table was prettily appointed with white damask and centred with a three-tier wedding cake set on pedastels, topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom and flanked with vases of mixed flowers and gleaming candelabra. The bridal bouquets completed the lovely nuptial setting.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a blue brocade sheath dress, winter white accessories and a corsage of pink Briarcliffe roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who was attired in a pale green sheath dress with matching jacket, winter white accessories and a corsage of yellow Queen Elizabeth roses.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls and points in the United States the bride chose a blue wool dress, grey jacket, winter white accessories and a corsage of pink Sweetheart rosettes.

Guests were in attendance from Oshawa, Toronto, Belleville, Foxboro, Rossmore, Mallorytown and Crookston.

In previous to her marriage the bride was presented with an electric mixer by the employees of Vagden Mills of which the bride is an employee. A miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Mrs. Shirley Hamilton, at which time the bride received many lovely gifts. Previous to the marriage a rehearsal party was held at the home of the bridegroom's parents when gifts were presented to the bridal attendants by the bride and bridegroom, after which a lovely buffet lunch was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Kleinsteuber are residing on Moira Street, Belleville.

Today's Cooking Magic

A Jellied Jewel

Cookbook No. 15—Recipe No. 3

ENTERTAINING SIX OR EIGHT

Gelatin salads add real glamor to any meal . . . and besides, they're good to eat! Here's a Molded Pear Ginger Salad that will gleam like a giant Jewel on your party table. It's just one of 143 delectable dishes described in Entertaining Six-or Eight . . . a book you'll certainly want to have now. Entertaining Six or Eight is Cookbook No. 15 in the series Cooking Magic, and is obtainable through the Ontario Intelligencer.

MOLDED PEAR-GINGER SALAD:

Set out six 4½-inch shallow molds or individual pie pans. Empty into a bowl 1 package lemon-flavored gelatin. Add, stirring until gelatin is dissolved ¾ cup very hot water. Stir until completely dissolved and blend in 1¼ cups pale dry ginger ale.

Chill until gelatin mixture is slightly thicker than consistency of thick, unbeaten egg white.

Lightly oil the molds with salad or cooking oil (not olive oil); set aside to drain. Finely chop and set aside enough crystallized ginger to yield 1 tablespoon chopped crystallized ginger. Drain (reserving a syrup for use in other food preparations) contents of 1 1-lb. can (about 6) pear halves.

Spoon about 2 tablespoons of slightly thickened gelatin into each mold. Spoon onto centre of gelatin in each mold ½ teaspoon of the chopped ginger. Place one pear half, cavity side down, over the ginger in each mold. Spoon remaining slightly thickened gelatin into molds, covering pears. Chill salads in refrigerator until firm.

Unmold onto chilled individual salad plates and garnish with salad greens. Accompany with ripe olives and cream cheese nut balls.

Entertaining Six or Eight offers a complete guide for every occasion whether formal or casual.

Bell's Corners Fails to Get Into Contest

OTTAWA (CP)—Brash Bell's Corners failed in its attempt Tuesday night to have one of its housewives named the unofficial pancake-flipping champion of the world.

The Ottawa suburb, snubbed by the vicar of Olney, England, in its attempt to enter the traditional flapjack flipping contest between Olney and Liberal, Kan., ran off a contest of its own on the community's outdoor rink.

Contest officials said they would claim the unofficial title if their housewife bettered times posted by the winner in the Liberal and Olney contests.

However, Mrs. Thelma Duke, a 33-year-old mother of three boys, won the Bell's Corners contest in one minute and 20 seconds. That was well below the time of one minute, 5.6 seconds posted by Liberal housewife Mrs. Mary Barrington, who earlier Tuesday was crowned official pancake flipper of the world.

RAN 220 YARDS

The Bell's Corners race was run over a 220-yard course on the community rink. The ladies were required to flip their pancakes 10 times while running.

The Olney and Liberal contestants ran 415 yards and flipped their pancakes only three times.

The Bell's Corners' attempt to enter the traditional race was ruled out by Rev. Ronald Collins, Anglican vicar of Olney, organizer of the race.

"We get hundreds of challenges but it has always been our policy that this is just between us and Liberal," he said.

C.G.I.T. Hold Banquet

The city-wide CGIT mother and daughter banquet was held in Holloway Street United Church last Tuesday evening, with a large attendance from the various city churches.

An impressive service was conducted by Mrs. J. W. Hamilton, at which time the stewardship cards were dedicated to CGIT members. The past chairman, Mrs. R. W. Campbell, presented several of the girls who are graduating from CGIT this year with suitable gifts. The members of the various committees comprising the girls' work board were introduced by the chairman, Mrs. R. C. Ellis. A gift was also presented to each of the groups by vice-chairman Mrs. J. Aitcheson in appreciation for the girls' splendid efforts in selling boxes of chocolates, one of the money making projects for the year.

Miss Doreen Reynolds in a most informal manner gave the girls an insight of tasks anyone of any age with qualifications might find rewarding to do. Through the United Church one may be sent where leadership is needed in vacation time and those who aid at this type of work are known as caravaners. The speaker also showed colored slides of the various places she visited as a caravaner.

Should Pensioners Remarry?

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—I am a man just turned 70. Recently I lost my wife after 40 years of marriage. I am lonesome. Would you consider me nuts thinking that perhaps there is a lonesome widow somewhere, or an old age pensioner, who would remarry, or share a home with me?

I am in good health and still working part time. I am not a rich man by a long shot, but I have some means, and of course I have my own home. None of us, of course, known how long we may live, and I dread to think I might have to spend the rest of my life alone. I have two married children but, even if they wanted me, I don't think I would be happy with them.

Now if you don't think I am completely crazy, perhaps you could suggest how I might go about getting in touch with some lady. I am not a drinking man.—A. W.

DEAR A. W.—Crazy? Far from it. Practical. And understandably lonesome on the loss of your companion of so many years.

Clubs for seniors report dozens of "Golden Age" marriages every year. And that's where I'd look if I were you. See Mr. Whitman, at the Bellevville City Hall about this.

DEAR DORIS—My fiance and I have been engaged for over a year. Recently a good friend of mine wrote him quite a love letter. She had only met him twice before this. He told me about the letter and showed me her signature on it, but would not let me read it as he said "it might spoil our friendship," and it meant nothing to him.

I have tried to act the same toward her, but I guess I was shocked by her attitude as she avoids me as much as possible. Some tell me it is no worse than one girl taking over another's boy friend, but since we were engaged I think there is a big difference. Am I right in feeling betrayed by my friend? What should my fiance have done?—RIGHT OR WRONG.

DEAR RIGHT OR WRONG—You were betrayed, all right. Your fiance's conscience is clear—yet if he had come clean all the way by showing you the letter it would have been better. Love that lasts for life does not tease nor hold back any part of loyalty.

• • •

DEAR DORIS—I have been wondering whether or not it is proper etiquette to send a gift when you receive a birth announcement. Is it not just the thought that the person sending them would like you to know of the happy event? —(Signed) WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING—Proper, but no obligatory. An announcement is just that—a message to a friend about the event.

• • •

DEAR DORIS—The boy I was going with told me he loved me. One night we went farther than I thought was right but still we did nothing wrong. He has not called me since that night and he has also seemed to make sure that I saw him with another girl.

When we meet he doesn't take his eyes off me and this makes me feel very uncomfortable. Please tell me how I should accept this situation and what I did wrong.—TROUBLED

DEAR TROUBLED—You disappointed him by letting down the barriers. As the lady in the case, you either run the show or ruin it. Don't be the Gal Who Can't Say No.

• • •

TO J. C.—Black and white are both mourning colors. The two black suits are quite suitable—as it were! (A stamped self-addressed envelope would have gotten you an earlier reply.)

• • •

NOTE TO EDITOR—This letter came from a Belleville reader who did not enclose a self-addressed envelope.)

• • •

(If it's etiquette Doris can enlighten you about how it is done in Canada. Enclose a five-cent-stamped envelope with your question.)

Homemade Soup Again Chicken This Time

by Mary Moore

In the two months just past I have given here 5 five recipes for soup: Cream of Tomato, Turkey, Split Pea, Scotch Broth and Navy Bean.

There is a friendly argument in this kitchen: Have we fed you too much soup?

I say "no" for there are many young (and middle-aged) readers in this audience who never make soup. Maybe they think all soup comes from cans. By coincidence, this lamentable news has been impressed on me strongly in the past week.

Soup is not poor man's fare for I know plenty of prosperous cooks who make their own by choice. But it is economical, as this recipe bears out.

HOMEMADE CHICKEN SOUP

I bought 4 chicken backs at 13c per lb. (25c for the lot) and covered them well with cold water in the deep well cooker, added 1 teaspoon salt and simmered them covered until the meat easily separated from the bones. I let it cool enough to handle then removed all bones and fat and let it chill so I could skim off the top fat. I returned the meat, which measured 1½ cups, to the broth (6 cups) and added ¼ cup rice, ¼ cup macaroni alphabets, 2 tablespoons barley, 2 tablespoons lentils, 2 tablespoons parsley, 1 tablespoon dry red and green sweet pepper flakes, 1 chopped onion and 1 diced carrot and 2 teaspoons salt and simmered it until barley was tender.

This soup was quite thick, but not too thick to serve as a main course soup, especially since I had the crustiest French bread with sweet butter to serve. Frenchify with it. (I'll give you the recipe for the crusty French bread next week. The crustiness is achieved by a glazing treatment that is new to me and I am excited about it and aching to pass it on to you.)

Of course you know that other vegetables may be added to this soup such as wafer-thin slices of cauliflower and broccoli, fresh frozen pear, shredded green beans, diced turnip, canned tomatoes or tomato juice or any soup vegetables you fancy yourself.

The point is this: If you crave new and rich flavors start your own soup pot and you will notice that your family has raised your rating and that your housekeeping money is stretching.

Charles Best Dedicated And Brilliant

Today is the 64th birthday of one of Canada's few world-known men, His Excellency Dr. Charles H. Best. He was born in West Pembroke, Maine, but has always considered himself Canadian because both his physician father and mother were Nova Scotians.

He was sent to Toronto to complete his high schooling at Harbord Collegiate—at 17 entered the University of Toronto —on his 18th birthday joined the artillery and went overseas as a sergeant driver.

On discharge he returned to the university and in 1921 he finished his pre-med course, graduating in physiology and biochemistry. He teamed up with a 30-year-old physician, Frederick Banting and that summer they were allowed to use one small lab room and were given 10 dogs and 10 weeks to isolate "an effective antidiabetic hormone."

The 10 weeks stretched into to 20-odd; the two men were paid nothing—Best lived on his veteran's allowance, Banting sold his car to eat and pay the rent. At the end of exactly four months, May 16 to September 16—they put insulin and themselves on the medical map. Today, everyday, three million diabetics owe their lives to this discovery.

Since then insulin sales have totalled into billions. Yes, billions, and Banting and Best could have been among the world's richest men. Instead, they turned the patent papers over to the University of Toronto for $1.00 with the stipulation that no royalties be charged for the manufacture of insulin, anywhere in the world.

After this, Best completed his medical studies and received his M.D. in 1925. He did not practise medicine but went into teaching and research. Although he will always be remembered for insulin, which by the way he pronounces "insulun" — some of the other fruits of Prof. Best's research are the enzyme histaminase; the dextary factor of choline; heparin; and "was he who perfected the method of turning human blood into dried serum which can be kept indefinitely (the Red Cross has taken this over) and earned for him his C.B.E.

He's still at his research in the Charles H. Best Institute in Toronto — with a staff of 200.

His one and only wife was born in St. Andrew's by the Sea — Margaret Mahon, her name. They have two sons, Charles Alexander who has given them three grandchildren. He lives on a farm at Georgetown Ontario, and will be the Conservative candidate for Halton County on the April 8 election. Second son Henry is a bacheior, writing his thesis on a Canada Council grant.

Dr. Best's hobbies are golf, painting and riding — and though he travels far lecturing and receiving honors he always works in a summer holiday at his cottage, Schooner Cove Farm on the Maine coast.

The title, His Excellency? We in Canada usually associate this with the Governor-General and ambassadors but in 1955 Dr. Best was elected one of 57 members of the Pontifical Academy of Sciences, by Pope Pius XII. Members of the Academy may use the title Excellency.

I think anyone in the world would say, "Here is a man!" Happy Birthday, Your Excellency!

Community Honors Couple At Shower

WELLINGTON — A miscellaneous shower was held in the town hall, Saturday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. David Joron (Betty Faye Smith) of Port Credit, recent newly-weds.

A nice crowd was there, but owing to the bad weather many sent their gifts. Cards were played during the evening.

The guests of honor were seated at a table, Mrs. Burt Tuttle read an appropriate address and presented them with many lovely and useful gifts. After all had been opened, David and Betty Faye voiced their appreciation.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Burt Tuttle assisted by Mrs. Helen Cassins and Mrs. C. Weatherbee.

Mental Illness in Ontario Greatest Health Problem Says Minister in House

TORONTO (CP)—Mental illness is Ontario's "greatest health problem," Health Minister Dymond said in the legislature Tuesday.

In presenting his department's 1963-64 spending estimates Dr. Dymond said some members of the House "apparently are of the opinion that we do nothing for our mentally ill."

He said that government members "do not hide the fact that much remains to be done, but it is being tackled with a will."

Spending on mental health in the coming fiscal year is estimated at 76.9 per cent of the total health appropriation, outside of funds provided for the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, he said.

In illustrating the magnitude of the mental health problem, Dr. Dymond said that on Nov. 30, 1962, there were 23,437 patients in Ontario mental hospitals and hospital schools.

The latest available figure for total patients in public general hospitals, convalescent and chronic-illness hospitals was 26,312.

"Almost four persons out of every thousand of the population of Ontario are today on the books of one of our mental hospitals," Dr. Dymond said, and there were more than 10,000 admissions to Ontario mental hospitals in 1962.

Ontario provides a greater portion of its total health spending for mental health than any other Canadian province, he said.

In future, he said, "increasing emphasis will be put upon the establishment of community mental health clinics," which the government believes "is our most effective instrument of prevention."

Dr. Dymond said the government proposed to add five community clinics to the present 24 during the coming fiscal year, and an additional 2 in the next four years.

He repeated the announcement, made in the throne speech last fall, that two community establishment of a central register for handicapped children.

Mr. Everett Liddle, Belleville's "Mr. Veteran" is seen receiving retirement gift from Cecil Hluser of the National Employment Service, after 17½ years service. Mrs. Liddle received a bouquet of roses.

New Subsidies For Roads to Be Increased

TORONTO (CP)—Details of increased provincial subsidies for municipal roads will be revealed when the highways department's spending estimates are debated in the legislature, Highways Minister MacNaughton said Tuesday.

Mr. MacNaughton told the annual convention of the Ontario Good Roads Association that he could not as yet elaborate on the changes promised in the speech from the throne opening the current session last November.

"However, very shortly these changes, most favorable to the municipalities, will be fully disclosed when the estimates are tabled," the highways minister said.

He quoted a section of the throne speech which said the highways department in the next year would "place even greater emphasis on assistance to the municipal road systems by way of increased and extended subsidies."

The province has surpassed the ancient Roman empire in road building activities, Dr. Robert F. Legget of the National Research Council told the convention. He said the Roman empire had 50,000 miles of first class roads. Ontario, with 85,000 miles of roads and streets, was slightly ahead of the Romans at its height.

He quoted from ancient writings to show the Romans had a problem when it came to dealing with their roads and in the relief of traffic jams.

Everett Liddle, Official Of NES for Nearly 18 Years Friend of Veterans, Retires

A man with the war veterans' interests at heart for more than 40 years and who has thrilled thousands of Belleville and district kiddies in his role as Santa Claus, has retired.

He is Everett Liddle, 71 Cedar Street, who last evening was honored a retirement banquet by members of the Belleville office of the National Employment Service with which organization he was employed for 17½ years.

The retirement banquet held at Johnny's Restaurant at the Bellville Plaza, saw Mr. Liddle presented with a certificate of merit in recognition of his lengthy service with the department as well as gifts of a lounge chair, bathrobe and cigars from his fellow employers. Mrs. Liddle received a bouquet of roses.

A veteran of World War I, Mr. Liddle enlisted with the 39th Battalion in 1915 and later transferred to the 19th Infantry Battalion with service in the trenches at Ypres, Salient, at Vimy, and at the Battle of the Somme.

ALWAYS SERVED VETERANS

He served with the rank of Battalion Signalman and was invalided to England in 1917. He returned to Canada in March, 1918, and received his discharged the same July.

He then attended Ontario Business College and immediately was named secretary-treasurer of the Great War Veterans' Association and since then he has never ceased working in the interests of the veterans.

A member of Branch 99 of the Royal Canadian Legion, Mr. Liddle served as secretary of same for 1948-49, and was deputy district commander in 1950-51.

For his long service with the Legion he has received the Queen Elizabeth Coronation Medal; Certificate of Merit from the Ontario Poppy Committee and the Meritorious Medal, the latter being the highest honor award for the Legion in Canada.

SERVED AS ALDERMAN

Over the years he has served as secretary of 1st and 2nd vice president of the local Legion branch.

In civilian role Mr. Liddle worked as cashier with Coca-Cola Ltd. at Belleville, and later was transferred to Hamilton. He returned to Belleville as bookkeeper and later as salesman with John Sloan Ltd, continuing this role when the firm sold out to National Grocers in the late 1920's.

He joined the Unemployment Insurance Commission in 1941 serving in the capacities as veterans' officer, employment officer, special placement officer and vocational training officer.

SERVED CITY

But he has also found time to serve his city and was alderman in 1949-50 and a member of the Belleville Parks Board for 10 years. Fraternally he is a past master of Eureka Lodge, No. 283, A. F. and A.M., and is a past worthy patron of the Belleville Chapter No. 55 Order of the Eastern Star.

And finally, the role of Santa Claus, Mr. Liddle's jolly "Ho, Ho" has been heard by thousands of children as over the years he has played St. Nick in the annual Santa Claus parade.

American, U.K. Scientists Sceptical of Russian Claim

Plans to Unite Will Encourage Similar Plans

TORONTO (CP)—Rt. Rev. F. H. Wilkinson, Anglican Bishop of Toronto, said Tuesday plans to unite British Anglicans and Methodists will encourage similar plans here.

Most of Canada's Methodists were absorbed by the United Church in 1925 and Bishop Wilkinson said talks about merging the Anglican Church of Canada and the United Church of Canada have been going on since 1946. Talks between the Anglicans and Presbyterians started five years ago.

The British proposals to bring the Methodists back into the Church of England, which they left 219 years ago, were announced Monday.

Dr. Ernest Long, secretary of the general council of the United Church of Canada, said Tuesday he too is encouraged by the British talks.

"If there is a breakthrough in their conversations at this point," he said, "it could pave the way for us for the next step."

Dr. Ross Cameron, moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, said he looks forward hopefully to the success of the British talks.

The spokesmen made their comments in interviews.

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — The proposed merger of the British Methodist Church and the Church of England could be a long step forward in the movement of almost universal religious unity, Bishop Glen Phillips of Denver said Tuesday.

Bishop Phillips is chairman of the Methodist Church Commission of Church Unions, in active negotiation with representatives of a similar commission from the Evangelical United Brethern Church.

Phillips said he is "delighted to hear reports of the merger which will be a natural reunion since the Methodist Church came out of the Episcopalian (Anglican) Church."

SOPRANO TO REST

NEW YORK (AP) — Renata Tebaldi, Italian soprano star of the Metropolitan Opera, is suffering from general fatigue and her doctors have ordered a long rest, Met General Manager Rudolf Bing said Tuesday. He said Miss Tebaldi's scheduled appearances will be cancelled for the rest of the New York season and the company's annual spring tour.

NEW YORK (CP)—American and British scientists are sceptical of a Russian claim that it has received two salamanders from a 5,000-year Siberian deep-freeze igloo.

A spokesman for the Natural History Museum in London said Tuesday it is more likely the animals had gone underground in cracks or crevasses recently to hibernate and been in such a torpid state when found.

Dr. Erich Maluf, curator of the fossil section of the museum, said: "If the Russian report is correct and the freezing of the animals is accurate, then it is a "very surprising" discovery.

"The Russians claim the creatures were alive for some time and could yet be revived one in to see them," said Dr. John Ostrom, a paleontologist at Yale University in New Haven, Conn. He added that it is not impossible or unreasonable the Soviet claims are true.

Dr. Francis Ryan, zoologist at Barnard College, Columbia University, said of the deep-freeze creatures: "I suggest they go back to sleep."

REPORTS FIND

Moscow radio announced the find of salamanders and tadpoles and said space travellers might emulate them to make long journeys through space unhindered by huge amounts of supplies.

The Russian broadcast said: "Some time ago Soviet geologists found something resembling a deep freeze in a region about 25 feet in the frozen ground of northern Siberia. It was a cave-like room with a room temperature far below freezing point. They classed it as a four-toed triton, one of the oldest and most primitive orders of tailed amphibians that inhabited the earth in the Mesozoic era (the dinosaur age).

SCIENCE YEARS

"Judging by the state of the earth in which it was found, biologists concluded that the triton had been deep for about 5,000 years."

Tritons are salamanders, or newts, which in turn superficially resemble lizards but lack the lizards scales and claws.

Dr. Ostrom, assistant curator of vertebrate paleontology at Yale's Peabody Museum, said simple organisms have been frozen and revived. But he knew of no example of a higher animal such as a vertebrate being revived after being frozen for 5,000 years.

Dr. Ryan, chairman of the department of zoology at Columbia, said chances were 1,000,000 to one against the Soviet salamanders having been frozen for 5,000 years.

BUY COTTON FABRIC

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—The Russian government, which has ordered clothes rationing in the Havana area, will buy more than 70,000,000 yards of cotton fabric from Red China this year, Havana radio said today.

Hamilton Says P.M. Asked for Divine Help

OUTLOOK, Sask. (CP)—Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton said Tuesday "critical newspaper men are brainwashing the country."

In an address to a Progressive Conservative meeting here, Mr. Hamilton said Prime Minister Diefenbaker had asked for divine help in making a decision on nuclear arms and not one newspaper mentioned it.

The minister said that newspaper men in the press gallery, questioned about the matter, said they were not interested in that kind of trash."

"In a major defence policy speech in the Commons Jan. 25, Mr. Diefenbaker closed by saying:

"My prayer is that we will be directed in this matter (of nuclear arms). Some could conclude that belief on my part. I believe that the Western world has been directed by God in the last few years, or there would have been no survival. I believe that will continue. My prayer is . . . that the Canadian people will be able to say that, whatever decision is made, it was made with every consideration being given to all these moral and psychological things that form one's makeup."

Election Will Be Referendum On A-Arms -- Douglas

CALGARY (CP)—The April 8 federal election will be a referendum on the question of Canada acquiring nuclear weapons, says T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party.

It is important that candidates fielded by all parties be honest with the people and tell them where they stand," he told an NDP rally here Tuesday night. The chairman of the meeting said 1,200 persons were present.

Mr. Douglas, taking part in the 11th election campaign of his political career, restated his party's stand against nuclear weapons of any kind.

There is no defence against intercontinental ballistic missiles and manned bombers are being phased out of service, he said. Bases for launching missiles, built in Canada primarily as defence against bombers, were outdated and useless.

Mr. Douglas went on to attack the nuclear arms policies of the Progressive Conservative, Liberal and Social Credit parties. They were trying to "work both sides of the street" on the nuclear issue.

HYPE OF SPENDING

The federal government had been spending taxpayers money for two years without having a budget approved by the Commons and the only legislation adopted had been bills giving tax concessions to oil and mining interests.

"That is all which has been going on with the Diefenbaker regime," said Mr. Douglas. "Never has the bankruptcy of the Tories parties been in evidence as much as it is today."

Canada's most important function was that of a peace maker and this could be obtained by maintaining a non-nuclear role in NATO.

Mr. Douglas devoted almost the entire 45-minute speech to the nuclear question. He said Canadians are looking for a political party which will be an expression of the hopes of many people.

Douglas Under Fire by Sharp Over A-Arms

EDMONTON (CP)—Attempts to turn the federal election into a nuclear arms plebiscite have introduced an undesirable emotional element in the nuclear issue, Mitchell Sharp of Toronto, senior trade adviser to Liberal Leader Pearson, said Tuesday.

T. C. Douglas, leader of the New Democratic Party, was making nuclear policy a central issue in the campaign because "he has nothing very much else to talk about," Mr. Sharp told a press conference.

The 52-year-old economist and former deputy trade minister said Mr. Pearson has had no jumped on the nuclear bandwagon when he came out in favor of nuclear arms for Canada. The Liberal leader had merely called on the government to honour its NATO commitments, and assured the government that the Liberal party would support such a stand.

Charges Sudbury Union Used 'Gutless Tactics'

SUDBURY (CP)—Dr. J. D. McInnes, chairman of the Sudbury Arena Commission, said Tuesday night the International Union of Operating Engineers (AFL-CIO) uses "gutless and ruthless" tactics to organize new shops.

Dr. McInnes told a special meeting of city council the commission is not anti-union. He said commissioners' wives were intimidated during a recent strike of the arena's four engineers. He did not elaborate.

Dr. McInnes said public opinion forced the commission to recognize the union as bargaining agent for the engineers but "every conceivable means of pressure was thrust upon us except the proper way—through the front door."

Union officials were not immediately available for comment.

The recognition was granted after the two-week strike that ended Saturday.

Abused, Cursed by Mayor Of Owen Sound Over Dog Pound Says SPCA Official

TORONTO (CP)—The head of Ontario's SPCA said Tuesday night he was abused and cursed at by Mayor E. C. Sargent of Owen Sound when he attempted to arrange a meeting with city council to discuss the city's handling of stray dogs.

Thomas Hughes of Toronto was commenting on a decision Monday night by Owen Sound city council to order its dog catcher back to work despite what council said was the action of an inspector for the SPCA in condemning the city pound and ordering the dog catcher to stop "picking up strays."

Mr. Hughes said it is his personal opinion that the Owen Sound pound "obviously does not have to comply with the law of Canada that they simply feel they are above the law."

He would not forecast what action the Ontario SPCA will take now, "but since we don't have an inspector stationed at Owen Sound, I anticipate that no doubt we will get the assistance of police forces in the area for this case."

"It's a simple matter of law enforcement," Mr. Hughes said. He added that the Criminal Code requires adequate care for animals and the Ontario SPCA Act empowers the SPCA "to seize animals when it feels they are being neglected."

The Owen Sound pound was described Tuesday night as an "old, broken-down place" by Chief Insp. J. T. McArthy, who investigated the city's facilities several weeks ago after requests from the Owen Sound SPCA and letters from private citizens.

The pound is described as lacking running water, heating and places for the dogs to exercise. For a while, dog catcher Rae Heighes kept strays in his own garage rather than put them in the pound.

Mr. Hughes said Tuesday night he went to Owen Sound about six months ago and met with Mayor Sargent and local SPCA officials. He said the mayor agreed the pound was inadequate and "promised to help the Owen Sound society to provide adequate facilities."

After insp. McArthy's visit, he said he wrote asking the Owen Sound keeper not to keep animals in the pound. Mayor Sargent replied that the satisfactory conclusion could be expected within a few weeks.

Mr. Hughes said he telephoned the mayor last Friday, seeking to arrange a meeting of city council to explain the SPCA's stand.

"I was abused and insulted in the most filthy terms," Mr. Hughes said. "The mayor showed an attitude of violent, irrational behavior and irresponsible abuse."

He described council's position as "one of the most frightening things I've ever come across."

Allegations of Highway Misdealing Made in B.C.

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A bush settled over the British Columbia legislature Tuesday as an opposition member tabled an affidavit and other documents alleging the Social Credit government of B.C. paid thousands of dollars for highways work that was never done.

It was by all odds the most dramatic legislative action of the day, as seven of Canada's legislatures continued their sittings.

In B.C., Premier Bennett, out of town, was not available for comment. But Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi said in a telephone interview from Ottawa the charge "is another one of these great smear campaigns that the opposition has been trying to put on for a number of years."

In other, more placid legislatures, there were these highlights:

Edmonton — Two perennial subjects got equally perennial treatment. Public Works Minister Fred Colborne said his department is thinking of wiring the legislature for sound to facilitate broadcasting of legislative sessions, but has not yet decided whether such a system is feasible. The House rejected by 40 to 9 a motion calling for the abolition of part of debates and discussions.

TURNS DOWN DST VOTE

A motion calling for a plebiscite on daylight saving time was held during the next provincial election—was turned down 45 to 6. Mr. Walter Dinsdale (PC—Medicine Hat) said residents live in urban areas have daylight hours after the summer, but Mr. Colborne replied that Alberta's geographical position already gives it enough daylight hours.

Regina — The Saskatchewan health minister said his predecessor — who quit the CCF cabinet and later joined the Liberals—cleared over the provincial compulsory universal medical care plan.

Walter Erb (L—Milestone), in his first speech as a Liberal member, said the plan itself is chronically sick. The government had "presumed to ram through" the medicare scheme and the people a medical care act which was unacceptable to the medical profession.

Mr. Erb said the CCF and its successor, the New Democratic Party, conducted itself a "cult" abave all other parties in political morality, virtue and rectitude," but when their bluff was called "these paragons of virtue lose their saintly facade."

Health Minister A. E. Blakeney accused Mr. Erb of making "unwarranted slurs on the qualifications" of doctors practising under community clinics set up by citizen groups throughout the province.

And, Mr. Blakeney said, the record showed that Mr. Erb had in 1961, while introducing the original medical care bill, that it would in no way interfere with the relationship of doctors, the doctor-patient relationship and the quality of medical care.

"That's what I thought then," replied Mr. Erb, "but experience proved different.

Ottawa East Has Rift in Liberal Ranks

OTTAWA (CP)—A rift among Liberal supporters in Ottawa East widened Tuesday as a dissident group announced plans Tuesday for a nominating convention March 7 and the constituency association planned a separate meeting.

The possibility grew that two and perhaps three candidates will run as Liberals in the April 8 election.

The federal president of the association executive voted 8 to 3 to endorse MP J. T. Richard as Liberal candidate at a Tuesday evening convention.

The three dissidents, led by Treasurer Yves Patenaude, resigned and called for a convention. Mr. Parisien and Aime Forget on Tuesday announced Tuesday the formation of an "interim committee" to organize a nominating convention for March 7.

At the same time Horace Rainville, president of the constituency association, said his group will convene a general meeting, to elect a convention, within the next two weeks. He said he will announce the date and purpose of the meeting today.

At a press conference, Mr. Patenaude said he will seek the nomination at the March 7 convention and if selected, will run against Mr. Richard in the election.

Mr. Richard, 55-year-old lawyer, has represented the Ottawa French - speaking riding since 1945, when he defeated the then Liberal incumbent, J. A. Pinard. He said a nominating convention is not necessary since one was held only 10 months ago for the 1962 federal election and he is confident he will win a 9,000-vote margin over his nearest opponent.

A third aspirant announced last week he would seek the nomination. He is Bill Boa, 45, public relations director for the University of Ottawa and former vice-prersonident for The Canadian Press.

Ottawa Alderman David Deschler said he also is considering entering the race.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

If you Gallop-polled the 21,000-plus rabid Black Hawk fans who took the Chicago Stadium every Sunday night or thereabouts with the question, "Who is your choice for the next president?" they'd tell you "Stan Mikita." If you second-questioned them with "Who will win the Hart Trophy?" they would roar-chorus the same name.

With Bobby Hull in a first-half scoring slump it was the dark bellicose kid from Czechoslovakia who hoisted the Hawks into first-place contention and started them on their second-half drive for the National Hockey League championship.

Right now the flying Hawks are in the stretch heading for the title wire, led by the flaming Mikita whose prolific stick is spewing goals in a blaze of scoring.

Mikita, aided and abetted by Bobby Hull who has his 50 his scoring stride (20 goals in the last 15 games), and the goal-net roadblock Glenn Hall, has put the first NHL title in 37 years within grasp of the Hawks' hungry talons.

Their three-win twelve-goal surge of last week put them in front of the league pack by eight points and with eleven games to play. Thursday Mikita scored three goals and assisted on a fourth. Hull got the other pair. Saturday, he earned two assists. Sunday he banged home seven and helped on a fourth to take over the scoring lead. The starry centre was in on ten of the dozen goals fired by the Hawks.

The National League voters gave him second position for the Hart Trophy and the centre spot on the first all-star team in the first-half balloting. In the Hart voting he trailed Detroit's Terry Sawchuck by two voting points, led Gordie Howe by five, Glenn Hall by 14 and Frank Mahovlich by 18. Since then Sawchuk, who missed 17 games through injury has been placed out of the running.

Glenn Hall can win the Vezina Trophy but his Hart chances are slim. Mahovlich, who set a flaming pace in the first half, has declined considerably in the second half and his chances are also slim. Plante, Bathgate, Worsley, Pilote and Henri Richard in that order, also received first-half ballots but not enough to hook-up with second half performances.

But there's a big fella wearing the livery of the Detroit Red Wings, who poses as the most serious threat to Mikita's Hart Trophy aspirations. He is the versatile, brilliant Gordie Howe who if he wins the 1962-63 Hart Trophy will grab over five other trophies to make room for the sixth. And he could add a sixth Art Ross Trophy replica (scoring). He is very much in the running.

He has won these trophies more times than any other player. The big Hamilton Red Wing who will be 35 come March 31st, is having one of his best seasons, threatening to win his sixth scoring title and moving closer to "Rocket" Richard's all-time record of 544.

At an age when most players are figuring their pension take and eyeing retirement pastures, the Red Wing star is, like Ole Man River "jes rolling along," but at high speed and an inexhaustible fund of resources. The amazing part of it is, Howe has missed only 40 games in 17 season—only 18 in the last 14-years.

Someone asked the other day why Howe seems to avoid injury. The answer lies perhaps in a story that came out of Detroit. Howe, it says, is sensitive about one thing, although he doesn't discuss it, and it probably has something to do with his avoidance of injury. When he was 22, he almost lost his life in a playoff game due to a head injury, that required brain surgery. Since that time, he has allowed no player to come him around the head. The player who fools with him on this count is instantly paid off with physical rebuke which is why, every once in a while, he is charged with being a dirty player.

Nothing could be farther from the truth," the story goes. "There isn't a malicious bone in his body. But maliciousness on the part of opponents he never tolerates and it is why they hardly ever monkey with the big fellow."

Defeat Woodstock 5-0

Bulldogs Win Opener

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

It took a while for their power through the period and bow to show, but the league-champion Windsor Bulldogs broke up a close game with four third-period goals for a 5-0 victory over Woodstock Athletics in Windsor Tuesday night.

The win gave the powerful Bulldogs a 1-0 lead in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A best-of-seven series semi-final.

The high-scoring Bulldogs, who led the league with 260 goals over the season and placed nine players on the top eight scorers, carried a lead of only 1-0 into the final period on a goal by defenceman Jacques Begin.

But they fired their guns in the third, with defencemen Jerry Servias and Jack Costello rasping in early goals.

Begin picked up his second counter of the night midway

CRITICIZES CANUCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Czech trainer said today Canadian hockey teams competing in Czechoslovakia no longer merit the respect they used to in other years.

Professor V. Konis, chairman of the Czech Trainers' Council, was quoted by the news agency CTK as saying the Trail Smoke Eaters, the Canadian entry in this year's world hockey tournament:

"It is very possible that they have reserves of which we do not know. But we do know that the name 'Canada' does not warrant the same respect as before."

His first game at 1:46 of the second period after the referee blew the whistle so Marcon, called up from Pittsburgh Hornets of the American League as Young's defence replacement.

The penalty shot was the fourth awarded this season and the third to result in a goal. Toronto's Red Kelly and Bobby Rousseau of Montreal got the earlier ones.

MISS EXTRA MAN

Henry got his second when Rangers had seven players on the ice during a line change. But defenceman Doug Harvey, who drew an assist, jumped off the ice before the officials noticed the extra man.

The Red Wings suspended Y o u n g indefinitely Tuesday after he failed to show up for a player meeting.

"The move came at the end of a three-game suspension imposed by NHL president Clarence C a m p b e l l for Young's run-in with referee Frank Udvari in a game against Montreal Canadiens Feb. 17. The blowup netted Young 27 minutes in penalties and gave him an all - time league seasonal mark of 210 minutes.

Said Detroit coach Sid Abel: "We've bent over backwards to help Young numerous times but he has not shown any desire to help either the club or himself."

Liston 'Injury' A Mystery?

Sonny-Floyd Rematch Laid Over

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—After several days of sparring between promoters, managers, advisers, press agents and Sonny Liston, the ranked heavyweight championship fight between Liston and Floyd Patterson has been put off until Wednesday, April 10. It had been set for Thursday, April 4.

Before anyone suggested publicly the wrangling over a postponement might be a gambit to attract publicity, Liston's adviser, Jack Nilon, announced Tuesday:

"He pulled a muscle and we've got Kenny to prove it."

Liston, who has not made a public statement since the arguments over the fight began, said through a spokesman that he would resume training today. six days after he is reported to have injured his knee while swinging a golf club.

"No matter what anyone says, he wanted his fight on April 4 as originally scheduled," Nilson said.

FLORIO SCOFFS

Dan Florio, Patterson's chief trainer who is setting a camp at tropical race track, scoffed at Liston's injury.

"Everybody tells me what a superman this guy is supposed to be, that he's tough enough to read the comics can tell you that supermen don't injure their knees swinging golf clubs."

Al Bolan, general manager of Championship Sports Incorporated also looked askance at the knee injury. He says Nilon asked for the postponement out of spite, "and if he did, it was pretty stupid.

There have been rumors that Nilon and Championship Sports have been feeding since the last fight between Patterson and Liston that lasted less than three minutes and ended with Patterson on the canvas, a beaten champion.

It was reported Sunday that Liston hurt his knee while swinging a golf club for a photographer Thursday. However, reporters saw him work out the next day and said he seemed to be in no pain.

Softballers To-Meet On Sunday

The Belleville and District Softball League will hold it's initial meeting of the 1963 season this Sunday afternoon.

League Commissioner Cliff "Sonny" Belch has announced that the meeting will be held at Club Canara, beginning at 2.00 p.m.

All interested teams are asked to have a representative at the meeting and any other persons interested in the sport are also urged to attend.

It is hoped to get the league organized as early as possible. Four teams, Joyce Real Estate, Bobcats and Rollins Juniors, of Belleville and some RCAF Flyers played in the loop last season.

Rumors circulating in the city indicate that at least five or six entries are expected this year, including Picton and Trenton town entries.

Says Plate Should Be Widened

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Roger Craig, though strictly in the minority among the pitching fraternity, takes heated exception to the new baseball rule which enlarges the strike zone from the batter's armpits to the top of the shoulders.

"They're not doing me any favor," the 32-year-old right-hander of the National League New York Mets insisted Tuesday. "They helped the throwers, not pitchers. They've made the strike zone higher. They should have made it wider.

"They never gave any consideration to control pitchers like Bob Purkey, Lew Burdette and myself," protested the ex-Dodger whose high leg kick control last year made him the losingest in the majors.

Craig insisted instead that the plate be widened from its current 17 inches to 18 or 19 inches.

Yastrzemski Ready For Top

Red Sox 'Boy' Now A Man

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP)—Two years is a comparatively short time in baseball, but is the case of Carl Yastrzemski, those 24 months have transformed him from a boy into a man.

From a wide-eyed, frightened rookie he has grown into a full-blown major league star who understands and is willing to accept his role as the big gun of Boston Red Sox of the American League.

There's hardly a member of the Red Sox who doesn't think the 22-year-old outfielder is ready to take his place alongside such American League superstars as Mickey Mantle and Al Kaline.

"I hope I don't sound egotistical," said the personable young man with an engaging smile, "but I think I am ready for a big year.

"While I don't believe in making predictions, I think I'm capable of competing for batting title.

"I know that's a big order for a fellow who has yet to hit .300 in the big leagues. But I think I have matured. I am stronger. I have the experience and confidence. I'm no longer the scared kid who wondered whether I'd ever make good in the majors."

Yastrzemski has one other 1963 goal—to drive in 100 runs. He came close last year, knocking in 94 while hitting .296 in 160 games. The left-handed slugger from Southampton, N.Y., was the club leader in hits (191), doubles (43) and total bases (303).

TIGERS HOLD OUT

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Rocky Colavito, Norm Cash and Chico Fernandez, who combined for 96 home runs last season, were holdouts as Detroit Tigers opened spring baseball training Tuesday for their full squad. General Manager Jim Campbell came to terms with centerfielder Jim Bunton and outfielder Bob Farley just before the training session.

Lou Marcon, summoned from the minors by Detroit Red Wings as a replacement for Injured Howie Young, played Howie's role too well Tuesday night.

Marcon tripped Camille Henry of New York, resulting in a penalty shot goal that helped launch the Rangers to a 4-3 win in a National Hockey League game at Detroit.

It was the schedule's only game. There is another single game tonight, the league-leading Chicago Black Hawks against the third-place Maple Leafs in Toronto.

Henry wound up with three goals Tuesday night in the come-from-behind victory before 9,040 fans.

Rangers are 18 points behind Detroit with 11 games to play. The Red Wings have a game in hand in the struggle for the fourth and final playoff berth. New York spotted Detroit a pair of first-period goals. In the second period, the Red Wings got another and Henry rapped in his three.

SCHINKEL WINS IT

A goal by Ken Schinkel—his fourth of the season—set up by Andy Bathgate's pass, gave New York the edge at 13:21 of the third period.

The Detroit goal-getters were Gordie Howe, Bruce MacGregor and defenceman Bill Gadsby. It was No. 31 of the season for Howe and lifted him into a 65-point tie with Chicago's Stan Mikita for the individual scoring leadership.

Henry's three-goal effort gave him 27 for the campaign.

'Fifty Green Stamps' Away

Mantle Eyes $100,000 Circle

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—Mickey Mantle probably will join Willie Mays in the $100,000 salary class today.

The American League's most valuable player is expected to sign his new contract as New York Yankees officially open their spring training workouts.

Mantle, who checked into camp Tuesday a day ahead of schedule, received about $85,000 last season.

When asked about his contract negotiations with the club, the switch-hitter outfielder said:

"We're about 50 apart — 50 green stamps."

Whitey Ford was pitching batting practice when Mantle picked up a bat to take a few cuts. Swing right-handed against the southpaw's offerings, mighty Mickey laced three of Ford's first five serves over the fence.

If Mantle gets the contract he wants, he will move into select company. Only Joe DiMaggio, Stan Musial and Ted Williams reached the $100,000 class or more in previous years. Maye, San Francisco Giants' star, attained the ranks of the elite last Wednesday.

SPARES YANK DRIVE

Mantle, 31, was on the sidelines part of the 1962 season with a leg injury. Nevertheless, he played in 123 games and sparked the Yanks' pennant drive when he returned in the stretch. Mantle rounded up with a .321 batting average, 30 home runs and his third most valuable player award.

Roger Maris, the junior member of the M and M firm, was due in camp today. He is expected to sign in a day or so, but unlike Mantle, Maris faces a cut.

Maris extracted an estimated $68,000 contract last season after he 61 homers in 1961. But Roger's home run output dropped to 33 and he batted only .256 last year. He is reported to have been asked to take an $8,000 cut to around $60,000.

Vancouver Canucks rebounded into a tie for first place in the Western Hockey League Northern Division Tuesday night.

Playing at home before 4,164 fans, the Canucks edged Seattle Totems 3-2 to move even with the Totems at 55 points apiece.

Vancouver scoring was by Jim Hunt, Dave Duke and Jim Baird. Totems goal-getters were Jim Powers and Bill Macfarland.

Baseball Lures Grid Star

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tom Brown, a two-sport star at Maryland, was to leave for Pompano Beach, Fla., today after Washington Senators lured him away from professional football with an estimated $200,000 bonus.

Brown represents the first solid evidence that general manager George Selkirk meant what he said several weeks ago after a three-man local group bought control of the American League baseball team.

"Money is no object to developing players," Selkirk said. "We'll pay whatever bonuses it takes to get the talent we need. The people that own this ball club are very anxious to see Washington with a good ball club."

Brown is a slugging first baseman-outfielder in baseball and a top pass receiver and defensive back in football. He was the No. 2 draft choice of Green Bay Packers of the National Football League.

As a sophomore, the switch-hitting brown hit .325 for the Maryland baseball team. Last year he batted .469, highest average ever recorded in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

EPL Scoring

OTTAWA (CP) — Kingston Frontenacs left winger Don Blackburn scored five points last week to join teammate Jeannot Gilbert at the top of the Eastern Professional Hockey League scoring race.

League figures released Tuesday show Gilbert with 77 points on 31 goals and 46 assists. Blackburn is five points behind with 72. Last week Blackburn was in fourth place.

Marc Dufour of Sudbury Wolves is in third position with 71 points.

Murray Hall leads the league in assists with 48. The St. Louis playmaker also holds down fourth spot in the scoring with 70 points.

Gord Labossiere of Sudbury is in fifth place having 69 points. Billy Carter, assistant coach of the Ottawa Canadiens, is in sixth place with 66.

Gene Caron, the league's leading goal-getter with 40 goals, is in eighth spot. The rookie right winger has played 37 games with the St. Louis Braves.

City Hockey At Arena Tonight!

Welbanks and Trudeau Motors will be gunning for spots in the City Hockey League finals when they resume semi-final playoffs against Joyce-Rollins Combines and the Pepsi's at Memorial Arena tonight.

Welbanks edged Joyce-Rollins 4-3 while Trudeaus got a forfeit win over the Pepsi's in last weeks' best-of-three semi-final openers. Both Pepsi's and the Combines have vowed it will be different tonight, however, which should make the action that much more exciting.

The Pepsi's players are all abe more determined to oust Trudeaus than ever after last Wednesday's unfortunate incident. "We beat them all year and that's how we took first place" said one Pepsi's forward," and we certainly don't intend to wind up the season this quickly by losing the first round of the playoffs", he added.

Fitzee Dave Jones or "Shaker" Baker is expected to take over the coaching reigns, replacing the suspended Fiori Goegan.

Trudeaus in the meantime will be going all out to wrap up the series with a victory tonight. Word has it that big Verd Geyer, Ed Marineau, "Nobber" Day and of course the scoring twins, Gary Goyer and "Pug" Kellar, will be out in full force.

This series could develop into a rugged one before it's over, and tonight's meeting, at 7.45 should be a dandy.

Meanwhile, there's not much that can be said about the Welbanks-Combines series except that last Wednesday's game was one of the hardest-fought and most exciting of the season.

The game ended up with Joyce-Rollins using six attackers and pressing for the equalizer. The combines hope to have Bob Taylor and Ron Hull back tonight, confident that these two high scorers will make the difference, but Ray Lucas' Welbanks crew would like to end the series with another win this evening.

The game is scheduled for 9.15 and the hockey fan who likes his competition keen will not miss it.

BC Women Win 16-0

By FRANK SULLIVAN

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—It was fairly obvious Tuesday night that Ina Hansen of British Columbia was not happy to see her two-year, 13-game winning streak end in the Canadian women's curling championships.

It happened Tuesday afternoon. Tuesday night Mrs. Hansen and her Kimberley, B.C., rink rebounded with a vengeance to wallop Manitoba 16-0.

It was the first known shutout registered in any of the national curling championships—and they didn't bother playing the last two ends.

The B.C. gals—all of whom skip their own rinks at Kimberley—showed little mercy to Manitoba's Irene Burton. They counted three in each of the first two ends, four in the third, two in the fourth then kept plugging away with one in the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth ends.

The rink that raised the ire of Mrs. Hansen was a surprising foursome from Moncton, N.B., skipped by Mabel DeWare. Mrs. DeWare scored an upset 9-6 win over the defending champions from British Columbia in the fourth round.

THE FOR LEAD

Going into the sixth and seventh rounds of the round-robin competition today, British Columbia, New Brunswick and Alberta were tied for the lead with four wins and one loss apiece.

The competition ends Thursday with the eighth and ninth rounds unless there is a tie to force a playoff Friday.

Tuesday's was the toughest schedule of the four-day competition with three rounds.

Other fourth-round results: Quebec 13, Manitoba 5, Ontario 12, Newfoundland 4, Nova Scotia 16, Prince Edward Island 6, Alberta 10, Saskatchewan 7.

In other fifth-round games, Alberta edged Ontario 9-7, Saskatchewan edged Prince Edward Island 13-11, New Brunswick outclassed Newfoundland 10-4 and Quebec defeated Nova Scotia 13-10.

It left Ontario, Saskatchewan and Quebec tied behind the three leaders with 3-2 records, Nova Scotia next with two wins and three losses, Newfoundland and Manitoba 1-4 and Prince Edward Island winless in five starts.

The only New Brunswick loss was at the hands of Ontario veteran Mrs. Emily Woolley of Toronto in a thriller, Monday.

The Red Wings picked up their second one-goal victory in a row over the Black Hawks 4-3, last night and with the win captured the B.M.H.A. Midget championship.

Wings took the total goals series 10-8. Bob Percy, Rob Bateman, Gary Lucas and John Doran scored for the newly-crowned champs Lucas and Jim Shakelle picking up assists.

Jim Ling potted all three Hawk goals in a fine effort for the losers. Mike Sharland, Dennis Barragar and Ron Culloden earned assists.

Red Wings drew six of the game's ten penalties, including a misconduct to Steve LaMorre. The Hawks' Jim Meens was given a major penalty for intent to injure.

Maple Leafs nipped the Canadians 1-0 on a goal by G. Muldoon in an exhibition game.

SQUIRT

The Squirt finals got under way in both the "A" and "B" divisions last night with two close battles.

In the "A" finals, Macs defeated the Maple Leafs 3-1. A. Wilson scored two for the Macs and R. Pacepka one. B. Clements bagged the Leaf marker. The final game in this goals-to-count set will be played March 12.

Canadiens edged the Barons 3-2 in the opening game of the "B" finals, the second game of which will be played March 5.

G. Edwards, R. Woodley and P. Menary scored for the Canadiens with G. White and D. Lang triggering the Barons' goals.

Wolves Defeat Braves 8-5

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

When Sudbury Wolves of the Eastern Professional Hockey League were sponsored by the National League Detroit Red Wings last season, Dennis Kassian was one of their most important players.

But this year theyre not sponsored by Detroit—and they dont have Kassian.

After Tuesday nights game in Sudbury against St. Louis Braves, the Wolves—sponsored this year by New York Rangers —are probably wishing they had Kassian back.

Kassian scored three goals for the Braves, including two early in the third period which broke open a close game and sent the Wolves down to an 8-5 defeat.

Debbi Wilken Hurt In Practice

CORTINA, Italy (CP)—Canadian hopes of retaining the world figure - skating world championships for pairs faded today when doctors confined 16-year-old Deborah Wilkes to her bed after a fall from the shoulder of her partner Guy Ravell while posing for photographers on the ice.

She was taken to a hospital but was later discharged and put to bed at her hotel. Her coach, Bruce Hyland, said she was suffering from concussion and shock and was unlikely to be ready to take part in the world championships opening here Thursday.

"If she feels any better she may take a practice spin around the rink tomorrow when I expect to make a final decision. But I don't think she will be in a position to undertake anything as nerve-racking as a world championship so soon."

Miss Wilkes and Ravell, 21, are the North American pairs champions this year and expects here regarded them as strong contenders for the world title.

"They worked all year for this, but Debbi's health comes first," said Hyland. "We will not let her compete unless we are 100-per-cent certain she is all right."

Revell was holding the blue-eyed blonde above his head Monday when his skates slipped from under him. Miss Wilkes fell on the ice, striking her head.

HAS OTHER ENTRIES

Canada has two other pairs entries: Gertrude Desjardins and Maurice Lafrance of Toronto and Linda Ann Ward and Neil Carpeter of Galt, Ont.

The draw of skating order for pairs and compulsory paces of ice dance and men's and ladies' singles takes place tonight.

Czechoslovak veteran Karol Divin, 26, was sufficiently recovered from a sprained right instep to make an unexpected last-minute appearance to try for the world crown.

Before Divin's appearance it seemed as though the men's singles would be a two-man duel between French champion Alain Calmat, 22, and Canadian champion Donald McPherson, 17, of Stratford.

Goalie Gets Shutout On Bench

MONTREAL (CP)— Goalie Steve Bourke, 14, showed a profound disdain for the opposition's attack today in an outdoor hockey game pitting two bantam high school teams.

Steve was cold and left the game to sit on the bench with a blanket over him while play continued.

After five minutes or so he warmed up and the referee made him return to the ice.

In the meantime his Westmount High School mates prevented Baron Ryan's team from getting a single shot at the goal and preserved Steve's 6-0 shutout.

Flyers Clinch Top Spot

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Niagara Falls Flyers clinched first place in the Ontario Hockey Association provincial Junior A group with a convincing 7-2 victory over the last-place Guelph Royals Tuesday night.

The Flyers increased their lead to six points over Montreal junior Canadiens, who have only two games left after losing 4-1 to Peterborough Petes Tuesday night.

The Petes solidified their claim on third place by going three points up in Hamilton Red Wings. Both teams have three games left.

In Niagara Falls Tuesday night the Flyers coasted over the hapless Royals behind two goal efforts by Don Awrey, Gary Harmer and Ted Snell.

Captain Terry Crisp fired the other Flyer marker, while Wayne Maxner came up with two assists to open an eight-point bulge over Hamilton's Pit Martin in the scoring race.

COUNTS IN FINALE

With the game out of reach, Guelph scored both goals in the final period. Billy Taylor scored on a power play and Sandy Fitzpatrick hit for the final Royal tally.

Gary Sabourin of the Royals and Niagara Falls Billy Glasban were each given match penalties in the second period for a stick-swinging session.

In Peterborough, the Petes exploded with three goals in the final period to break a tie and knock the Canadiens out of the pennant race.

George Woodson fired what proved to be the winner with less than five minutes left, then assisted on the clincher by Drake Jopling nine seconds later. Ron Naud wrapped it up by scoring in an open net in the last minute.

Montreal had taken a 1-0 lead on a goal by Norm Dennis before the game was two minutes old, but Don Herriman fired the equalizer midway through the first period.

In Metro Toronto Junior A action, the first-place Toronto Neil McNeil Maroons scored a 5-1 victory over Toronto Knob Hill. Oshawa Generals upset the second-place Toronto Marlboros 4-3. At Whitby, the Dunlops tied Brampton 4-4.

Referees Threaten Strike Action

ALGIERS (AP)—Refereeing football games has become one of the most dangerous professions in Algeria. The referees are threatening to strike.

Two referees had to go to hospital after games Monday. In one match, between Belcour and St. Eugene, suburbs of Algiers, the referee was beaten by fans after he allowed a penalty kick and sent two players off the field. The same thing happened in Cherchell.

As Simple As This, Says Casey

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—Manager Casey Stengel of New York Mets explains baseball's new strike zone in utmo Stengelese:

"If you ain't a high-ball hitter it should help the pitcher, that is if you're a batter and weak on the high ball. If you're a pitcher who's wild it should help.

"It don't mean it's wider. It means it's longer up and down. Far as the plate is concerned it's not any longer. It's just vertically.

"If you're a low-ball pitcher, it didn't change the low ball. Maybe it helps some pitchers who walk men. Maybe it makes them a strike better off.

"I don't know what's behind it. I didn't change it. They must have had four, five reasons. Whether it was the pitchers who were kicking or the hitters who were kicking.

"The umpires will hold several meetings and you can judge it better after they hold them. It might take 'em 30 days to get more positive. Ye till the truth, I hate to talk about it because I'm not positive I can help anyone."

Sasky Fans Name Own Pay Terms

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders this year are letting season ticket purchasers name their own prepayment plan terms.

The Western Football Conference club hopes to have vouchers for season tickets available in more than 300 business establishments in the city by the end of next week.

Under the new purchase plan, a season ticket buyer, for a minimum down payment of $2.50, can obtain a voucher saying he is buying a season ticket.

From then on, the size and frequency of payments on the season tickets is up to the buyer.

SANFORD ENDS HOLDOUT

CASA GRANDE, Ariz. (AP)—Pitcher Jack Sanford, who won 24 games for San Francisco Giants in their 1962 National League pennant - winning season, ended a brief holdout Tuesday and agreed to a contract calling for an estimated $37,000. Sanford's agreement left first baseman Orlando Cepeda as the only serious holdout among the Giants.

TV Viewers in Nigeria To Have Exciting Week

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—This is an exciting week for the television viewers of Nigeria. They will see their favorite star—Dick Tiger, the local boy who retained his world middleweight boxing championship Saturday night in a draw with Gene Fullmer. Eight films will be shown on the country's one station.

Robert Myers, a vice-president of NBC International, currently is stationed in the African country, helping the Nigerian government establish a television facility. At the moment it consists of the station and some boosters to carry programs to three provinces—and a total of about 10,000 sets.

But even so, Nigerian tastes this early in the experiment in mass communication follow a familiar pattern. Next to Tiger (whose previous fight, shown a few days later on the station, sold a lot of TV sets) the most popular programs are reruns of our own best-loved shows, like Gunsmoke and Rawhide.

Children adore/any cartoon program: And everybody is fascinated by sports—most of all football—but Myers is going to try some baseball soon.

His big concern is developing live, local programs with native performers. There are shows on home-making, health, and education. Women, he said, really go for talks about fashion and cosmetics.

In fact, it all rather sounds like early American television.

Recommended tonight:
Self-Portrait, premiere, CBS, 7:30-8 EST—Presidential Press Secretary Pierre Salinger is interviewed in the first of a new series.

CBQ Program Highlights

WEDNESDAY

2.30—Country Junction — The music of the folk, western and country recording stars.
7.05—The Mind — Mind and news from the Quinte District Secondary Schools.
8.30—"The Lark" — Joan of Arc faces inquisitors at her trial for heresy and re-lives the events leading to her martyrdom. An adaption by Joseph Schull of "The Lark" by Anouilh.

THURSDAY

8.10—Sports — With Jack Devine
10.15—Round the Bay — Council Events Bulletin Board.
12.15—Noon Hour News.
2.03—Trans Canada Matinee — Featuring a wide-ranging weekly menu with 3 minute talks on medicine in the home will be heard featuring Dr. Murray M. Fisher.
7.20—Count Down — For the teens, with music, interviews with show personalities and reports from the world of the younger generation.

BOXING MAN DIES

CHICAGO (AP)—William J. (Pep) Kerwin, 68, veteran boxing announcer for the Illinois State Athletic Commission, died Tuesday. Kerwin suffered a stroke Oct. 1. A veteran of more than 34 years as announcer for the commission, he also was active in the Catholic Youth Organization.

NOMINATED FOR OSCAR — These five leading actors and actresses have been nominated for the Motion Picture Academy's 35th annual Oscar award as best actor and actress of 1962. Actors are: Peter O'Toole for his role in "Lawrence of Arabia," Burt Lancaster in "Bird Man of Alcatraz," Marcello Mastroianni in "Divorce — Italian Style," Jack Lemmon in "Days of Wine and Roses" and Gregory Peck in "To Kill a Mockingbird." Actresses are: Lee Remick for her role in "Days of Wine and Roses," Anne Bancroft in "The Miracle Worker," Geraldine Page in "Sweet Bird of Youth," Bette Davis in "What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?" and Katharine Hepburn in "Long Day's Journey into Night." The Oscar awards will be announced April 8. (CP Photo from AP).

Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gordie Howe scored one goal in Detroit's 4-3 loss to New York Rangers Tuesday night and became the National Hockey League's first player to pass the 30-goal level this season.

Howe's 31st goal also shot him into a tie for the league scoring championship with Stan Mikita of Chicago. Both have 65 points, but Howe ranks ahead because of his superior goal production.

Andy Bathgate of New York collected one assist and moved up a notch, into a third-place tie with Chicago's Bobby Hull and Boston's Johnny Bucyk at 61 points. There were no other changes in the big seven list.

The leaders:

| | G | A | Pts |
|---|---|---|---|
| Howe, Detroit | 31 | 34 | 65 |
| Mikita, Chicago | 28 | 37 | 65 |
| Hull, Chicago | 29 | 31 | 61 |
| Bathgate, New York | 28 | 33 | 61 |
| Bucyk, Boston | 24 | 37 | 61 |
| Oliver, Boston | 22 | 38 | 60 |
| Beliveau, Montreal | 15 | 44 | 59 |

REDS ROAST COACHES

MOSCOW (AP)—Izvestia has let go an icy blast at Soviet coaches for the poor showing by Russian men speed skaters in the world title competition at Karuizawa, Japan, last weekend. The government newspaper scolded the coaches for lagging behind in training methods and for "small intrigues" among themselves.

AT THE PARK — Seroulkan warriors band together for conquest and prepare for an attack on the unarmed country dwellers in Atlas, in color, which starts at the Park Theatre on Thursday. On the same program "First Space Ship to Venus", in color. Both attractions are first showings. Complete shows 7.00 p.m. and 8.40 p.m.

Pays Actor to Diversify In These Perilous Times

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Actors, like corporations, have found that it pays to diversify in these perilous times.

A large, living example of this economic theory is Walter Slezak. He has financed the upkeep of his comfortable girth by branching out into two new fields with success that equals his achievements as an actor.

Slezak elaborated on his two new careers while on a brief visit to film a Rawhide segment for television. He came from the set for lunch wearing a middle - European gypsy costume.

"That is not the only anachronism, he said over his Cantonese lunch: "In the show which is set in 1870, I am playing a Brahms rhapsody which was written in 1876.

The plot has the Rawhide boys coming across a gypsy caravan lost in the west, and I suspect that no one takes it seriously. Least of all Slezak, who maintains a lighthearted view of almost everything. And why not, when everything he touched seems to turn golden.

BOOK AN ACCIDENT

Take his book, What Time's the Next Swan? It happened by accident, when Jean Kerr replayed some Slezak jokes to Ken McCormick, chief of Doubleday. The two men had lunch one-day and discussed a possible book. At the end, McCormick wrote out a cheque for $5,000 and told the actor to start writing.

Many actors have tried their hands at books, ghosted or otherwise (Slezak used none). He has achieved the rare distinction of producing a bona fide best seller. The book already has sold 60,000 copies.

"It is an entirely different world, the book business, he said. "I am amazed at how polite everyone is. Even when they ask for changes in your manuscript—I had only one, a joke about Albert Einstein that didn't come off — they are polite.

What Time's the Next Swan? is a delightful book, but it no doubt received a push toward best-sellerdom by Slezak's other new line: lecturing.

"I had 51 lectures in all parts of the country last year and was booked solid in October, November and December, he remarked. "I am utterly shameless about plugging my book during my lectures.

Astrological Forecast

For February 23
By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Where money is concerned, be very practical. Remember, you could lose friends by being over-generous. Plan for creative work, figuring new ways of communicating ideas.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Need to take definite action today in carrying out program. No more delay, especially if connection with conditions nearby. Start from bottom — with "spring cleaning."

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Help can be obtained within family circle. Keep mind open to constructive suggestions. Temptation is to delay, hope for the best. Take course that suggests quick solution.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Say yes to added responsibility. Chance to advance, earn more, indicated ahead. Could be display of "fair-weather friendship." Be alert, selective, discriminating, but push forward.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Don't try to "fight city hall." Accept orders for a time. But take menial notes for future use. Seek ways of improving your position. Later, right people will listen.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Better to postpone long journeys if at all possible. More appropriate time for travel ahead. Exercise independence of thought, action. Strive for originality. Don't follow the "mob."

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Some past actions may come home to roost. Maintain sense of humor—and honor. Fulfill obligations, promises. If you have learned from experience, be grateful. Review future prospects.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Today be sure your words are understood. Be specific so that others cannot misquote you. Postpone borrowing, lending. Good for plans to be carried out later.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Some may come to you with their troubles. Be patient and a good listener. But don't become too involved personally. Encourage independence and self-reliance in others.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Misunderstandings could arise among friends. Better to remain neutral. Temptation is to "fly off handle." Curb it! The less you say in anger, the better. Time is on your side.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Humorous approach best. Emphasize light touch. Attend to details early, especially where business and family matters are concerned. Be frank, honest in expressing opinions.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Being opinionated could prove embarrassing. Mood changes quickly today. Be ready to reverse course. Don't be afraid to admit mistakes. Better to change your mind than to compound errors.

If today is your birthday . . . you are self-reliant and quite willing to suffer rather than ask for help. You accept challenging conditions.

• • •

General Tendencies: Obstacles, battles, deceptions feature day. Those who shout loudest may be the least sincere.

Want the "right time of day"...from your watch?

Your watch deserves periodic checkups, cleaning and attention to needed repairs. Our expert service will keep it in tip-top condition! Come in soon for a free estimate . . . our prices are modest.

Windsor Doctor, Family Going to Central India

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Dr. Arnold Carter and his family like to live dangerously.

The family of six will leave Windsor during the next few weeks and travel about 12,000 miles to the rugged jungle country of central India.

Dr. Carter and his wife will work in one of the areas of the world where leprosy is prevalent, and they will live in an area where tuberculosis is widespread, and malnutrition and intestinal worms are common ailments of the natives.

The four boys will board at a school in Mussourie, northern India, about 200 miles from the Indian - Chinese border. From the windows of their classroom on the side of a mountain 400 feet above their residence, they will see the rugged mountains of Tibet to the north, and the Ganges Valley to the south.

The Windsor couple will be two of six Canadians working at the hospital which serves an area 100 miles in diameter.

"We have always had a notion we would like to do work of this kind," Dr. Carter said, "and we began to make inquiries a year ago."

The four boys, Thomas 12; Robert, 10; James, 9, and William, 7, have been preparing for months for the trip. "They would be very disappointed if we didn't go," their father said.

The family has eight oil drums in which to pack their bedding, clothing, dishes and books that will be needed for the two-year stay. A large quantity of research books has been donated by local doctors.

The mission hospital is supported by the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Medical associates here have planned a departure party for the doctor and his family, and a special service of recognition was held Feb. 24 at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church here.

Attendance Awards Given At Lions Meet

CAMPBELLFORD — The regular meeting of the Campbellford Lions Club was held on Wednesday evening in the ROOF hall with Ray MacKinnon in the chair.

The highlight of the evening was the presentation of perfect attendance awards to a number of members who have set records in attending club functions. The following were the recipients:

For one year, D. J. Hughes, Robert Thompson, Ray Sharpe; for two years, William MacSeeney, Tony Caule; for three years, Morley Tanner; for four years, William MacSeeney; for seven years, William Oliver, Harry Cubitt, and for eight years, Joseph Poulton.

Plans were finalized for the annual carnival under club sponsorship which will be held on July 19th and 20th. A new type ferris wheel will feature the rides of this carnival. The revolutionary new addition to the carnival is expected to cost in excess of $100,000 and should be a great attraction to both youngsters and oldsters.

The club also plans an auction sale for mid-August similar to the one held in the summer at the Lions' beach which proved popular. Articles of furniture, hockery, decorations, appliances, tools will be solicited through the town during the early summer and a mammoth sale is anticipated.

The regular business meeting included reports from committees and included the voting in of three new members to the club.

Plans were finalized for an inter-club meeting to Frankford on February 25th, when the Campbellford visitors will present a cheque in of $10 to the Frankford club for the arena there which was recently destroyed by fire.

Following the meeting a pleasant social hour was spent in progressive euchre.

Mantle Signs For $100,000

Mantle's 1963 pay is about $15,000 more than he reportedly received last year.

He was named the American Leagues' most valuable player and led the Yanks to the pennant despite a series of crippling injuries.

Three other greats of the game earned $100,000 in one season. They were Joe DiMaggio, the old Yankee Clipper, Ted Williams of Boston Red Sox and Stan Musial of St. Louis Cardinals.

Yankee officials in a statement signed by co-owner Dan Topping and General Manager Roy Hamey, said they were glad to pay Mantle $100,000 and hoped that other Yankees in the future would be worth as much.

Artists Don't Have to Starve Says Winnipeg Boy, 19, Painting Since a Child

By KEN CLARK

ARTISTS SHOULDN'T STARVE — Tall and talkative Winnipeg artist Barry Burdeny, shown with one of his industrial sketches, takes a business-like approach to his work. "Artists don't have to starve," says the 19-year-old painter who has already earned nearly $2,000 from his work. He thinks abstract art is a farce. (CP Photo)

WINNIPEG (CP) — An outspoken young artist who says abstract art is a farce uses the hard sell to make money with brush and pen.

"You've got to be a businessman these days," says 19-year-old Barry Burdeny. "Artists don't have to starve."

Tall, lanky and talkative, Barry began painting at six "when I got into my father's paints," and sold his first work at 11.

That year he made $300 in the summer selling water-colors to landscape dealers on homemade wooden plaques to motels and stores in rural Manitoba.

Landscapes are still his forte. All told the bespectacled youth has done 200 oil paintings and 150 pen-and-ink sketches.

He has a certain fondness for industrial sketches — "because they sell so well" but hopes in time to reach the stage where he can avoid strictly commercial work because "I don't want people to tell me how to paint."

His realistic sold eight sketches of the Poole-Pritchard oil company gas processing station in Manitoba to the firm for $20 apiece. The $2,000,000 plant is at Falcon Lake, a resort community 70 miles east of Winnipeg where Burdeny lives with his parents.

An only son, Barry accompanies his father, a contractor—on building jobs through Manitoba, painting and drawing on the way.

Always with an eye for a market, Burdeny in 1961 sold four oil landscapes to an insurance firm for $800 for wall decoration.

A 50-square-foot mural he did has done 200 oil paintings and hangs in a Gypsumville beer parlor. He got $500 for that one.

He's taking French by correspondence this winter to complete Grade 12 so he can enrol in fine arts at the University of Manitoba next September.

Subjects of his paintings are always recognizable, although photographic likeness. In college he'll "try to stay away from that abstract stuff" which, he says, offends the eye with an "array of sickly colors."

Barry also has a longtime picks up fossils in his travels around the province.

In winter he curls second on a rink in the Falcon Lake community centre. His father Adam plays third.

No shrinking violet, Barry says his immediate problem is to "get recognized." He finds his youth is against him.

"People don't give you a chance," he said cheerfully. "They're inclined to pat you on the head and say wait until you grow up."

He says the best way to gain recognition is to have a one-man exhibit but "people in authority in Winnipeg seem to feel you should starve" first. "Starving makes you a preferred risk."

MOUNTAIN CRASH — Wreckage of a two-engine aircraft which carried four men to their deaths was found Wednesday about 60 miles southwest of Calgary. Killed were the pilot and the player, coach and trainer of a three-member CBC television crew. (CP Wirephoto)

CBC to Carry Film Feature as Tribute To Men Who Died Shooting Last Scenes

CALGARY (CP)—A film feature for which three CBC employees were gathering material when they died in a plane crash near here will be carried on television as a tribute to its production crew.

Norman Caton, 40, Len MacDonald, 34, and Charles Reigler, 31, all of Toronto, were id nortern Alberta shooting the final sequences for an outdoors feature when their twin-engine aircraft crashed into a hillside, killing all aboard.

The Apache aircraft was reported missing Monday and was found Wednesday. The pilot was William John Prentice, 37, of Calgary.

Tom Benson, executive producer of the Camera Canada program for which the feature was being prepared, said the story will be presented on the CBC network as scheduled May 27.

He said the crew, with Caton as producer-director, MacDonald as cameraman and director of photography and Reigler as assistant cameraman, worked on the film several months.

Officials said film found at the crash scene about 70 miles southwest of here may document the last moments of the flight, made to photograph elk herds.

An extensive search for the twin-engine plane ended when pilot George Kelly of Calgary sighted the wreckage.

The plane apparently had burned along the slope of the tree. The wing tip, torn from the plane, came to rest in saplings 20 feet from the wreck.

Queen Moves On to Sydney For 2-Day Visit

BY NICHOLAS TURNER

HOBART, Australia (Reuters) Queen Elizabeth set sail today for Sydney after completing a two-day visit to the island state of Tasmania during which she witnessed the spectacular Royal Hobart Regatta.

Some 100,000 persons turned out for the regatta, described by local boosters as the biggest sporting event in the southern hemisphere.

The Queen and Prince Philip showed lively interest in the yachting, rowing, swimming, diving and other events staged in a strong wind and choppy seas which capsized several yachts.

At an official luncheon the Queen said: "There is nothing more entertaining than being with people who are having a wonderful time."

The royal couple sailed from Hobart on the royal yacht Britannia escorted by hundreds of small craft on a two-day voyage to the Australian mainland.

Age-Old Battle to Wrest Living From Land Unaffected by Strife

TOWANG, India (AP)—A battle persists in India's North East Frontier Agency, though the Communist Chinese invaders have withdrawn and the Indian troops they routed have never returned.

It's the age-old battle of a simple, pastoral people to wrest an existence from grain fields and herds in the high Himalayas.

In miniature it's the pounding of grease from wet raw wool by a plaided Monpa woman squatting beside a white stone fountain in this 350-year-old Buddhist monastery town.

This "philosophy of NEFA," like the Indian defence policy that proved inadequate, now is being questioned. If and when India might set up a military shield around the territory, it may institute changes to speed up the process of modernization.

Most people were scarcely touched by the ebb and flow of battle. Hundreds who, invader and defender alike, panted for help in the thin, cold air. Towang is two miles high.

Militarily the agency area is in much the same state.

Perhaps a hundred miles separate the opposing armies.

The battered Indian army is rebuilding in the area of Tezpur, a city in the flatlands of Assam state 90 miles southeast of Towang.

Peking pulled back its units under a unilateral cease-fire order. India denounced the terms Red China proposed for a settlement by negotiation, foreseeing a heavy loss of territory on the Ladakh front in the west. That issue still is unresolved.

Liberal Leader Sees Hard Decisions to Clean Up Mess

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lester Pearson says a Liberal government will have to make some unpleasant decisions to "clean up the mess we are going to inherit" after the April 8 election.

Heading from Quebec into the Atlantic provinces, the Liberal leader declared:

"A government that is worth its salt is not afraid to take unpleasant decisions in the light of the public interest."

He pledged direct action to stimulate the economy and to cut more to work—including steps to raise the Atlantic provinces up to the employment and income level of the rest of Canada.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Diefenbaker headed by train into the West, where the other two party leaders—New Democrat T. C. Douglas and Social Credit Robert Thompson—are already actively campaigning.

Mr. Douglas, speaking at Beausejour, Man., promised that an NDP government would establish a co-operative development fund to help farmers own and run processing and packaging plants to handle farm products.

Now seeking farm votes, Agriculture Minister Hamilton told a Moose Jaw meeting that he must western farmers to grow 1,100,000,000 bushels of grain to meet export commitments.

In Red Deer, Alta., Social Creditor Thompson flayed the Liberals, saying that they weren't interested in passing leg-

Interpol Called in to Hunt For Stolen Boylen Jewels

TORONTO (CP) — Interpol, the international police agency, has been called into the hunt for $411,455 worth of diamond and sapphire jewelry stolen from the home of millionaire financier Matthew J. Boylen.

Insp. Harold Hodgson, who heads a special squad assigned to investigate Monday nights robbery from the Boylen mansion, said Interpol has been asked to circulate a description of the jewelry collection since "there's no way of telling right now" whether it had already been smuggled out of Canada.

A total of $15,000 in rewards have been offered for information about the robbery, in which four masked gunmen forced their way into the Boylen home, slugged the mining promoter's son and ransacked the house.

Police said the gunmen apparently knew about a last-minute change of plans that took Mr. and Mrs. Boylen on holiday to Florida instead of to New York, a change that even their son was not aware of.

Meanwhile, Mr. Boylen apologized for statements in which he criticized Toronto police staff" with the theft and with being responsible...for 90 per cent of crime in Canada.

May Hold Red Summit Meet To Explore Split in Front

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Premier Khrushchev's latest pronouncements in the interminable dialogue with Communist China may mean a Peking-Moscow meeting to explore the painful split in the world Communist front.

This does not mean the rift is closing, but rather that Khrushchev considers it time to remove the war of words from public view and make it less bitter.

In his attempt to accomplish this, Khrushchev has applied the soft answer to turn away Chinese wrath.

Only hours after Peking broadcast a bitter blast, demanding an apology for his attitude in the quarrel over how world communism is to be advanced, Khrushchev replied with notable mildness.

He reminded the Chinese—and all those who side with Peking — that Moscow is strong enough to go to their aid should they be in danger. He said he would be willing to go to the aid of any Communist country attacked by "the imperialists" — but his words were singled out by name Cuba, Red China, North Viet Nam, North Korea and East Germany.

SIDE WITH PEKING

The Communist parties of North Viet Nam and North Korea side with Peking in the quarrel. They support the Chinese contention that Khrushchev fears paper tigers and thus sacrifices opportunities for communism to advance swiftly, particularly in the backward areas of Latin America, Asia, Africa and the Middle East.

The Chinese claim Khrushchev showed this weakness last October by agreeing to withdraw Soviet missiles from Cuba after the Kennedy blockade showdown.

Khrushchev again defended his peaceful coexistence policy as the only sensible policy in the nuclear age. By this he means that the war against capitalism will go on by means short of risking nuclear conflict.

ARNAZ TO MARRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Desi Arnaz Jr. will celebrate his 46th birthday Saturday by marrying vivacious, redhaired Mrs. Edith Hirsch. Mrs. Hirsch returned Tuesday from Juarez, Mex., where she obtained a Mexican divorce from Clement Hirsch, millionaire sportsman and racing stable owner. Arnaz was formerly married to Lucille Ball.

Canada Never Committed to Nuclear Arms

- - Green

WINNIPEG (CP) — External Affairs Minister Green says Canada had never committed itself to accept nuclear arms for its forces in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

He told a press conference Wednesday that Liberal claims about such a commitment were false.

Mr. Green, here to address a Progressive Conservative nominating convention, refused to be drawn into a debate on the party's election campaign issues. He said the Liberals "got themselves in a mess" on the nuclear arms issue when they suddenly made up their minds that Canada has a lot of commitments.

At home, he said, Prime Minister Diefenbaker made it clear in June, 1961, that the RCAF would have a conventional role.

Mr. Green said there is a lot of Liberal talk about Canada's prestige declining abroad by not accepting nuclear weapons for NATO and "this is a lot of eyewash."

He said there is a strong feeling in Quebec against possession of nuclear weapons and predicted the Liberals "will lose a lot of seats" there.

Mr. Green admitted Canada has "one or two serious problems" with the United States but at the same time Canada is the best friend the U.S. has.

He said a loss of support for the Progressive Conservative party from some eastern newspapers could be "a blessing." People came to Mr. Diefenbaker's side when he was "so unfairly and unfairly attacked."

LIBERAL PLANS FOR MARITIME AID OUTLINED

Pearson on Tour, Enters Nova Scotia

FREDERICTON (CP) — Liberal Leader Pearson heads for Nova Scotia today on the second day of a swing through the Maritimes in his campaign for the April 8 federal election.

Mr. Pearson, who spoke here and in Moncton Wednesday, will address a reception at nearby Moncton and a public meeting at Milford, N.S., before traveling to Halifax.

In two speeches Wednesday, he emphasized earlier predictions of "unpleasant decisions" the Liberals will face and "the mess we are going to inherit" if elected.

"We will have to get things in order . . . It's going to be a difficult thing to do," he told a Moncton luncheon attended by about 300 party workers.

"We'll have to take decisions and some of them won't be very pleasant ones. But a government that is worth its salt is not afraid to take unpleasant decisions if it has to."

NOT SOFT SOLUTIONS

He proposed solutions to several problems of the Atlantic region at a Fredericton nominating convention, but stated: "I have said there are no soft solutions and apply this to your problems here in the Atlantic area."

No Compulsion On Student To Attend

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Supreme Court was told Wednesday that a ban on devotional exercises in public schools would open a Pandora's box of litigation to remove every vestige of our religious heritage" from public life.

At issue before the court is the constitutionality of Bible reading and recitation of the Lord's prayer at the opening of schools in Maryland and Pennsylvania.

The first of the session was devoted to an appeal by a Baltimore mother and her 16-year-old son who describe themselves as atheists.

Leonard J. Kerpelman, counsel for Mrs. Madalyn E. Murray and her son, William, said the youth was spat upon, assaulted and subjected to schoolboy and teacher sanctions because he chose to walk out of religious exercises, as permitted by board rule. The Murrays, Kerpelman said, were entitled to protection from such injury.

Francis B. Burch and George W. Baker Jr., Baltimore city solicitors, said the board rule there is no constitutional violation so long as there is no compulsion on the student to attend the morning exercise.

Johnson Unhurt As Reds Riot

SANTO DOMINGO (Reuters) Vice-President Lyndon B. Johnson escaped unhurt when pro-Communist Venezuelan demonstrators clashed Wednesday with police at an armed forces parade in this Dominican Republic city.

The clash occurred near a grandstand where a President John Bosch and foreign dignitaries including Johnson and Venezuelan President Romulo Venezuela were reviewing the parade.

Police using rifle butts quickly broke up the demonstration by supporters of the pro-Communist Venezuelan Liberation Front.

Johnson, Betancourt and the other dignitaries were then escorted from the reviewing stand.

The recent seizure of the Venezuelan freighter Anzoategui while on a voyage to Houston, Tex., was carried out by members of the same pro-Communist rebel organization.

British Polaris Arrangements Are Going Well

Great Strides Made Toward Final Accord

WASHINGTON (AP) — The navy's Polaris boss said today British - U.S. negotiators have made "enormous strides" in working out arrangements for creating a British missile firing submarine force.

The talks should be wrapped up in about a week or 10 days, Rear-Admiral Ignatius J. Galantin told The Associated Press.

Galantin, a principal figure in the talks, disclosed that British naval experts had "started out with the idea that they could save money by building smaller subs with fewer missiles than the American version.

But, Galantin said, "we were able to point out to the British that they could save only about five per cent of the cost by limiting their submarines to eight Polaris missiles rather than 16.

This is because certain vital and expensive fire control, navigation and other special equipment would have to be mounted in the submarines regardless of the number of missiles.

The British will start with four submarines, Galantin said, and "we don't know whether they will go beyond four or not."

USE U.S. FACILITIES?

The technical talks now are revolving around the question of whether the British will use American training, test and other facilities or whether they will provide their own.

The Polaris chief said "studies will show that the most economical" course would be for the British to contract with the United States to train crews and to use missile firing ranges like that off Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Galantin said that the fire control gear and other special equipment would be sold to the British for what it costs the United States.

However, he said that Britain is spared the huge research and development expenses and the costs of tooling up for production of such equipment.

Prime Minister Macmillan said last month that Britain has decided to buy the most advanced Polaris missile—a 2,880-mile range weapon—for its subs. It will pay an additional five per cent of the production price as a share of the research costs.

However, he said that Britain would be able to buy the existing shorter range Polaris missiles at production prices without any contribution to the $2,000,000,000 already spent by the U.S.

AGRICULTURAL PROBLEMS TOPIC IN LEGISLATURE

Liberal Says Dept. 'Dismal Failure'

TORONTO (CP) — Agriculture problems occupied the Ontario legislature Wednesday with one Liberal member criticizing the "dismal failure" of the provincial agriculture department in informing urban people of farm difficulties.

Farquhar Oliver (L — Grey South) said this has resulted in "misunderstanding and misinformation all along the line."

Premier Robarts, in a statement preceding debate of the department's spending estimates, said that plans for developing a university around the three agricultural colleges at Guelph have been assigned to the province's advisory committee on university affairs for a report on the mechanics of setting up the university.

In another farming development Agriculture Minister Stewart announced his department hopes to sponsor a conference in the near future to discuss the possibility of increasing workmen's compensation benefits for farm workers.

Former Envoy Dies in Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—George Longley Magone, who served as Canadian ambassador in Greece and Switzerland before retiring from the foreign service in 1957, died Tuesday.

A native of Toronto, Mr. Magone was ambassador to Greece from 1949 to 1954, to Switzerland from 1954 to 1957 and minister to Austria during the same period.

After working in his father's lumber business, he had joined the external affairs department in 1941, first as an attache at the Canadian Embassy in Washington and subsequently as counsellor at embassies in Paris and Washington.

He headed the Canadian delegation to the International Refugee Organization in Geneva in 1950.

Green Thinks Pro-Nuclear Stand By Liberals May Give PCs Victory

WINNIPEG (CP)— External Affairs Minister Green says the Liberal party's pro-nuclear stand may have handed the Progressive Conservatives an April 8 federal election "on a silver platter."

Mr. Green said a statement recently released by the United States state department helped the Liberals in confusing Canadians about the country's nuclear arms policy. The state department release commented on Canada's attitude toward providing nuclear arms for Canadian armed forces.

Mr. Green said the Liberals had taken their pro-nuclear stand "after talking the same way I talked for years."

The contention that Canada was not living up to its commitments, was a Liberal bogey designed to replace the bogey of the last election, which was that "Canada is going to the dogs."

Quoting from parliamentary records, Mr. Green said Prime Minister Diefenbaker, at the time Canada decided to use Voodoo jets for continental defence, had said they would be armed with conventional warheads.

With the Bomarc missiles, the external affairs minister said, "it doesn't matter" Canada would make her own decision on how they should be armed."

"I don't know," he said, discussions are being held on a multilateral nuclear force.

"I don't know whether it will be possible. A decision will have to be taken eventually on Canada's position in such a policy. That position now is in a state of flux.

"Never forget one thing—decisions for Canadians must be made in Canada."

PRIME MINISTER STARTS WEST TO OPEN CAMPAIGN

Will Make Whistle Stops Along Way

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker left by train early today on his 5½ - week election campaign tour, starting in low key and, low temperatures.

Mr. Diefenbaker boarded a special car on the CNR's transcontinental train bound for Winnipeg and his home constituency of Prince Albert in Saskatchewan, whistle-stopping en route through Northern Ontario communities of Capreol, Foleyet, Hornepayne, Longlac and Nakina.

The Progressive Conservative leader, travelling aboard his private railway car with a small corps of speech - writers and research assistants, will not make his campaign officially until Monday evening at a rally in Winnipeg.

But he starts hand-shaking today in Capreol, where the winter temperature is expected to be far below zero, and where railway workers and others will be just on their way to work at 8:22 a.m. EST, the train's scheduled time of arrival.

Mr. Diefenbaker, who recovered from being made a Freeman of the City of London, spent Wednesday at his residence gathering campaign material while his staff loaded typewriters and files aboard the private car and another hired by the Conservatives for their use.

A third car was provided for reporters. All will be hitched to the regular CNR Continental train.

ON FIRST LEG

On this first leg of the Prime Minister's April 8 election tour, taking him through three provinces in six days, he has major speaking engagements will be Saturday evening in the Strand Theatre, Prince Albert, for his own personal nomination meeting, and at the Civic Auditorium in Winnipeg Monday.

The schedule announced by party headquarters called for whistle stops on the way west at Winnipeg, Rivers, Man., Melville and Sask. The Prime Minister will breakfast Saturday with party workers in Saskatoon and go to Prince Albert by train for the evening nominating convention.

He will leave Prince Albert Sunday for Winnipeg and after the Winnipeg rally he'll fly to Toronto for an Ontario tour during the balance of the week.

Naturalists' Club Hears Talk on Moira Authority

The February meeting of the Quinte Field -Naturalists Club took the form of a supper meeting at Holloway St. United Church on Monday evening.

The president, Miss Joy Nichols, conducted a short business meeting and then turned the meeting over to Mr. Hedley Janes who introduced Mr. Michael Chubb, Field Officer for the Moira River Conservation Authority. Mr. Chubb's theme was "How we, as individuals, or groups, can help in the work of the Moira River Conservation Authority".

Mr. Chubb mentioned that he could show the beautiful side of conservation through pictures of flora and fauna, but that he preferred to deal with the practical side of conservation. He emphasized that interested people should have a wide knowledge of the work of the Authority and should be able to pass on this knowledge to them. He stated that there are 31 Authorities throughout Ontario, covering some 20,853 square miles with 455 municipalities having 727 representatives who operate for the overall good of Ontario. The largest Conservation Authority is the Grand Valley Authority and the smallest is the Mattagami Authority.

Mr. Chubb said that an Authority is a community organization which requires community knowledge and interest, and as this grows, the work of the Authority may increase because more money through grants and tax levies will come from local people. People should be reminded of such things as serious floods in our area in the spring when there is a large run-off. They should also be reminded of the lack of water in the summer and fall because there is less forest and other natural reservoirs to hold the surplus water during the spring run-off.

Mr. Chubb emphasized that the basic reason for serious flooding in the Moira area are still present. He said that the Authority had done extensive investigation relative to this situation and has issued warnings and recommendations which it hopes will be implemented.

Many water control measures have already been completed including the Delora Dam, and the Limphasa Lake Dam, which turns Lingham Lake into a reservoir of some 2500 acres with a usable storage of 27,000 acre-feet of water. This lake is now under the supervision of the Authority with a 66-foot head in effect.

Mr. Chubb stated that there was still the serious problem of pollution to be dealt with. Both raw sewage and industrial waste can contribute to the growth of undesirable aquatic weeds and algae, especially when the water is warm and ideal growing conditions prevail. Mr. Chubb stated that both industry and the communities in the watershed have shown interest in this condition, and in some cases, through work and planning, the pollution problem has been cleared up. Further control will lead to increased tourist attractions, better fish- eating if ever since.

Mr. Chubb spoke of he large area of forest now under Authority control, and areas unfit for farming are being acquired, either through gifts from interested people, or through purchases. These areas are all being reforested. He said that there is already some revenue from the forest area, from improvement cutting which is carried out on newly acquired forest areas. The Authority owns these areas, but they are managed by the Department of Lands and Forests.

Relative to private woodlots, Mr. Chubb said that it was at first feared that the regulations necessary for making paper would promote the cutting of very small trees, but through legislation limiting the size of trees which may be cut, this trend has been minimized.

RECREATION PLANS

"Recreation in the Moira watershed is a major consideration in Authority plans", Mr. Chubb said, and he mentioned especially the Lingham Lake Area, the Delora Conservation Area at Actinolite, and the Vandervaart Conservation Area at Consecon, Ameliasburg. All of these projects require money to develop and the amount available determines the progress that can be made. The Authority last year, especially has been improved greatly each year and now has picnic sites, campgrounds, boat launching areas, nature trails, and a small camping area. A larger camping area is under development.

The Authority conducts special programs of education for all age groups which includes tree planting days, lectures, fire fighting displays and guided tours.

"Groups", Mr. Chubb said, "can contribute funds or organize projects for exhibit, make bird nesting boxes, supply technical assistance on special projects of their own through the co-operation of the Authority".

In conclusion, Mr. Chubb stated that individual and group participation in the spring will speed the work of the Authority in its plans of education and recreation for the future.

Miss K. Mills thanked the speaker and presented him with a cheque for $25 on the Quinte Field Naturalists Club to be used in the work of the Moira River Conservation Authority.

The deputy mayor, Ald. Ben Corke, proved he was as good a curler as a bridge player at the Quinte Curling Club on Wednesday, when his rink of Mrs. Dorothy Clarke, Gardiner Duff, Mrs. Eva Corke, won the three-game high score at the mixed bonspiel with rinks from Trenton, Cobourg, Marmora and Quinte curlers competing. To prove this was not an exceptionally high score, they curled like veterans all day and beat the opposition as they came to them.

Jack Hallett of Trenton, with Mrs. Audrey Hallett, Dr. Frank Smith and Mrs. May Wilson was a close second in the three-game high bracket. A Quinte rink of Mrs. Irene McLean, Ted Doyle, Mrs. Agnes Walker, with Jim Walker holding the broom, won the two-game high count, while a Cobourg rink of Mrs. K. Moore, Clarence Moore, Mrs. Ina Wallis and Lyle Wallis as skip, was second in this bracket.

Another Quinte rink of Mrs. Sally Alyea, Ernie Jones, Mrs. Agnes Farrell and Doug Ashley as skip, won the one-game high count with a rink of Mrs. Ann Alexander, Mrs. Louise Johnston, with Hazen Stairs as skip, won the second one-game high count.

A rink of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Meagher with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Parsons, Trenton curlers around all day, but apparently could not get enough shots to-gether to win any games, was signally honored when declared the booby prize winners. The Meaghers curled in the last end their day, but it was coming and warned all to watch out.

The prizes were always spiced and ably handled by James Walker as chairman of the committee, with Mrs. Janet Mc-Cowley, Fred Maund and Bill Tilley. Archie Rowe was the efficient umpire and scorer, while Mrs. Connie Wilkinson and Mrs. Maund provided delicious food throughout the day. This kind of spiel is most popular and another one is coming up in the near future.

A rink of Mrs. Beverley Neill, Mrs. Jean Meagher, Mrs. Audrey Gowsell with Mrs. Ena Corke as skip won the Steenburg trophy and the accompanying prize at a recently held spiel at the Trenton Curling Club. Another rink of Mrs. Trixie Wilkinson, Mrs. Ann Alexander, Mrs. Louise Johnson with Mrs. Connie Wilkinson as skip won games and were also close to the leaders.

Mrs. Mary Maund, Mrs. Jessie Baber, Mrs. Agnes Bean with Mrs. Jane Sheppard as skip, curled for two-game high score, while Mrs. Lenore Bateman, Mrs. Mavis McLean, Mrs. Marjorie Acton a, skip, won the one-game high. It was a fine showing of the Gunnon curlers from the Quinte Club and the girls are proud of their trophies. Marmora, Cobourg, Trenton and Quinte rinks were on hand.

The Sniffs and the Snorts go back at it again this weekend with another game of their challenger match. The Sniffs composed of Steve Flintoff, Bill Hall, Harold and Ernie Wilkinson are opposing the Snorts of Fred Maund, Jack Murphy, Steve Bakey and Charlie Cox with the Snorts one game in the lead and if the Sniffs do not pull up their socks they will be going out in two straight. They were badly beaten in the first end of test, despite the pleading of their manager, Steve Flintoff, who was playing lead stone and then skipping the rink.

The Snorts curled like the Richardsons and won seven of the eight ends. The brooms were carried at the end of the fourth end but the refreshments did not seem to help the Sniffs for not now life in the Snorts.

A pleasant time was had by all.

Plain Defiance Of Law Says Magistrate

Getting a man's driving record from provincial government files in Toronto may be a frustrating experience, although court officials wouldn't admit it.

Last week Downsview man, Ralph Dara Bulmer, appeared in Belleville magistrate's court for driving while prohibited. He was remanded a week in jail when provincial police said they had not received his official record from the Ontario government files.

This morning, an OPP officer told the court the record was finally received — but with the wrong name.

"However," said the officer, "by radio and telephone I have the driving record."

Bulmer, in jail for ten days after his arrest when his car overturned on Highway 401 near the Glen Miller overpass, waived presentation of the formal documentation of his record.

Magistrate R. C. Jackson called Bulmer's driving without a licence "plain defiance of the law, contempt of court."

He fined Bulmer $100 or jail 10 days that would have been a lesson to you I think. I can tell you if you've been driving and have sent you to jail for some time. You were driving under the worst conditions — under a court order not to drive."

He sentenced Bulmer to one day.

In Belleville the count of eligible voters was but 13 less than last year.

The enumerators' lists have already been posted in Belleville and Trenton and will shortly go to the printers, Mr. VanTassel said.

School, Parks Capital Budgets Are Received

TRENTON — Clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry said today that to date he has received five-year capital budget estimates from the Trenton School Board and the Trenton Parks Board. Yet to come are five-year spending estimates from such bodies as the Public Utilities Commission and council's Department of Public Works.

Once all reports are in, the budget will be sent to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval.

Capital budgeting on a five-year basis is not new in town circles. Three years ago council, guided by Mr. Larry, submitted a five-year plan to the OMB, which, while never officially "approved" by that body, served as a guide to approval of capital expenditures.

'Red' Townsend Fractures Leg At Collegiate

Homer "Red" Townsend, well known city sportsman, and member of the teaching staff of Belleville Collegiate Institute is hospitalized here with a serious leg fracture.

Mr. Townsend suffered the fracture after falling from a ladder on the auditorium stage following the presentation of the school's annual show "Kampus Kapers."

He was assisting in the dismantling of stage properties when the accident occurred.

Medical examination revealed the thin bone of the left leg broken in places. Mr. Townsend has already undergone surgery on the injured member.

'Thinking Day' Ceremony Held In Park Dale

By J. F. MORNAN

The joint birthdays of Lord and Lady Baden-Powell, founders of the Boy Scout and Girl Guide movement, are celebrated as "Thinking Day" by members of these groups all over the world.

An unusual form of this celebration occurred in Belleville's Park Dale Community Centre hall on Friday evening, when Scouts, Guides, Cubs and Brownies came together in a Thinking Day ceremony.

The 18th Belleville (Park Dale) Sea Scouts and Cubs and the 16th Belleville (Park Dale) Girl Guides and Brownies turned out over 100 strong for the celebration. Guests were: Division Commissioner Mrs. D. Stewart and District Commissioner Mrs. A. Bannon of Guides, and Scout District Commissioner Mr. Murray Maw. Scout Assistant D.C. Mr. Sid Sharman acted as master of ceremonies.

The celebration began on an impressive note, as color bearers of Scouts, Guides and Cubs solemnly obeyed the command, "March on the Colors." The colors were received and placed for ceremony by the Commissioners, then the National Anthem was sung, and D. C. Maw led in prayer.

RE-AFFIRM PROMISE

A. D. C. Sharman then called on each of the groups to rise and re-affirm their Scouting Promise. Assistant Sea Scoutmaster Art Vopni led the Sea Scouts in their Promise; Captain Grace Mornan and Lieutenant June Sharman led the Girl Guides. Cubmaster Charles Drennan and Assistant Jack Nickel followed with the Cubs; then Brown Owl Laura Gray and Tawny Owl Hilda Sutton ended with the Brownies.

Division Commissioner Mrs. Stewart spoke briefly on the history of the Girl Guides, and the importance of the annual Thinking Day celebration.

D. C. Murray Maw then spoke to the assembly on the effect the Scouting and Guiding Movements have on the lives of those involved. He stressed the point that the greater the guidance and training given by leaders, the greater the influence on those serving such service. This influence is then projected to those who come in contact with the trained and ex-members of the Movements, and thus is perpetuated.

A. D. C. Sharman then called for the light to be lowered and for the groups in a joint Campfire Ceremony. The Sea Scouts, Guides, and Cubs, each sang some of their favorite songs, then all joined in a sing-song. It was a fascinating "first" experience for all of the groups, and none of the leaders had ever experienced such a joint ceremony either.

INVESTITURE HELD

After Campfire, an investiture ceremony was held. A. D. C. Sharman and Lady Howard-Reid Mr. Harry Brooks as Sea Scoutmaster of the 18th Belleville Sea Scouts. Mr. Gerald Thompson was formally invested as Chairman of the sponsoring body Group Committee, and Mr. Harry Hodgson was invested as Ways & Means member of the Committee. D. C. Mrs. Bannon then presented Mrs. June Holland with her Guide Lieutenant pin.

The 18th Belleville Sea Scout Group (the only Sea Scouts in the area) is sponsored by the Park Dale Ratepayers' Association of Belleville. The 16th Belleville Girl Guide Company is sponsored by the Park Dale Branch, Women's Institute of Canada.

Belleville public works employees from now on will measure ice thicknesses and water depths three times a week, on the Moira River. Since the beginning of February, the measurements have been taken once per week, at seven different spots on the river each time. The measurements enable the department to predict possible flood hazards, and to avert trouble by blasting the ice if required. In the picture, H. J. Johnston, of Belleville is drilling through the ice below the Bridge St. bridge, while Stan Finkle, an inspector with the department, stands by with a measuring stick. They found 80 inches of water, and 22 inches of ice at this spot yesterday.

Browned-Off?

Those hard working Progressive Conservatives are expon- ents of the hard sell.

At least that is the story which comes out of Toronto and the Ontario Good Roads Convention held in that city recently.

Keith Brown, MLA for Peterborough, speaking briefly at the Hastings-Frontenac Progressive Conservative convention at Madoc yesterday, told this story:

"He was entertaining a group of convention delegates (including a number of Liberals) in his hotel rooms.

With the federal election in the offing, discussion naturally turned to politics and by his Brown's own admission the Liberals were giving him a hard time.

But, he said, he went to work on them ,and 'eventually convinced them that the Conservative party was the right one.

"The Liberals even ended up with leaving money contributions for the Conservative campaign.

The Liberal contribution, sealed in an envelope, was handed over yesterday to the riding association treasurer at the Madoc Conservative convention.

Spring Shipping Season Will Be Late Starting

DETROIT (AP)—All of the Great Lakes except Lake Ontario are 90 to 100 per cent iced-covered, the U.S. weather bureau says.

The inland lakes' worst freeze in many years, result of a severe winter, was reflected in the weather bureau's first ice report of 1963.

A late start in the spring shipping season appeared almost certain.

Remand Man For Month on Murder Charge

Belleville barrister Ronald Cass may defend a 22-year-old Scarborough man on a capital murder charge in the stabbing of a teenage girl near Scarboro.

Mr. Cass requested a month's remand for Leonard Joseph Michael Coombs when the accused man appeared for the third time in Belleville magistrate's court this morning.

Coombs is charged in the death of 18-year-old Sharon Frost, of Actinolite, found stabbed to death in the home of her sister at L'Amable, five miles south of Bancroft.

"I am in a position to speak to this matter, although at the moment I cannot say I am acting for the accused", Mr. Cass told Magistrate R. C. Jackson.

Mr. Cass said Coombs' father had been endeavoring to get legal counsel for him, but his defence might become a legal aid matter.

"In this connection Mr. Tom Lally and myself have been asked to assist the accused", said Mr. Cass.

He asked for a lengthy remand in which she does problem of representation and prepare the case for the defence.

"I suppose perhaps in the circumstances", said the magistrate, "that is that satisfactory to you Mr. Coombs.

"Yes", replied the accused man,

The magistrate remanded him to March 28.

Coombs, who sat in court handcuffed to OPP constable Eugene McLean of Bancroft, in brief appearance, was immediately returned to his cell in Hastings county jail, after the magistrate announced the date.

Rabies Threat In Lennox Said Serious

The number of reported rabid cases in Ontario increased by 70 per cent in 1962 over the previous year, and the Department of Agriculture considers the rabies threat in Lennox and Addington counties to be "serious". A. W. Allan, district veterinarian the Department of Agriculture office in Kingston said the Tamworth and Enterprise district is a focal point for the disease in this area.

The latest rabies outbreak began more than a year ago, in the Vennacher district, and has spread as far west as Battersea, south to Odessa and spilled over to the eastern counties, Dr. Allan reported.

Constable A. A. Gaudry, left, of the Belleville Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police, is congratulated by Attorney-General Fred M. Cass on his graduation from an advanced investigation course at the Police College in Toronto. Mr. Cass told the forty officers taking the course they would be considered for promotion on the basis of their examination grading. The special five-week course, an innovation in the O.P.P. and covering all phases of criminal investigation, is the first of a series.

Defence Commitments Discussed by Judy La Marsh At Liberal Rally in City

In a riding that houses one of Canada's largest air force complexes, South Hastings Liberals launched their first big election broadside last night with emphasis on the nation's defence commitments.

The verbal critique was delivered by one of the party's most emphatic speakers, Judy LaMarsh, Niagara Falls. Keynote of her address, in a review of Canada's Nato and Norad commitments was summed up in one sentence: "Nations cannot, in a change of government, change an undertaking."

SAID IN 1959

Speaking to a party meeting in Belleville's Bolers Secondary School, Miss LaMarsh called for Canada to live up to its collective defence agreements in the cold war, while accusing the Diefenbaker government of persistently withholding vital information on the country's defence policies from the public.

She was the first major party figure to appear for South Hastings Liberal candidate Robert Temple, since he began his campaign. Her address lasted nearly an hour, in which she drew a parallel between the defence crisis into a broad attack on government indecision and international indecisiveness which would result from another minority government.

RETRACES CONTROVERSY

Miss LaMarsh retraced the current defence controversy from years with the government decision to scrap the "Arrow" —Canada's air defence successor to the CF 105 aircraft. It was made by the government "because the Prime Minister said the day of the manned bomber was over. And that was in 1959 he said that."

Canada's manpower has the talent or capability to produce such weaponry because it has the engineers and technicians to the United States through lack of jobs in this country.

The nation was surprised "to find within a year or so" that the government had purchased the Voodoo, a plane with similar performance to that of the Arrow, the Starfighter, for its NATO role, and the Honest John Rocket for the army.

"Now, this government have believed in collective defence, because we know we cannot defend ourselves," she said.

Since the emergency of nuclear weapons and the "massive retaliation" policy of both sides in the cold war, it is no longer realistic to talk of defence in terms of conventional arms. "Now it is necessary to defend the deterrent to war," said Miss LaMarsh, "and the deterrent is the bomber."

"It seems," she stated bluntly, "a shabby kind of defence—you strike me and I'll strike you . . . but we worked and it has kept the peace."

"We, being a part of collective defence arrangements with and NATO . . . we, having been founding partners, in these agreements, we must maintain the vital to peace it is to defend with the ability to fight back".

She strongly criticized the government for failing to keep the people informed on the nuclear issue since the defence crisis started emerging from its shell in 1959.

WARHEAD ISSUE

"The people of Canada in the past five years, have not been able to make informed decisions, not personally nor through their elected representatives."

She described the warhead issue for the Bomarc missiles was never discussed until American technicians were spotted in the supporters at its North Bay launching site.

"It was not until they were installed in North Bay was the answer clearly given to the Canadian people that this Bomarc — the Bomarc B — had never been designed for it. a non-nuclear warhead."

Even in its present installation the Bomarc—"is not the best kind of weapon," said Miss LaMarsh. Above-ground, it is militarily categorized as "soft" — vulnerable to attack.

With a non-nuclear warhead it must strike its target when it get. This will mean the enemy's bomb load would explode after it struck the ground. With a nuclear warhead, exploded in the vicinity of striking already would detonate its payload in the air.

The Prime Minister has said countless times in the House and on the hustings that we are going to have these things (nuclear warheads) if they are necessary.

"But a nuclear weapon is not a bullet in a box. You don't put it on your shelf until you get around to using it."

Because of its geography Canada could play many roles in collective defence, declared Miss LaMarsh.

"But we have accepted one role. Nations cannot, in a change of government, change an undertaking."

SAID IN 1959

"When the Prime Minister tells you and tells the people in the House of Commons that the day of the manned bomber is over, he're back to the fact he said that in 1959."

Western military intelligence has indicated that both in the United States and Russia the strike potency of the manned bomber will continue to the end of this decade. What Mr. Diefenbaker has now done, charged Miss LaMarsh, is telescope the transitional period as the current bomber role into the ICBM.

In Europe, Canada's Nato brigade possesses the Honest John artillery rocket. "It is filled with sand and the only damage it would do an enemy is if it fell on him."

Meantime, Canada's Nato air role will be important "for the bearable future."

"The RCAF is conceded the best airforce in Europe but Diefenbaker says this has been given a difficult (strike) role."

Nato nations now are spending millions of dollars extending the operating capacity European airfields to service the Canadian air strike contingents. They are spending money relying on Canada to live up to its commitments. The U.S. airforce could fly that role but that's not encouraging to make other Nato nations live up to their commitments. "The U.S. strategic airforce "will shortly be able to do it" but this would not, attended not, be considered, being cognizant of the traditional enmity of Germany for the Communist regime.

MUST DECIDE CLAIM

"For what?" asked Miss LaMarsh.

The Prime Minister made up his mind one time to buy this bomber. Then he came up that decision and of circumstances, your wife-is gone, then you will not lead a country".

The United States was wrong — and regretted it — in its interventions in Canada's defence controversy. But "would you want to see that kind of concern to you as well, if the other person who knows the weapons best, the U.S. and she was ashamed that an ally found it necessary to set the record straight."

Mr. Diefenbaker said he will not be pushed around and that Canada's defence is controlled by pro-Canadians.

"Who's pushing him? I would like to know he thinks has governed Canada in the past 100 years but pro-Canadians?"

"If we are not dependable, if we are incapable of making decisions, we have elected another minority government, not even our friends will listen to us, much less our enemies."

Mincing no words on minority party politics, Miss LaMarsh said that Social Credit philosophy possessed the same basic tenets as Hitler's National Socialism. Mr. Caouette's Democratic Party was socialist and has had its "high point."

"When there is difficulty there is a splinter group either right or left . . . that always rises. While she believed it wrong, Miss LaMarsh described Conservative philosophy as a "respectable political philosophy" now threatened by a man who cares not for the party nor even for his country".

Mr. Diefenbaker, she charged sought to retain power "in order that he might go down to history as the prime minister of Canada's centenary". The fall of the government, demonstrated what "a lack of leadership can do, not only to a great old party but to a country".

Two to Contest PC Nomination At Napanee

PICTON — A contest for the Progressive Conservative nomination in Prince Edward-Lennox is expected to add interest to what event is planned for Napanee Collegiate auditorium, Wednesday night, Mar. 6.

Clarence A... Milligan, Napanee dairy farmer, and former P. has announced that he will let his name go before the convention.

This assures a contest, as A. Douglas Alkenbrack, elected as member last June, will again be a candidate.

Under the P.C. constitution meetings to select delegates to the convention are held in each polling division on Monday night, March 4. Three men and three women delegates are chosen, along with one of each as substitutes.

This assures a convention attendance of between five and six hundred persons. A change has been made to have nominations by ballot instead of from the floor. Such nominees is allowed to speak briefly while those wishing to contest the nomination are given an opportunity to speak at greater length before voting takes place.

She said Mr. Diefenbaker last year crossed the country claiming Canada had hitherto never seen such prosperity.

"Remember the shock when the Prime Minister came on television (after the election) and advised the country that in two years we would be bankrupt; our dollar was dropping out to the side and we had to borrow a billion dollars?"

Miss LaMarsh said there has been no budget debate in almost two years. "Taxation without representation has been in fact what Canada had had for the past two years."

The Liberals in the last parliament, had been accused of obstruction. "Obstruction of what?" demanded Miss La-Marsh. "No (financial) program was presented; no estimates were presented and indeed, all the items that Prime Minister Diefenbaker mentioned in the Speech from the Throne were not brought forward."

She warned that Canada was seriously falling behind in finding jobs even for the yearly new recruits to the labor force, and this was being reflected in emigration from Canada.

"We have had a hemorrhage of people out of this country. We have lost more people from Canada in the last five years than we have been 'taking in'."

Return of a minority government would also increase the fears of foreign investors.

"There will be a run on the dollar much greater than we saw last year and it may not be possible for us to borrow to keep that dollar. They (foreign investors) don't want to invest in a banana republic."

We have had a government in the past few years that simply knows not how to govern," she ruthlessly charged in making his father with a hammer. The court ruled Wednesday the was sleepwalking at the time.

Nato Force Roadblock?

The proposal for a multi-nation NATO air force, sea-based, is still in the earliest blueprint stages.

It would, therefore, be foolish to read too much significance into every proposal being advanced for the organization of such a force.

Nevertheless, some of the suggestions appear to carry all-important implications.

It is possible that the force may include surface ships, as well as submarines, both types of vessels being armed with Polaris missiles.

The surface vessels may have mixed crews. But both Britain and the U.S. are opposed to mixed crews on any atomic submarines armed with Polaris missiles.

Britain will equip the Polaris missiles which she obtains from the U.S. with her own warheads. On her own submarines, manned with her own crews, she will have complete control over these nuclear missiles.

With the possible exception of France, Britain is the only NATO power besides the U.S. able to equip the Polaris with her own warheads.

Surface ships carrying the Polaris may have mixed crews and one would assume that amongst this mixture would be some U.S. sailors entrusted with the arming of the Polaris.

It seems doubtful, though, whether other nations besides Britain and the U.S. will be able to provide atomic submarines. President Kennedy, in proposing such a multi-nation NATO force, may be counting on this inability.

A Polaris-carrying atomic submarine, even with a U.S. contingent aboard in charge of the Polaris, would not be easy to control in an emergency. It could not be quickly located, as could a surface ship. To all intents and purposes, the country owning it, and providing the major portion of the crew, could join the "nuclear club" at any time it chose to do so.

And that, of course, is precisely what Kennedy does not want. The proposal to form a multi-nation nuclear force is an effort to divert other countries from any attempt to acquire their own nuclear arms. It is a good trick if it works. On the very qualities which make a Polaris-equipped atomic submarine such a desirable weapon on which to base nuclear deterrent power may very well deter the U.S. from assisting any non-nuclear powers to operate such submarines, even within NATO. One such submarine, hidden in the deep, could hold a whole nation to ransom.

Interesting Conversation

Mrs. A. J. Elder of Weston has a complaint.

Like most of us, she has a telephone. This costs her money. She appreciates that, because a telephone is a convenience. But at times Mrs. Elder's telephone, likes telephones everywhere, is an inconvenience. So far, however, the odds have all been in favor of the telephone. Unlike Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, the telephone's inventor, most of us like to have the thing in the house.

That was the situation at Mrs. Elder's home until the other day. Then she got a telephone call which left her shook up — and furious. When she answered the call, a voice informed her that she was listening to a recorded announcement and told her if she called a certain number she would receive a prize.

Mrs. Elder apparently does not think this is sporting. Telephone salesmen annoy her anyway and it seems that she figures the least they can do is make their calls in person and take their chances.

The telephone company says there is nothing they can do to prevent the use of recordings in sales messages.

There is, however, something Mrs. Elder could do. She could obtain a device so that her telephone was answered by a recording. Then, with one recording talking to another recording, the game would be even. No matter what happened, it would serve them right!

Survival of the Strongest Secret of Dief's Victory

By RICHARD JACKSON
(From The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — In the basic interest of hearing both sides of the strange story of what one group calls "The Cabinet Crisis," and the other coterie terms "The Palace Revolution," let's listen to the version as told by any one of a number of those so-called conservative "conspirators" who planned and "plotted" to force Prime Minister Diefenbaker's resignation.

In the first place, they say, it was not any "Palace Revolution." They were not "rebels" — the pro-Diefenbaker elements have called them worse, "traitors"— and there was no "betrayal" of the Prime Minister.

Instead, they simply were go-ing through the democratic processes of getting rid of an unwanted member of the Cabinet, in the same way that any elective organization — a corporate board of directors or the ladies' afternoon music club — makes executive changes.

If they had succeeded, they say, they would have been hero-worshipped for it.

That they failed, their anticipated coup became a conspiracy and the "desertion" of nearly the whole membership of the Cabinet, is the same way that any elective organization — a corporate board of directors or the ladies' afternoon music club — makes executive changes.

If they had succeeded, they say, they would have been hero-worshipped for it.

That they failed, their anticipated coup became a conspiracy and the "desertion" of nearly the whole membership of the Cabinet, removing the political "chairman of the board", turned out to be a "revolt".

NOT EASY

While admitting that a Prime Minister is not easily disposed of, the "rebels" took the position that not being a dictator was not actually a "mark of the boss, but merely the Queen's "first minister", he is not indispensable.

As the prime or "first" of the Crown's Cabinet advisers, he is not irreplaceable, they say. No. One among "equals".

He selects the other Ministers, and doing it most any more attention to the regional political considerations of geography, and even of race and religion, than to his own personal likes and dislikes.

So John Diefenbaker in making up his first Cabinet after his 1957 victory, did not do it with an eye on political geography and the regional concerns. Instead, he first completed to appoint several men who had opposed him.

Among them were Finance Minister Nowlan and Transport Minister Hees, and even Works Minister Fulton and Justice Minister Fleming who had challenged him for the party leadership.

And once a minister is sworn in to the Cabinet he gives his authority from, and owes his loyalty to, the Crown and the Canadian people, and not the Prime Minister who really is nothing more than an elected party leader and member of Privy Council.

Even as a Prime Minister possesses no more power than his party followers and the members of the Cabinet care to give him.

WAY OF THE WORLD

If they are weak, if they prefer to be unseated, and to be voted around, they have only themselves to blame.

There is no "Divine Right of Prime Minister", in theory, anyway.

That is the way the "rebels" figured it.

Their mistake was that they expected the Prime Minister to accept and bow to the theory, and follow the old-fashioned, before-the-turn-of-the-century book of Parliamentary rules.

Every Prime Minister, if he is "strong", makes his own ground rules — as did Cabinet who got away with it — and neither Mackenzie King nor John Diefenbaker have ever been willing by "weak" when their ministers attempted to squeeze them in a power play.

With "Dief" as with "Mackenzie" 20 years ago, it was a straight test of strength. Neither Prime Minister was supreme, and either could have broken under the strain.

It was simply a case of who had the greatest moral muscle, the Prime Minister who wanted to stay, or the Cabinet dissidents who demanded that he go.

The dissatisfied wing of the Cabinet could always appeal to Prime Minister if it had been large and more geographically representative and had acted in unison.

But he was tougher, more durable, could stand up longer under the pressure without cracking, and so he is "in" and the "rebels" out.

There was nothing automatic or certain about it, for it was a no-holds - barred, bare-knuckles political knock-down-and-drag-out.

Leisure True Mother Of Invention

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: With most people, their religion is a substitute for religion, just as their sexuality is a substitute for sexuality; on both the spiritual and the physical plane, authenticity of feeling and expression is much rarer than we think . . . otherwise, how explain the perversions committed in the name of religion, and the dissatisfactions recurring in the purest of sex?

There is only one thing inevitable in history; that men and nations will resist being forced into their short-term interest, by the profound detriment of their long-term welfare.

The unexpressed syllogism of all political extremists, from the Left and Right wings on the one side to the orthodox Marxists on the other, was freely and frankly put into words by King George III of England, when he said: I deserve what is good; therefore, every opponent of mine does not agree with me is a traitor."

It is not necessity, but leisure, that is the true mother of invention; the most necessitous societies do not have the time or energy for basic inventions; it is only when society has developed that surplus of leisure as a leisure class that experiment, discovery and invention come to the forefront.

The life of a lie resembles infant mortality: It either dies in the first year, or continues to grow to a lusty old age—sometimes for centuries; there is no such thing as a middle-aged lie.

The first murder was an act of impulse, not of premeditation, and impulse is what man kind must perpetually guard against; after all, as Buber has pointed out, the first murder was of murder or death, or even that if one hits a man hard enough and often enough he will die.

Thus, the moral of the Cain and Abel story is plain enough — man must constantly guard evil, but he does not understand the consequences of his impulses.

Speaking of this primal act, it is worth knowing that in this world, Sam Jame's observation that: "Man, biologically considered, is the greatest evil to be met with (into the bargain), is the most formidable of all beasts of prey, and, indeed, the only one that preys systematically on his own species."

It is an irony of our nature that we cannot punish a bad man, we can only hurt him; in order to be punished, he must have enough sense of virtue in himself to appreciate the justice of the penalty.

In the middle ages it might truly be said that "to know, is to know, is power"; in modern times, however, it is truer to say that power buys knowledge, and uses it for its own ends.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 23th, 1933

Joining the Women's Division of the RCAF seems to be something like getting married.

Anyway, once you say "I do" to His Majesty, you're in, for better or for worse. But there's a difference. Most girls know something about the men they are marrying; but standing nervously at the door of the recruiting centre, you realize that there are a lot of things that you do not know about the RCAF. It's no-sailed, too, because the Air Force knows plenty about you before it takes you in.

Owing to the fact that children in the public schools of Belleville are assisting the war effort in the purchase and sales of war savings stamps and certificates, the Penny Bank savings system in the schools of Belleville will be discontinued for the duration of the war, it was decided at the monthly meeting of the Board of Education. However, penny bank deposits will still be made and be kept effective and in force around 400 needing to be hospitalized. One would almost think we had a war going on and emergency beds were being erected in the halls for the wounded.

This is becoming so desperate that some of our citizens have to go to another city for hospitalization accommodation, and this is ridiculous. This hasn't just been going on for the last four months; it has been going for the last four years. Belleville has a 30,000 plus population now and but one hospital. I know the city fathers have arranged for another addition under construction in the near future, but with the population increasing the way it has been and newcomers coming from other cities we will have the same shortage of hospital beds plus accommodation.

The citizens of any city should come first as far as health and welfare are concern. ed. The citizens I mention are the people that spend in the polls to elect a body to run our city and they want our best not we believe these men will carry out this operation. I believe the money collected for this being spurned due to the fact that they cannot get their patients into the hospital-beds, beds in this city.

When the council meetings take place we have not the sewage disposal. That's alright maybe Belleville needs it the same as with the schools we do need, and I am against tearing down the Y.M.C.A. I suggest if they have not going to use it as the "Y" investigate this building before you do anything with it perhaps a temporary hospital could be made out of this building for now but not too serious, as a building as large as this would cost a fortune to build today. I do feel the citizens would think this would be no small but take into consideration the Belleville General Hospital is on a highway and it wouldn't be a slightly noisier Campbell St. then the highway. In Kingston they have several hospitals with a slightly higher population than Belleville, and Belleville's is 30,000 plus, not counting the outlying districts.

I am very strong as a taxpayer if it came to a vote for a new larger hospital naturally. Perhaps the city fathers will take this into consideration and take a walk through the hospital and see what I mean.

A Taxpayer.

Delirium Tremens Result Of Too Much Alcohol

By JOSEPH C. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I would like to know about D.T.'s Can anything be done unless the person is willing? Is there a complete cure? Is it dangerous.

F.R.W.

D.T.'s, or delirium tremens is the end point of too much indulgence in strong drink. It involves jitters, nervousness, hallucinations, staggering gait . . . you name it. It's there.

Whether the victim is dangerous to others depends on circumstances and on what hallucinations he may have. It is certainly dangerous (and desperately uncomfortable) for the victim himself, since there is bound to be physical damage from the amount of drinking needed to bring on delirium tremens. Cirrhosis of the liver is the one that comes first to mind.

No there isn't much that can be done for the person unless he wants to quit. By which I mean quit drinking. But if he does stop, sedatives and perhaps tranquilizers may help him some, and getting him to eat and sleep properly will be still more helpful.

It's hard to say that a complete cure is possible because of the probability that permanent physical damage has occurred, but the D.T.'s won't return if he stays away from alcohol.

Dear Dr. Molner: I read the letter from the woman whose little boy had epilepsy, and showed signs of epilepsy, and she called it a fit. Why can't doctors learn to call them seizures or spells instead? I am an epileptic and I think it sounds so much better. Maybe I'm oversensitive.

Mrs. F. W.

I don't know. Maybe you are too sensitive. But if you are, I still wish you'd write to the terms that don't bother you. It won't hurt them; it will help you.

I prefer the description, "convulsive seizure."

Dear Sir: You recently had an article on loss of potency in men. Kindly advise something. I should take to create potency.

C. E. P.

What makes you think you should take something? General good health, maintenance of proper weight, and getting yourself in a healthy frame of mind are the important factors.

You don't "take something" except to correct what is wrong. For instance, if you happen to have a thyroid disorder, it should be treated. Or anemia. Or whatever.

If you are reasonably healthy, the problem of loss of potency is almost always psychological. You know you are getting older and you start to worry about it, and the worry is the worst thing in the world for you in this regard.

You can't expect to be a vigorous, happy-go-lucky age 29 all your life, so expect to slow down some. And don't think you can work yourself to a frazzle, stay up too late at night, worry yourself goofy about the household bills, drink several cocktails before dinner, get fat, get out of condition from lack of exercise, and still expect to "take something" that will correct all of that for you.

Dear Dr. Molner: I would appreciate your views on the "calories don't count" method of reducing. I'm especially concerned about putting a teenager on it. The lack of fruit and Vitamin C alarms me. My daughter should lose 30 pounds. The doctor can find nothing organically wrong with her.

R. B. C.

Calories do count. So do foods with little vitamin value. The best way to reduce the weight of a teen-ager depends on having the child really want to lose. Then she'll accept and follow a diet which will produce weight gradually, provided she has what it takes not to pitch an occasional soda, bottle of pop, candy bar, bag of peanuts, or pizza.

"You Can Stop Sinus Trouble! is the title of my booklet explaining what sinus troubles really is, and encouraging sinus sufferers to do something about it. For a copy send a postcard to Molner in care of The Chicago-Sun Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 188, Radio City, enclosing a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover handling.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Feb. 25, 1853 —

Raphael Santi, one of the most celebrated Italian painters, was born 400 years ago today—1483. Despite the shortness of his life—he died in 1520 — some 1,400 works are credited to the Raphael. It was said of him that in his last years he forsook the artistic standards far beyond his time and that painters such as Rembrandt in Holland and even the Moderns made use of his "inexhaustible richness."

1858 — Eight persons, seven of them children, died when a hockey rink roof collapsed under snow at Listowel, Ont.

1896 — The French captured the Spanish city of Barcelona.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

William Makepeace Thackeray, the English novelist and contemporary of Charles Dickens, came on a visit to the United States in 1852, a hundred years ago. He was lionized, and was thunderstruck by what he saw in the new world. The distances he travelled on the railroads, over the illimitable spaces of unoccupied territory he passed through, the vigor of the people in the new cities and towns, the raw industries he beheld in operation and sprung up on every hand, gave him an impression of the United States that he went home filled with a missionary zeal far different from that of Charles Dickens who offended the American people by many of the things he wrote following his triumphal tour of the States.

From the letters and private papers of Thackeray the following sentences are taken:

"Here is the future: here is the great English empire to be, when the Gauls and the Cossacks may have tramped out our freedom."

Thackeray, six feet tall and full of zest, would be handy man to have around right now.

Andrew Brewin, NDP MP for Toronto Greenwood in the last House, told Hastings South NDP supporters last night that nuclear arms are of secondary importance in the fight against communism.

Bomarcs Obsolete, Useless, Cannot Check Communism By Weapons Alone--Brewin

"The West cannot win communism out of existence," Andrew Brewin, MP for Toronto Greenwood in the last House, told a New Democratic Party meeting at Belleville's Legion hall last night. Speaking after the nomination of Les Digby as NDP federal candidate for Hastings South, Mr. Brewin said that weapons alone will not hold world communism at bay.

He described the Bomarc missiles as "obsolete and useless" and said Honest John missiles could never be used in ground warfare because they would endanger the troops using them. He said the "Maginot Line mentality" of western governments could be more dangerous to the west than Russian arms.

"Khrushchev's strategy," he said, "is to avoid war, and to destroy capitalism by exploiting misery and poverty throughout the world." He described the "revolution of rising expectations" in the world today, and suggested that the West could stop communism by economic aid to underdeveloped nations.

ADVOCATES AID

He said that the Marshall Plan, costing 13 billion dollars, stopped communism in France and Italy during the two or three years after World War II, and built an expanding capitalist economy in Europe at the same time. The same methods would stop the tide of world communism.

Present spending in Canada showed a "lack of balance", said Mr. Brewin. He quoted spending of one and a half billion dollars on defence during 1961, and only 80 million dollars for capital aid and investment abroad. He said the UN suggests that western countries should spend about two percent of their total income on capital aid to underdeveloped countries, and added that Canada's 1961 expenditure represented about two thirds of one per cent of the national income. Canada's contribution, on a per-capita basis, was about one third that of the other western countries, he declared.

Mr. Brewin emphasized that the expenditures advocated by the NDP would be on a temporary basis, until the economies of the underdeveloped nations were self sustaining.

ASSAILS OLD PARTIES

Speaking of the old parties, Mr. Brewin said they had nothing further to offer the country. "It almost looks as though one of the old parties has chosen to destroy itself", he said, "and they have chosen the ideal leader for the job".

"But this will be no loss to the country," he added, "because Canada needs only one conservative — with a small c — party at a time." He said the old parties derive their income from large corporations, and meet the people through public relations firms, and therefore have lost touch with the people they are supposed to serve. He described the NDP as a "grass roots" movement, and suggested that it could sweep the country within the next few years.

Mr. Brewin added that he thought NDP candidates should not be discouraged by the en-

Les Digby Is Nominated By New Democratic Party To Contest Hastings South

Les Digby, of Belleville, was nominated last night to contest the federal election for the New Democratic Party in Hastings South. Three names were advanced for the nomination, at the meeting of nearly fifty people in Belleville's Legion hall, but William Kells of Deseronto, and Gerald Boyce of Belleville, both declined, in favor of Mr. Digby.

Summing up the NDP platform, Mr. Digby commented that the nuclear arms issue was not the only one of importance in the campaign. He spoke of sub-standard housing, schools, roads and hospitals, and suggested that Canada's lack of such "social capital" was the result of poor planning. "The NDP," he said, "has plans."

He mentioned unemployment as a problem, too, and suggested that it was of little concern to the old parties, while they are in office. He said that winter unemployment in Canada runs about 10 per cent, and that in England, four per cent unemployment is considered serious.

MEDICARE DISCUSSED

Mr. Digby said that about half of all Canadians are not covered by group medical insurance plans, and suggested that only a government plan could be all inclusive. He said the older parties were discovering this too, following the NDP lead. But, he added, the old parties "row-row to the doctors, the strongest union in the country," and fail to implement the measures required.

"Hastings South is not very fertile ground as far as a progressive party is concerned," Mr. Digby told the meeting. He added, however, that NDP candidates had taken other strongholds from the old parties. He specifically mentioned Peterborough which elected the first NDP member in Ontario during October of 1960.

trenched "old parties." He pointed out that his own riding, Toronto-Greenwood, had voted Conservative for 26 years before his election.

Henry Nokes, an NDP worker from Peterborough, introduced Mr. Brewin to the meeting. William Kells, of Deseronto, thanked him in the name of the local party association.

These young people provided a variety of musical numbers, solos and quartet vocal numbers, piano solos, dance routines, instrumental solos and band arrangements. Their choice of old and new pieces was skilfully blended to provide pleasure to all.

islation in the last Parliament.

"All that the Liberal party proved was that it was prepared to wreck Parliament and interrupt the government of the country any time it saw fit for the sake party advantage," he declared. "People like that are not fit to govern the country."

Eric Kierans, president of the Montreal Stock Exchange—criticized Social Credit politicians, warning that they could bring disaster to Canada.

He said Social Credit promoters espouse a "humiliating" theory of something for nothing.

ATTACKS INACTION

At St. Hyacinthe, Que., Real Caouette, deputy Social Credit leader, attacked both the old parties and trade unions for not doing anything for the unemployed or proposing solutions to unemployment.

Meanwhile, Mr. - Diefenbaker left Ottawa to whistle stop across the country to Prince Albert, travelling in a special coach attached to the CNR's transcontinental train.

In Shoal Lake, Man., Northern Affairs Minister Dinsdale said the Liberals are making "brutal, vicious and unprincipled" attacks on Mr. Diefenbaker—so much so he added, that "a great wave of sympathy now is moving in Mr. Diefenbaker's favor."

In Winnipeg, External Affairs Minister Green suggested that the loss of Tory support from some eastern newspapers may be a blessing.

He told a press conference that the Liberals are in a "mess" on the nuclear issue because they insist that Canada has a commitment to accept nuclear warheads for its forces.

"We happen to be the government and I say there wasn't a commitment agreement signed. We have broken no commitments."

In Ottawa, the voice of women, a 7,000-member group that vehemently opposes the acquisition of nuclear weapons in Canada, decided to remain politically neutral in the election campaign.

people," he said. "If I said anything that was out of order I want to apologize."

He blamed the statements on anxiety about his son and anger over the robbery.

He added that some of his remarks were misconstrued. "Were I wanted understood was that there should be a screening of persons entering Canada."

The apology came too late to prevent a flood of denunciations.

Both the federal and provincial immigration departments produced figures to show that foreign-born residents of Canada commit only about half the crimes per capita of native-born Canadians.

Federal Immigration Minister Bell accused Mr. Boyles of allowing "his anger to outweigh his judgment and knowledge of the facts." He added that immigrants are "properly entitled to resent the insult."

CALLS IT SLANDER

And the provincial immigration minister, John Yaremko, accused the millionaire of a "reprehensible slander" against the foreign born.

Meanwhile, police in the wealthy Montreal suburbs of Westmount and the town of Mount Royal said they believe the same robbers may have been active in the Montreal area.

"In all instances, these men were immaculately dressed and spoke perfect English," one police spokesman said, "and only used violence as a last resort."

He said the Boyles robbery resembled in particular a Westmount robbery in January where six residents were tied up and the bandits made off with $70,000 in jewelry and furs.

SOME COSTS LOWER

Whatever cost savings the British may realize would probably come in lower labor costs at their shipyards where the submarine hulls would be built.

The special equipment likely would be shipped across the Atlantic and installed in the submarine hulls there.

The negotiations have been moving ahead against a background of growing political controversy in Britain over the question of building a costly fleet of Polaris subs to operate under the Union Jack.

It has been estimated four submarines would cost the British $700,000,000.

No Campaigning By Air Marshal Says Editor

ROSETOWN, Sask. (CP)—The man who led 28 Canadian weekly newspaper editors on a visit to North American Air Defence Command headquarters at Colorado Springs, Colo., says there was no campaigning against the Canadian government's nuclear arms stand by Air Marshal C. Roy Slemon of the RCAF.

John Pinckney of Rosetown, president of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association and publisher of the weekly Rosetown Eagle, was commenting in an interview on a report in the Washington Daily News.

The News said Air Marshal Slemon, deputy NORAD commander, campaigned against the Canadian government's nuclear arms stand during visits to NORAD by the 28 weekly editors, the Toronto Board of Trade and members of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

"Air Marshal Slemon has no say whatever mentioned Mr. Diefenbaker, his government or his policies to us while we were at his headquarters," Mr. Pinckney said.

SEEKS COMMONS SEAT

"We were told by Slemon that all officers in NORAD believe that defensive weapons should be armed with nuclear warheads," said Mr. Pinckney, who is seeking the Liberal party nomination for Rosetown - Biggar in the April 8 federal election.

He said: "The air marshal should not become involved in a political controversy (because he said nothing for or against the Canadian government."

Mr. Pinckney said his group requested the trip to NORAD headquarters and transportation was provided by the RCAF. He said members of his group left the headquarters convinced that "we must have nuclear weapons for our defence." The group represented all the major political parties in Canada, he said.

The weekly editors were shocked "at the small numbers of Canadians who visited NORAD headquarters or sought information about NORAD," Mr. Pinckney said. He said last year 31,000 American newspaper men, legislators and other groups visited NORAD at Colorado Springs. In the same period 178 Canadians were there. "This included only four or five newspaper men and a handful of parliamentarians."

Liberal Plans

ployment in the area, which "is far greater than most other parts of Canada," would be to provide the Atlantic Development Board with a capital fund to promote development projects and encourage industrial expansion. Seats would be made of the board for organized labor and the basic Maritime industries—mining, fishing, farming, lumber.

Adjustment grants would be made "to industries locating in development areas such as those of northwestern and east coast New Brunswick and on your border and central areas where industry is so severely needed."

Atlantic provinces adjustment grants would be maintained "as long as they are needed" and the provinces would also get the principle of equalization abandoned by Prime Minister Diefenbaker's government.

Mr. Pearson called for "a Parliament where one party will have a clear and working majority and will be able to meet the problems and take the action required."

SEES NO ALTERNATIVE

"There is no alternative to the Liberal party to providing such a government in such a Parliament."

Other Liberal moves would be to make tax incentives available and to improve credit facilities for new and expanding industries.

On social security measures, Mr. Pearson gave top priority to a contributory old age pension plan. Next came a national health plan to be worked out with the provinces and with the approval and co-operation of the medical profession.

PARKS GUN, JUMPS

BERLIN (AP)—An East German border guard today escaped across the Berlin wall. West Berlin police said the 21-year-old private first class was patrolling the wall. When his comrades walked ahead of him, the guard leaned his submachine gun against the wall and scrambled across.

Agricultural

price increase "the farmer is blamed from one end of the country to the other." Yet city residents accepted price increases in automobiles and other commodities "almost without a murmur."

In the last 10 years, he said, the costs payable by the farmer had increased 19 per cent, while the wholesale price of farm products dropped 20 per cent.

Mr. Stewart made his statement after NDP Leader Donald MacDonald urged "compulsory enlistment of farmers into the present Workmen's Compensation Board plan for farmers.

Mr. Stewart said his department would ask the Ontario Farmers' Union, the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and the board for a meeting to discuss increased coverage.

CLAIMS CHEESE LOBB

Mr. MacDonald said Canada's biggest cheese producer, an American - controlled company subsidiary, had "successfully lobbied the federal government" and stalled negotiations for a reduction in tilled States import restrictions on Canadian cheese.

He said Black Diamond, biggest Canadian - owned cheese producer, which requested the negotiations, is "frustrated and fighting mad" over the U.S. import restrictions.

"Canadian policy is made to meet the needs of Kraft Black Diamond and the other companies are out in the cold, "Mr. MacDonald said.

Economics and Development Minister Macaulay protested the provincial government has no channel of direct negotiation with the U.S. federal government. "We have no more influence than you have," he said.

Labor Minister Rowntree said his department is investigating the case of a Toronto tunnel worker rushed to a decompression chamber in Buffalo, N.Y., for treatment for bends.

John McGeoge, 31, of nearby Agincourt, was taken to Buffalo because no decompression chamber was available in Toronto. Mr. Rowntree said he will consider a suggestion by Mr. MacDonald that a central decompression chamber be provided in Metropolitan Toronto.

JOIN RESEARCH

LONDON (AP)—Britain will set up a research plant to seek ways of removing Strontium-90, the most dangerous element in radioactive fallout from milk, Lord Hailsham, minister of science, told the House of Lord Wednesday night the plant will be slightly larger than experimental plant in the United States. Said the two plants will exchange information.

Capacity Crowd Attends Medical Society Auxiliary "Fantasy in Fashions 1963"

With brisk, cold weather prevailing in this area, the capacity crowd in Belleville Collegiate auditorium, last evening was whisked temporarily by way of "Fantasy in Fashion" 1963, by Rachael's to a land of warm trade winds, coral reefs and beautiful flowers.

The setting for this increasingly popular event, sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary to the Hastings and Prince Edward Medical Society, depicted a "Hawaiian Holiday". The artistic stage decor was arranged by Mrs. Phillips Vankleek and was highlighted with a magnificent back-drop representing a typical scene along the enchanting Hawaiian shoreline. This was drawn and painted by Mrs. Faulkner. Multi-colored flowers spelling the word "Aloha" tall pedestals of green ferns, and baskets of tropical fruits completed the setting.

Mrs. J. E. Nelles, president of the Auxiliary greeted the large number in attendance and briefly outlined the many charities aided by the proceeds of this highly successful event. She also introduced Mrs. H. Willson son who gave a most descriptive commentary of the several spring fashions.

Mrs. D. M. Scott convened the show assisted by Mrs. A. N. Rota as her co-convener. Throughout the evening's performance soft background music on the piano was provided by Mrs. J. Sine. During intermission a commendable group of vocal and specialty Hawaiian numbers given by pupils of Dorothy Dickey Dance Studio.

THREE PARTS

The show was divided into three parts with the latest fashions shown in coats and suits; sports wear and casual clothes, and to climax the evening, cocktail and evening gowns. This year simplicity in design and softness in fabric is stressed with no-hair, wool boucle and suede the most popular materials in coats and suits. Silks and all silk linens were popular for dresses and blouses. The new spring colors are pale to deep pinks and pastel to sunny yellows. Hemlines are slightly lower this year.

MANY HATS

Hats as shown by Woodley's seem the soft touch whether straw or fabric and this year have their distinctive dessert touch with a number of the creations fashioned from those worn in the movie, "Lawrence of Arabia". Shoes from Leslie's featured a lower heel style with a few showing open cutwork at the sides. In the line of jewelry Mrs. Williamson, the commentator wore a smart necklace made from stones found in Hastings County, set in gold by Mercier's.

ATTRACTIVE MODELS

Modelling the various fashions for 1963 in a most professional-like manner were: Mrs. J. D. Empson, Mrs. R. S. Morphy, Mrs. A. N. Rota, Mrs. A. W. Elliot; Mrs. S. D. Horner; Mrs N. MacDonald; Mrs. M. Schryver; and for the junior styles Miss K. Allen.

Some of the lovely fashions shown in last night's preview were: a golden yellow mohair coat accented with a bow tie at neck; a tailored two-piece red wool flannel; a blue suede, so popular this spring, with silk buttons, and the versatile wool coat with rib knit trimming; in sports and casual wear denim stretchies and colorful tops were shown. One dress of black leather with matching beret was especially striking, and in keeping with the theme, a gaily colored Hawaiian short shift reversible and washable was modelled. So cooling to relax in, was a one-piece play suit with matching skirt of polished cotton in soft and shimmery colors. A sleeveless shift of gold and tan with contrasting belt to be worn high or low was attractively modelled by the teenager. Perhaps the most eye-catching in the after-wewest fashions was a raspberry coctail outfit of sleek and trim slims featuring twin zippers, with matching top.

SPECIAL OCCASIONS

For that special occasion were shown: a charming frock of yellow organza, simply bodiced in tone-effect with belled hooped skirt; a lovely Italian dance frock of golden silk, overlaid in vivid coral pink and green, Empire styled and falling softly flared, from under the bust to the hemline; a pink silk linen, with a squared neckline, set off by inserts of scalloped and appliqued chiffon net, repeated in design in the skirt and sleeves; a black lycra knit sheath, with just a swish and it's on, no zippers, no buttons, with high cowl neckline and very low back, and also a bonnet of a formal in turquoise lace over white in sleeveless pillowett, scooped and pellon-lined for that perky look with the low back set off by a large bow.

At the second intermission Mrs. D. M. Scott spoke briefly and expressed sincere appreciation to the local exhibitors and to each and everyone who had helped in any way, after which she introduced Mrs. F. Beely who drew 18 door prizes and a wardrobe draw.

PRIZE WINNERS

The winners of these were as follows: Eileen Reid, Miss Ann Blakely, Mrs. H. McDonald, Mrs. MacRae, Mrs. J. M. L. Walcott, Melvin Donnell, Mrs. G. A. Low, Mrs. Roy Arnold, Mrs. Marion Black, Mrs. R. T. Foster, Miss Gladys Norton, Doris Colden, Mary Jane Box, Mrs. A. W. Touchie, Mrs. Dale Ellis, Mrs. Ted Cairns, Mrs. W. Gregory, Miss D. Osborne and Doris Byrres of Madoc won the $100 wardrobe.

The French Salon of Hair Design was responsible for the becoming hair styles, while make-up was provided through the courtesy of Kelly's Drug Store. Recorded music was provided by Mr. F. Murray of CJBQ, and flowers by Weese's and Club Cedars' shop.

Others on the fashion show committee were: Mrs. J. E. Nelles, Mrs. R. S. Gibson, Mrs. J. D. Empson, Mrs. R. S. Morphy, Mrs. J. R. Birchard and Mrs. N. D. Reid.

SCARROTT — HALL

Yellow and bronze chrysanthemums and potted ferns formed a lovely setting in Bridge Street United Church on Saturday February 9, at 3 p.m. when Mildred Jean Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lambert Hall, Belleville was united in marriage to Charles Richard Scarrott, Winnipeg, Manitoba, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Richard Scarrott. Her fingertip veil had a whimsy veil and she carried a corsage of orange delight roses pinned to a small matching bag.

Mrs. David R. Cowan of Don Mills, Ontario was matron of honour and wore an original gown of Renoir beige chiffon featuring a draped bodice and a gently draped skirt. Her headdress was of the same material and she carried a nosegay of baby bronze mums and yellow roses.

Mr. David R. Cowan of Don Mills, Ontario attended the bridegroom, while Mr. Donald E. Hall of Belleville ushered the guests.

A reception for 40 guests was held in the Pinnacle Room at Hotel Quinte where the bridal table was highlighted with a 4-tier round wedding cake decorated with pale creamy roses and misted about the base with misty tulle. Sunny yellow roses added to the nuptial setting.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a dark brown lace dress, gold flowered hat, brown accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

For the wedding trip to Florida and various points in the U.S.A. before their return to Winnipeg, where they will reside, the bride chose an almond green silk velvet suit with contrasting blouse of beige chiffon, beige tulle hat, brown lizard shoes and bag, a Canadian squirrel jacket and a corsage of orange delight roses.

Miscellaneous showers in honor of the bride previous to her marriage were given by Miss Neil Mackey and Mrs. Ila Wickerson, and Mrs. John Wall.

Mrs. Julian Reid entertained at a cocktail party and reception at tea was held at the home of Mrs. Edward Hall on February 2. # Latvian-Born Ex-Dancer Founder and Director of Quebec's Ballet Troupe

By JANET KASK

MONTREAL (CP) — One of the first things Ludmilla Chiriaeff says when she arrived in Canada on a cold night 11 years ago was a twenty-cent marquee with her name on it.

She and her two children trudged out of the Montreal railway station into a strange city where they knew no one and stumbled on the theatre featuring a French film in which she had danced.

"I took it as an omen," she says. "I knew I had to stay here."

The omen was a good one. The Latvian-born ex-dancer is founder and artistic director of Quebec's first professional ballet company, Les Grands Ballets Canadiens.

In an interview in her downtown Stanley Street studios against the background noise of resounding leaps and piano music, Mme. Chiriaeff discussed the state of the dance in Canada and her own company.

"We have established a company against the belief of Canadians themselves that Canadians cannot dance."

PIONEER ON TV

A rare compliment was paid the company when it was invited twice to dance at the internationally renowned Jacobs Pillow Dance Festival in the United States.

Ten days after her arrival in Montreal, Mme. Chiriaeff received a call from a television producer. That was in 1952 when television made its debut in this city. The outcome of the call was Les Ballets Chiriaeff, a half-hour monthly television program to "educate" the public.

"I was terrified that I would have to dance myself. But within a few months she had rounded up enough dancers for the program.

In 1955 the company first danced on the stage for the Montreal public at the Chalet on Mount Royal.

"Fantastic success" for the company came in 1956 when they danced at the Expo Montreal Festival. The following year grants came from the Arts Council of Greater Montreal, the Canada Council and the province of Quebec. The group became "Les Grands Ballets Canadiens," the third Canadian ballet company chartered to act as a non-profit organization. The other two are Toronto's National Ballet of Canada and the Royal Winnipeg Ballet.

They have already made extensive tours of Canada and the United States and appeared on American television.

TAUGHT IN PARIS

Mme. Chiriaeff, a chic, blueeyed brunette with high cheekbones and a rich, continental accent, grew up in Berlin where her parents had moved after fleeing from Latvia to Latvia during the Russian Revolution.

She says she became a dancer because of the influence of the artistic colony surrounding her family in those early Berlin days. Vladislav Chiriaeff was one of several famous friends of her father, writer Serge Cornyn. She studied the dance in Berlin and later taught and danced in Paris and Switzerland.

As for the dance in Canada, she believes the Canadian public is losing its "prejudice" against dancing. Parents were allowing children to follow dancing careers. Acquiring male dancers was still a problem, however. Two boys had appeared for auditions with the Bolshoi Ballet for their program here. Twelve of Mme. Chiriaeff's "children" were chosen to dance in the Bolshoi performance.

Her own children, daughter Anastasia, 15, and sons Avde, 12, and Gleb, 10, are interested in the dance but their school studies come first.

What makes a good dancer? "Often," the wide-eyed expert on the subject mused, "the best dancers are those who must fight some physical handicap," dancers also made a great difference. Finally, the greatest dancers, like all fine artists, have "something great to say."

HILLIER W.I.

HILLIER — The Hillier W.I. held their February meeting recently in Hillier Hall with 16 ladies attending. Mrs. W. Jordon presided, welcomed all, and the meeting proceeded in usual manner.

Mrs. R. Cunningham read the minutes and correspondence. Thank you notes were read from Miss Doris Dunn and Mrs. Monahan.

Mrs. S. Foster gave a talk on A.C.C.W. reminiscing on the Hillier W.I. members attending A.C.C.W. in Toronto in August 1962. She commented also on the A.C.C.W. of 1962 of which the theme of conference was "Country Women in a Changing World".

Mrs. S. Foster past F.W.I.O. board member and Mrs H. Weese who was president of Hillier W.I. for six years were each presented with Women Institute cup and saucer. Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Weese both spoke briefly thanking the members for the beautiful gifts.

The business session included a decision to hold a hobby fair early in May. Plans to be completed later.

Dainty refreshments were served and social time enjoyed. Mrs. R. Best conducted a contest with favors going to Mrs. Cunningham and Mrs. Jordon. Next meeting in April to be held in Hillier Hall, March 21st. Mrs. H. Weese, lunch convener with topic of meeting, "Current Events".

Men's Club Entertains at Family Dinner

CAMPBELLFORD—Rev. Eli Kelloway was the guest speaker at the father, son and daughter banquet of the Men's Club of St. John's United Church held on Tuesday evening in the auditorium. Rev. Kelloway, minister of the Trinity United Church in Cobourg, was introduced by his long-time colleague in United Church affairs, Rev. D. Mansell Smith of St. John's.

He spoke of the rapid advances of travel in the world today, which had shrunk the earth such that all nations are virtually neighbors in a world community. The increased problems and made isolationism completely obsolete. General Douglas MacArthur had said on the surrender of Japan in 1945: "What Japan needs most today is 3,000 missionaries." But only a few hundred in the Western World answered the call.

Stewart Nelson was chairman for the evening. A toast was proposed to the sons and daughters by Jack Connor, to which Bryan Symonds replied.

Devotions were in charge of Harold Milne and Roy Brown. Mr. Milne conveyed greetings from the Presbytery District Council, of which he is chairman.

The following contributed a brief musical program: Susanne Lillie, piano solo; Ted and Bruce Thompson, piano duet; sing-song led by Bob Lillie, accompanied at the piano by Don Bennett, A.T.C.M.

Morley E. Petherick expressed appreciation to the speaker and the appreciation of the fathers, sons and daughters present to the United Church women, who prepared a delicious meal, was expressed by M. B. Sayers.

The president noted that the Men's Club had realized a small profit on their pre-Christmas sale of nuts product.

Good Companion Cookies

by Mary Moore

A young mother wrote crying "Help! Help! Mary - I have 12 to 14 egg whites leftover every week. The doctor says my year-old twin boys can have yolks only!"

A simple solution is one cutsize angel food cake per week but I sent her half a dozen other recipes. Now I have another idea called

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

Homemade Chicken Soup (see Wednesday); Crusty French Bread; Sweet Butter; Endive and Tomato Salad; Mayonnaise; Lemon-Mandingue Pie; Tea.

SUNDAY

Roast Loin of Pork; Pineapple Fritters or Franconi Potatoes; Brussels Sprouts; Crisp Celery Hearts and Julienne Raw Carrots; Compote of Rhubarb; Whipped Cream; Walnut Kisses (see Thursday); Coffee.

WALNUT KISSES

3 egg whites, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 cup white sugar, ¾ cup chopped walnuts, ⅔ cup Sultana raisins, 8 sliced maraschino cherries, 1 teaspoon almond flavoring.

Add the salt to the egg whites and beat until stiff then gradually add sugar, beating until very stiff. Fold in nuts and fruits and flavoring. Cover 2 cookie sheets with foil, shiny side up, and butter it. Mound the "kisses" high on the buttered foil, 3" apart. Make big or little ones, whatever your heart desires. This amount will fill 2 cookie sheets. Put in oven of 400 deg. Fahr. with racks close together but centred between top and bottom. Turn off heat. I removed one pan after half an hour and left the other until oven was cold. From both, the two meringues lifted easily from the foil. I could detect no difference in the finished texture or appearance of the 2 pans baked different times.

MALLOW BROWNIES

This idea is not new but it is a little different and a reminder of a popular perennial.

½ cup shortening (preferably half and half shortening and butter), 1 square (1 oz.) unsweetened chocolate, 1 cup sugar, ¾ cup unsifted flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon baking powder, 2 eggs, 1 cup chopped walnuts, 1 teaspoon vanilla, ½ lb. (16) marshmallows, cut in half horizontally.

Gently melt shortening and butter and chocolate in a large saucepan. Remove from heat at once. Add sugar and mix well. Add flour, salt and baking powder, blending well. Add eggs and beat well. Mix in chopped nuts and vanilla. Pour into a 9" x 11" pan. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. about 20 to 25 minutes. Remove pan from oven. Top with marshmallow halves and return to the oven for 2 or 3 minutes or until marshmallows are soft and easy to spread. Remove pan from oven. Press with buttered fingers evenly over the brownies. Cool. Top with

CHOCOLATE FROSTING

1 square (1 oz.) unsweetened chocolate, ½ cup brown sugar, ¼ cup cold water, 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, 1 teaspoon vanilla, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1½ cups icing sugar, 2 tablespoons hot water.

Mix together in a large saucepan the chocolate, brown sugar and water. Heat mixture and bring to a boil. Boil 4 minutes. Remove from heat. Add butter or margarine. Cool. Stir in vanilla, salt, icing sugar and hot water and beat well Spread over cooled brownie layer. Cut into squares and serve.

The Brownie fiends will love this.

I bought some ready-made refrigerator cookies - fudge mint - and baked them exactly as directed on the wrapper. This yielded 3 dozen very good cookies and cost 49c. Since this works out at 16c per dozen it is more economical than bakery cookies.

◆ DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES ◆

MADOC W.I.

MADOC — The February meeting of the Madoc Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Jess Reid with 24 members, also visitors, present.

The president, Mrs. W. Hill, opened the meeting in the usual manner. The secretary, Mrs. McCrimmon, gave her report. The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. A. Bailey, who also reported on the success of the Senator White banquet.

During the business part of the meeting it was decided to hold an afternoon tea on March 16th. There will also be a bake sale and bazaar table at the tea. A thank-you note was read from Mr. and Mrs. White. It was decided to donate another $50 to the rink fund, this making a total of $100 donated to the Madoc rink. Institute pins and other supplies were to be ordered.

Mrs. E. Moore gave a talk on the consumers' leaflets, and current events were given by Mrs. Empey.

The program was a combined citizenship with Mrs. E. Moore convener and resolutions by Mrs. E. Wannamaker. Mrs. Moore spoke on Eskimos in the north and told how they are being educated by the white man. The teacher has to do much travelling as his pupils are far apart. The teachers travel by dog sled and canoe and can only visit each settlement about once a month, weather permitting.

Mrs. D. Adams gave a Valentine reading. Mrs. E. Wannamaker spoke on a few resolutions and gave a report on the 4-H Club work in other countries, such as Turkey, Holland, Australia and the German Republic. She also gave a short reading, "Dedication To A Pig."

Mrs. Tanner thanked the hostess and the program conveners for the program.

A dainty lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants and a social half hour followed.

HAND IN GLOVE WITH FASHION — PART ONE

Leather gloves were first introduced in the ninth century. They replaced mittens and became the social symbol of the time. What is more, down through the ages, a pair of elegant, leather gloves has frequently been associated with the latest in fashion.

The art of glove manufacturing was first brought to North America by Sir William Johnson and a group of Scottish glovers, who settled in the Adirondacks, about 50 miles northwest of Albany, New York. They called their settlement Gloversville. Today, nearly two thirds of all the gloves made in the United States come from this community.

For many years, Canada has produced fabric gloves of good quality, and work gloves of both fabric and leather. Within the last ten years, a "quality" leather glove industry has sprung up in Canada, until we now have a vital industry producing a fine, hand-sewn product. The fit and finish of these gloves is equal to the finest anywhere in the world. Several small towns in eastern Canada centre their whole industry on tanning leather and manufacturing gloves.

The glove industry has a special language all its own, a knowledge of which is helpful when buying a pair. Glove lengths are measured in buttons, even though the glove itself may be without buttons. The length, however, has nothing to do with its size. A one-button glove extends one inch from the base of the hand, a two-button glove two inches, and so on, up to the sixteen-button length which measures sixteen inches.

There are various types of gloves not qualified by length alone. The "slip-on" kind pulls on over the hand with no fastening or opening. This type usually comes in three, four, right up to eight button lengths. A "mousquetaire" glove is a dressy version of sixteen-button length, and has an opening at the wrist, fastened with these small pearl buttons. A "driving glove" has a leather palm, with a stretchy, crochet back.

Fabric gloves come in full or half-sizes from six to eight, while those in leather are measured in full, half and quarter-sizes — also from six to eight. This size is the measurement in inches across the knuckles, of the slightly, bent hand.

Glove seams are either P.K. or half P.K. This means that one edge is lapped over the other, so that only one edge shows. It produces a flat, smooth fit. Cut edges on the outside of the glove, sewn with fine horizontal stitches are called P.K seams. An "inseam" refers to edge and seams that are on the inside, mostly of fabric gloves.

While on the surface, glove manufacturing may look simple, in fact there is basically a great deal of science to it.

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers care of the Ontario Intelligencer Ltd., Belleville Ont.

Choose Cheese

Cookbook No. 16—Recipe No. 1

THE CHEESE COOKBOOK

The true cheese-lover can get pleasure from simply reading about cheese, as a modern device relives excitement from reading a saga. For most of us, however, the joy of cheese is in the tasting. An English gourmet once said that "the only way to learn about cheese is to eat it" and for some 4,000 years of recorded history people have been doing just that. In the Ontario Intelligencer's newest Cooking Magic book — The Cheese Cookbook, you'll find 179 zestful cheese dishes including appetizers, main dishes, salads, desserts, breads. You'll also find tips on handling cheese in cooking, and descriptions of the various kinds of cheese you see in your neighborhood store. Here's one of The Cheese Cookbook recipes — a salad beautiful enough to use as a centrepiece!

MOLDED PINEAPPLE-CHEESE SALAD:

Set out a 2-quart ring mould. Drain, reserving syrup and set aside contents of 1 No. 2½ can chilled, crushed pineapple (about 2 cups, drained). Pour into small bowl ½ cup of reserved pineapple syrup. Sprinkle over it 2 tablespoons (2 env.) unflavored gelatin.

Let gelatin stand about 5 minutes to soften. Add to remainder of reserved syrup, if necessary, to make 1 cup liquid water. Heat until very hot. Remove from heat. Immediately add softened gelatin, stirring until dissolved; ½ cup sugar and ½ teaspoon salt.

Stir in 1 cup unsweetened pineapple juice; 1 cup orange juice; 2-3 drops yellow food colloring. Chill until mixture is slightly thicker than consistency of thick unbeaten egg white. Now lightly oil mold with salad or cooking oil (not olive oil); set aside to drain. Put into a bowl 1 lb. cream cheese.

Add gradually, beating in 3 tablespoons lemon juice and 3 tablespoons grated lemon peel.

When gelatin mixture is of same consistency as cheese mixture, stir several tablespoons of gelatin mixture into cheese mixture. Continue adding gelatin mixture slowly, beating constantly until well blended. Blend in crushed pineapple. Turn mixture into prepared mold. Chill mold until firm, then unmold onto chilled serving plate.

It adds a festive look if you fill the centre of the Salad ring with Honeydew melon balls and garnish the salad with frosted grapes and mint leaves.

When you use cheese you're sure to please. To get your copy —

VoW Will Not Back NDP In Election

By EDNA BLAKELY

OTTAWA (CP)—Two executive members of the Voice of Women say that the New Democratic Party will not receive the organization's official backing in the federal election campaign although the party is the only one which has declared itself unalterably opposed to Canadian acceptance of nuclear warheads.

VoW, which claims a membership of 7,000, holds the same nuclear views.

The group's national president, Mme. Therese Casgrain of Montreal, said members hold differing political views and "it's not up to us to push it (NDP policy) down their throats."

Mme. Casgrain, a former NDP candidate, told a press conference Wednesday it is up to members to study the stands of the four parties. Mrs. Helen Tucker of Port Credit, Ont., co-founder of the movement, said a factsheet outlining the stands of the various parties will be sent to VoW members and election candidates.

NOTES DIFFICULTY

Mrs. Tucker agreed that it might be difficult for a member of the Liberal party to resolve the party's views with the aims of VoW but "it seems that some of them can."

She hoped the "remnants of the Progressive Conservatives might crystalize more firmly."

Around Mr. Diefenbaker? a reporter asked.

"Yes, and Mr. Green," she replied. The group says it receives support for its anti-nuclear program from External Affairs Minister Green.

Mme. Casgrain said many people are disturbed by the polidtics of their clergymen on the nuclear issue.

"I don't want to tell the churches what to do, but there is a contradiction in that we are being taught Christian morality but at the same time being told by some that we must accept implements of mass murder," Mme. Casgrain said.

Mother of Six Spends Her Time Writing Jingles

MONTREAL (CP)—Mrs. Robert Muir, a suburban St. Laurent housewife with six children, spends many of her spare moments composing prize-winning jingles.

The latest two-line jingle she wrote for a shortening company won her a 10-day trip for two in Paris. She beat out 40,000 contestants in the national contest.

In the last two years she has won two bicycles, two watches and a $100 oil painting, all in nation-wide competitions.

"I enjoy it," she said in an interview. "And the beauty of it is that I can do it at home. I get ideas when I'm washing, cleaning and cooking. Sometimes, too, when I'm trying to go to sleep."

She believes in the inspiration of the moment. She wrote the idea for her trip-winning jingle on the back of a blank cheque while riding a bus.

She was born in Toronto, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. E. A. Allcut. Her father is a professor emeritus of the University of Toronto.

The Muirs—her husband is a banker—moved here from Toronto three years ago.

I.O.D.E. Speaks To New Canadians

The classes for new Canadians enjoyed a visit by several ladies of St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. Thursday evening at B.C.I. The ladies were welcomed to the class by the vice-principal of the night school, Mr. Snetsinger. He mentioned the work done by the I.O.D.E. for new Canadians in the field of education.

Mrs. Ellis the I.O.D.E. Regent expressed her desire in aiding new Canadians explaining that these people help build a healthy nation. Mrs. Hume speaking for Mrs. MacDonald, who was unable to attend also expressed the desire of the I.O.D.E. to aid new Canadians. She also gave the students an introduction to what the I.O.D.E. is and what work it does. She thanked Mr. C. Stratton for the invitation to speak to the two classes.

Two fine films were shown. The first was an excellent film on "Why New Canadians Should Become Canadian Citizens". Its name was, "Vote for Michaels". Second was a fine colour film of the R.C.M.P. Musical Ride. Both of these were greatly enjoyed.

While delicious refreshments were being prepared, Mrs. Hume read some comments made by new Canadians after they had become Canadian citizens.

Thanks were expressed to the I.O.D.E. and to Mrs. Stirling and Mr. Snetsinger the principal and vice-principal of the night school at B.C.I. for allowing the I.O.D.E. to speak to the two classes for new Canadians.

A Message for the Girls

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—If a boy asks one girl or two or three to go to a Boy Scout party or something supervised and they refuse down the line, everyone seems to feel they must refuse.

They then wonder why the boys don't ask them out. After a boy runs around the school asking everyone, why should he take a chance and ask again after being refused so much? Boys have feelings too.

I am looking for something in your column on general common sense in this matter. I am a mother of one who refused after four others had. He was a nice boy too.—WORRIED MOTHER.

DEAR WORRIED MOTHER—At fifteen, our pretty birds of a feather flock together. What the crowd does, goes. A little later our fledgling spreads her wings enough to fly alone.

Meanwhile her "crowd psychology" may cause her to miss some good parties and hurt the feelings of more than one fine boy—a boy who may be just as nervous as she is but has summoned the courage to ask for a date.

* * *

DEAR DORIS—I would like information regarding an orphanage.

At present I am in high school, and am interested in this field of work.—SHARON.

DEAR SHARON—There aren't nearly as many orphanages as there used to be, and not nearly so many orphans. Main reason is most parents live much longer than they used to. Modern medicine has wiped out the killers of young adults.

There are other reasons, though, for homes for children: broken marriages, inadequate parents, mental abnormalities. This means that when a child goes to an institution he's upset and there for special help—the kind that can only be given by trained social workers and psychiatrists.

When he has been helped to set his topsy-turvy world back on his feet, he'll move back home or to a foster home. I am sending you my leaflet on the career of social work.

(Do something about your particular human problem. A letter to Doris can get you a new look at it.)

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Suppose you tell a story, a story of great adventure — how a friend walked one day in a forest, lost his way, and cheap waited for nightfall to make flares to light up the sky.

You describe two days and two nights of loneliness, of terror and fear. Finally, you dramatize the escape. Your friend is sighted by a helicopter, which seeks a clearing, lands and brings him back alive. And after this hair-raising story, the man who has been listening all the while without a display of emotion, says:

"There's nothing so unusual about that!"

This man, like many others, is a "so-what-er" — a person who has lost his sense of thrill, of wonder, and surprise. No matter what great or thrilling thing happens, his major reaction is one of "so what!"

The pity of this is that it can happen to anybody. But the striking fact is that the older we get, the more we are subject to the disease of "so-what-itis".

CONTAGIOUS

It is, unhappily, a contagious, communicable disease. If you consort with people who are afflicted by it, we may very well catch it. Yet, there are many cases on record that prove it is a curable malady. One therapy consists of a very simple procedure: just take a walk under the canopy of the skies, making certain all the time to get the fog out of your eyes so that you can see clearly what is really before you.

Unfortunately, there are cases which indicate that some people cannot see the forest because of the trees. Strange to say, there are many people like this — people who get up every morning, dress hurriedly, eat the same breakfast, rush off to work, see the same people, do the same things, and never are aware of the world of beauty that immediately surrounds them.

In the Bible we have the record of a man of a different stripe. He said:

"The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament shows His handiwork. Day unto day expresses His greatness, night unto night makes Him known".

This man knew the beauty and the revival of life, because he knew and was close to the whole world of nature.

But talk to a man who is a prisoner of canyons of steel and stone about some of these things. His answers are of utter emptiness, an emptiness that echoes the hollowness within him. He has lost his sense of wonder and surprise because he is out of touch with God's world and only in touch with his own.

ADVENTUROUS SOUL

Young people have a lot to teach their elders. More than their elders realize. They still have a sense of excitement in their doing because they are filled with the joy of being alive and with the romance of growing and aspiring.

But youth is an attitude of mind as well as a time of life. People grow older. But sometimes they grow down and not up. Growing up means holding on to and keeping alive the spirit of adventure and the thrill of living.

As long as you can still be amazed to your very core over the wonderful simplicities of God's world, you are young despite your years.

The adventurous soul knows how to seek out new reasons for joy in living. The search itself is the adventure. And the sense of gratitude which follows is the fibre which encloses the deeper fulfullments of our spirit.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mrs. W.A.—He must stop overeating. He looks grotesque.

Hal A.—I can't stop. Food is my tranquilizer.

Mrs. W.A. — My son is 22 and has a bookbinding job in a dress factory. I don't know what approach to use on him to get him to take some interest in his health and appearance. He's perfectly content to keep on gaining weight, even though already he's close to 230 pounds and must get his suits at the Fat Boys' Shop.

It doesn't matter in his present job because they hide him away in an alcove where no one sees him. But what about the future? He has hopes of becoming an accountant, and will certainly have to be presentable. And his social life is almost down to zero. Girls don't invite him to their parties, and his one pal left him behind over the holiday weekend because he took up too much room in the car!

Hal A. — I've tried to diet. But when I'm upset the only thing that calms me down is a good meal. And I don't mean that birdseed stuff — lettuce and a bone. I need a couple of sandwiches, a malted, and a sundae before I'm good for anything like a few hours' work, or even a good night's sleep.

Maybe the reason I keep gaining is that I've been particularly upset lately. I failed one part of the last CPA exam and I'm worried about passing a Civil Service test I just applied for. Right now I don't care about my looks. If my friends consider me too unsightly, then let them forget about me for a while. Right now I need peace of mind and I get it from food

* * *

The Council — "De gustibus," said the Romans. "Chaun a son gout," say the French, and "To each his own form of escape," say we, adding, of course, "provided he knows it's escape and not solution."

Hal A. Hal, some choose liquor, some tobacco, some heroin with which to find sweet oblivion. You go for pasta, eclairs, and cheese blintzes to cover you with the gentle peace of stupefaction. But when you can't stop, you have a new worry. You're sick!

diagnosis.

Whenever a person becomes addicted to something harmful, enlightened experts refrain from calling him weak or wicked. They consider him "diseased." With overweight from overeating, they now look for signs of emotional depression. While dieting may be attempted, it often fails because the heavy person is unaware of digestive processes, of appetite, of real hunger. Like Hal, he eats for sedation, to comfort himself. No matter how desperately he tries to exercise self-power, he continues the whirl along to disaster. Unless the disease of food addiction is treated both medically and psychologically the end, as with alcoholism, must be insanity or death.

The good word for Hal is that he can recover from his disease as from others, with the right treatment. There's nothing so alarming about conspicuous addictions a day without substituting better cheerer-uppers. He may prescribe a tranquilizing pill. He may offer, or send Hal to someone else who can offer psychological counselling to get to the root of Hal's depression.

Medical men have actual proof of obesity being self-induced by unhappy people to gain attention, to turn people away, to build a thick wall to hide inside of! Hal can get off that tack fast, with help.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question:—How should birthday and other greeting cards from a husband and wife to their sixties be signed. We have occasion to send cards to our son's friends, some of whom are married and have children. I have always signed "John and Mary Doe," but this seems so young, now that age is creeping up. In speaking to us they always address us as Mr. and Mrs. Doe.—Mrs. C. A. Millborn, N.J.

Answer:—Regardless of age, the signature, "John and Mary Doe," or "Mary and John Doe," is still the only correct one. Use of "Mr. and Mrs. John Doe" as a signature is just as bad form on a card as on a letter. However, it may be used on a special occasion like Christmas. A very formal engraved card may carry the message: "Mr. and Mrs. John Doe wish you a Merry Christmas." It's correct in this instance, since the names are engraved as an integral part of the message and are not a signature.

Question:—I will be attending a wedding soon as a guest, and as a member of the wedding party. Would it be improper to wear a white dress? — R., Kingston, N.Y.

Answer:—No. A wedding guest may wear any color she cares to, including white, as long as the style is suitable to the type of wedding and the time of day.

Question:—I recently attended a dinner given for a Golden Wedding anniversary and the napkins were placed on the right side of the plate. Is this something new? I always thought the napkin should be placed on the left side.—L. S., Hamlet, Ind.

Answer—The napkin is never placed on the right side of a place setting. If the first course is in place before the guests sit down, the napkin is placed to the left of the forks. If the first course is to be served after guests are seated, the napkin is folded on the place plate.

Nuclear Issue Being Used By Liberals to Hide Faults Senator O'Leary Tells Rally

The nuclear question is not an issue in this federal election campaign.

It is only being made an issue by the Liberals in an effort to distract the people of Canada from the misrepresentations and false predictions made by the Liberals in the 1962 election.

This was the claim made yesterday by Senator Grattan O'Leary, of Ottawa, as he spoke at the Hastings-Frontenac nominating convention at Madoc.

Speaking with all the fire and zest which has made him one of the outstanding orators in Canada, the 74-year-old Senator told his audience that Prime Minister Diefenbaker never did make any commitments to the United States regarding the use of nuclear weapons.

"What we did was to enter into certain proposals and understandings based on the circumstances of four years ago."

CHANGE WITH YEARS

"If circumstances change, then does the so-called commitment apply?" he asked.

To illustrate Senator O'Leary pointed out that even United States thinking on defence changes with the years.

Only a few years ago the United States had advised Britain that it would support the Skybolt missiles with which to arm its heavy bomber fleet.

Now Britain is being told to scrap its Vulcan bombers, that the United States could not now supply the Skybolts and that the Polaris missile was the ultimate in defence.

"But Britain can't have the submarines to fire the Polaris missile and it will take her five years to build them", Senator O'Leary said.

So there is no such thing as commitments. Defence concepts change from time to time, from year to year.

"That is all there is to the Bomarc", he asserted.

SAID INEFFECTIVE

The speaker said however that the stand which the Diefenbaker government took regarding the Bomarc with nuclear warheads did not apply to NATO.

Mr. Diefenbaker has agreed that Canada's overseas troops would be armed as other occupation troops are armed.

Bomarc missiles were entirely different. Even the best military brains say that Bomarc missiles — with or without warheads — are ineffective.

General Guy Simonds was quoted as saying that the Bomarc was useless as far as defence is concerned.

"The aim of the Liberals and the N.D.P. party is merely to confuse the issue with the Bomarc so their own records will not be examined," claimed the Senator.

He admitted that the duty of the opposition was to criticize but said that in all decency Mr. Pearson should have waited until the government was able to bring in its budget.

GIVES REASON

The reason Mr. Pearson did not wait was that he was fearful of a favorable budget and because of the fact that the truth was beginning to come out about the Liberal falsehoods during the last election.

The Liberal attitude had been that "if we are to beat them at all, we must beat them now."

"The real issue of the election is not nuclear warheads but "whom can we trust", stated Senator O'Leary.

"If we cannot trust public men, then representative government has no meaning at all."

The Liberals have been branded as ruin mongers and their prophecies have been proven false, he said.

Proof of this Mr. O'Leary said was that Canadians were enjoying a better standard of living than ever before and despite unemployment more people were working at better salaries than ever before.

SCHOOLS NEEDED

He admitted that Canada had more unemployment than it should but said that because of climatic conditions this country had to expect some seasonal unemployment.

Also, he pointed out, unemployment was largely among the unskilled workers, and "until we can train, the workers we will continue to have unemployment."

Vocational training schools were needed to train workers in this respect Canada was doing more than any other country in the world. The Diefenbaker government had provided more than $300,000,000 in building training schools, he concluded.

Senator O'Leary was introduced by riding candidate Rod Webb and was thanked by Keith Brown, MLA for Peterborough.

Socred Leader Blasts Pearson For Obstruction

RED DEER, Alta. (CP)—Social Credit Leader Thompson says that Liberal Leader Pearson had never indicated a desire to co-operate in passing legislation in the last Parliament.

"All that the Liberal party proved was that it was prepared to cancel a Parliament and interrupt the government of the country any time it saw fit for the sake of party advantage," he said Wednesday night.

"People like that are not fit to govern the country."

When any political leader stood up and said Social Credit is inaficere and irresponsible he was casting a reflection on his own party.

Mr. Thompson told his nominating convention that Mr. Pearson's only objective was to overthrow the government.

In reply to Mr. Pearson's statements that a vote for Social Credit was a vote for the Conservative party, Mr. Thompson said: "This election is a fight between the Social Credit and Liberal parties."

The Social Credit leader said he will debate election issues with candidates of other parties in his Red Deer riding. He did not announce the dates.

Some Russians Stay in Cuba

NEW YORK (AP)—The Soviet Union is understood to have informed the United States that it intends to retain indefinitely in Cuba a certain military force after the withdrawal soon of several thousand troops, the New York Times news service says today.

A Washington dispatch by Ted Smith said "the impression here is that the Russians will withdraw as many as 7,000 troops within the next couple of weeks. This would leave about 10,000—Soviet military men in Cuba."

Who Should Pick Election Candidates, Brass or Grass?

OTTAWA (CP)—A rip-snorting fight among Liberal supporters in Ottawa East has focussed the spotlight on a long-standing debate in Canadian politics: Should election candidates be picked by the "brass" or the "grass"?

In other words, should the choice be exercised by the party's officers and organizers, or by the party faithful at the constituency level through an open nominating convention?

The first method had been dying out in recent federal elections, but it is being used in scores of ridings for the April 8 election.

The 35 incumbent Liberal MPs from Quebec were given letters by party headquarters earlier this month saying they had the right to run for re-election without going through conventions. Quebec Conservatives likewise have a tradition of nominating their incumbent MPs without calling a general meeting of the constituency association. Conservatives held 14 Quebec seats before dissolution.

Organizers for the Conservative, Liberal and Social Credit parties interviewed in a survey said they will dispense with conventions in several other ridings because of a combination of special circumstances this year.

The New Democratic Party organizers said they do not recall a single instance where the "grass roots" were bypassed since the party, was launched in 1961. But several NDP conventions have been postponed this year because of low attendance and four 1962 nominating conventions were scheduled jointly.

The Ottawa East dispute between Feb. 12 when eight members of the Liberal executive voted to endorse veteran MP J. T. Richard as official candidate without bothering to call a convention.

Three other members of the executive, led by treasurer Yves Latreille, voted against the proposal and then resigned in protest. The 12th director was absent.

The dissidents have formed a committee and plan their own nominating convention March 7. The party's national headquarters has taken a hands-off attitude.

Liberal, Conservative and Social Credit candidates will be appointed by national or provincial party headquarters in many large, remote constituencies. Organizers attribute this to poor weather and travel conditions.

A Social Credit spokesman offered another reason for dispensing with conventions: "When the local organization is terribly weak."

Smiles of confidence are seen on the faces of Progressive Conservatives following nominating convention at Madoc yesterday. Guest speaker, Senator Grattan O'Leary (centre) talks with Rod A. Webb (right) again candidate for Hastings-Frontenac and association president Jack Kincaid of Madoc.

Hastings-Frontenac PCs Give Enthusiastic Backing To Rod Webb as Candidate

MADOC — Member in the last two parliaments, Rod A. Webb, Norwood electrical appliance dealer, was the unanimous choice of Hastings-Frontenac Progressive Conservatives at their nominating convention held at the Madoc Armouries Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Webb was the only man nominated as riding candidate and received a standing ovation from the packed armouries as he took the stand to accept the acclamation.

"Right up from the bottom of my heart", he told his supporters.

In accepting the nomination, Mr. Webb told riding Conservatives that as their candidate he was dedicated to a great man.

PRAISES DIEFENBAKER

"I am dedicated to a man with the foresight of John A. Macdonald and with the courage of Sir Winston Churchill, I am dedicated to this man, Prime Minister Diefenbaker", he said.

Canada ever has, the Hon. John Diefenbaker.

Eulogizing to the dissolution of parliament and the calling of a new election, Mr. Webb said this had been caused by the Liberals in the "most disgraceful action of any political party in Ottawa".

And he said this disgraceful action by the Liberals would be enlarged on during the campaign in their lust for power. But Prime Minister had pleaded with the Liberal party to allow parliament to continue at least until the end of February when the new budget would be brought in.

"But in fear of a favorable budget, the Liberals refused to co-operate" the speaker said.

COUNTRY PROSPEROUS

Mr. Webb went on to say that the Progressive Conservative party had a "great story" to tell the people of Canada.

Production was up 26 per cent, exports were up 30 per cent and 700,000 more people were working than five years ago.

"In addition payments to the provinces had been increased by 124 per cent and subsidies production was up by 63 per cent. And 100,000 persons had been taken off the lowest tax roll, resulting in $168,000,000 less in income taxes being collected by the government.

"With a record such as this, is it any wonder that the Liberals wanted an election before it was too late," Mr. Webb asked.

Mr. Webb bitterly accused the press and radio for failing to co-operate in telling this story to the people of Canada.

Instead, he said, the press had made much mileage out of the Progressive Conservative cabinet resignations, but at the same time failing to state that even more Liberals and NDPs had resigned than had Conservatives.

ASKS FAIR FIGHT

"All we ask is that the opposition come out and fight fairly and square and once again win," he concluded.

Association president Jack Kincaid said that he was pleased to see the big turnout for the nominating convention.

"It gives us the courage we need, but then I am not a gloom and doom man," he said.

"With your support I am sure that we can elect our candidate for Hastings-Frontenac back at Ottawa."

Other speakers heard briefly at the convention included Madoc Reeve Tom Burnside who, in welcoming delegates, put in a plug for, his home town merchants; Hastings County Warden Charles Long; Clarke T. Rollins, M.P.P. for Hastings East; Keith Hall, M.P.P. for Peterborough; Fred Stinson, former M.P. for Peterborough, and Kay Sexsmith, provincial Progressive Conservative headquarters.

For the first time in many years, Senator George White, former member of parliament for the riding, did not attend the nominating convention.

Association president Jack Kincaid explained that Senator White, as speaker of the Senate, could not take part in election campaigns.

Guest speaker for the nominating convention was Senator Grattan O'Leary of Ottawa.

He is looking for a manual or information about the car or the company that built it—the Loomis Car Company, formerly of Westfield, Conn.—and hopes to restore the car.

NDP Would Aid Farmers Says Douglas

BEAUSEJOUR, Man. (CP) — T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, promises that an NDP government would help farmers set up their own business enterprises.

A co-operative development fund would "enable farmers to own and operate processing and packaging plants of their own" and to handle farm products.

Mr. Douglas outlined the party plank Wednesday night to nominating convention in the Springfield riding.

Excerpts of his speech were released to the press in advance of delivery.

The farmer - owned plants would work alongside consumer co-operatives, Mr. Douglas said.

Processors of farm products, he said, "made a killing" from 1958 to 1961. Profits after taxes in the food and beverage processing industries in this period rose from $81,000,000 to $130,000,000.

The farmers' share of the consumer dollar for beef, pork, potatoes and some other products between 1951 and 1958 declined. At the same time the housewife "failed to benefit" from lower prices paid to the farmer. The - processors made the money.

USES LITTLE WOOD

The average consumption of industrial wood in Africa is less than one-fifth of the world average.

Grim Choice Facing West On Test Ban

GENEVA (AP)—British and U.S. disarmament negotiators seemed to have a grim choice today between unacceptable Soviet terms for a nuclear test ban or failure after four years of negotiations.

Despite the Soviet stand, British and American spokesmen said their governments would persevere with their efforts in the 17-nation disarmament negotiations. They said they thought agreement still was possible.

The external evidence pointed the other way.

The Soviet terms for a test ban are simple: A maximum of three on-site inspections per year to check on indications of underground nuclear explosions and three sealed seismograph recorders — black boxes — on Soviet territory.

Premier Khrushchev told a Kremlin audience Wednesday "nothing more can be expected from us."

The British and U.S. governments consider three inspections and three black boxes totally inadequate to provide a foolproof check on the vast territory of the Soviet Union. The Western powers have demanded a minimum of seven of each.

The Soviet Union has not given an inch in this argument since the talks resumed on Feb. 12.

Liberals Defend Hockey Player Against Charge

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal party headquarters replied Wednesday to Real Caouette's charge that hockey star Red Kelly, an Liberal MP for York West in the last Parliament, merely sat in the Commons "with his arms and legs crossed and doesn't say a word."

The Liberal statement referred to press files on the deputy Social Credit leader, who made the remark about Mr. Kelly at Kirkland Lake Tuesday night.

It said the files show that Mr. Caouette, in announcing an extensive speaking tour the day before Parliament opened last Sept. 24, had said his Commons attendance record would probably be worse than that of any other member. It said he had added that "elections are not won in the House of Commons."

PCs Will Launch All-Out Campaign Against Socreds In Quebec Says Organizer

QUEBEC (CP)—The Progressive Conservative party will launch an all-out campaign against Social Credit in Quebec province in the April 8 election campaign, the chief Quebec organizer, Jacques Flynn, says.

"We will have no mercy on Social Credit. There will be no equivocation, no complicity, no alliance and no sympathy," he told a press conference Wednesday night.

Senator Flynn and Transport Minister Leon Balcer openly disagreed at the conference on whether all Progressive Conservative candidates should necessarily back Prime Minister Diefenbaker's nuclear policy.

When asked about a statement by Peter Kerrigan, PC candidate in Montreal St. Antoine-Westmount that he disagrees with Mr. Diefenbaker's nuclear policy, Senator Flynn said it was unimportant that there should be differences of opinion.

SAME AS HARKNESS?

How would he the same as Harkness (former defence minister Douglas Harkness who resigned from the cabinet over disagreement with government nuclear policy) then," Senator Flynn said. "The difference between us and the Liberals is that they hide their differences."

Mr. Balcer then interjected: "Just a minute. This is very important. All the candidates under our banner must have the same attitude."

"What about Harkness?" Senator Flynn asked. "Harkness is running as an independent Conservative," Mr. Balcer replied.

Senator Flynn said nuclear arms would be a more important issue than first anticipated in the province of Quebec.

"The Liberal party is the only one in favor of nuclear arms. I have no doubt that we will be arguing that a vote for the Liberals is a vote for nuclear arms," he said.

CANADIAN STABILITY

He added the Progressive Conservative party has much more reason than the Liberal party to declare itself the only party that can bring Canada stability.

"We need only 15 to 17 seats to achieve a clear majority while the Liberals need 34," Senator Flynn said.

Mr. Balcer denounced Social Credit's record in the last Parliament on biculturalism as "a fraud."

"All they did was have a menu and a blackboard changed in the parliamentary cafeteria and to get a translation of Beauchesne (a book of parliamentary rules and procedures)."

Soviet Union Has Trouble Trying to Thaw Out Chinese

By CARMAN CUMMING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Soviet Union, claiming success in reviving two ambassadors after a 5,000 - year deep freeze in Siberia, apparently is having more trouble in trying to thaw out Mao Tse-tung.

The Chinese Communist party, which Mao heads, Wednesday in effect named its conditions for entering into a conference table to discuss ideological differences.

The terms are stiffly worded, virtually demanding that Premier Khrushchev crawl to Peking with an olive branch in his teeth, begging forgiveness all the way.

This seems as unlikely as the idea of the resurrected ambassadors, which cropped up in the literary moaning Nova and was "utterly refuted" Wednesday by a leading Soviet scientist.

The possibility remains that Peking, finding one down in the polemics competition, wanted a think final innings before settling down to conciliation.

READY FOR MEETING

Regarding Moscow's Feb. 10 proposal for bilateral talks leading up to a broader Communist-world conference, the Chinese leadership declared willingness to hold such talks and said it had "never refused" to do so.

But it made "clear that the list of complaints at any such meeting would be long and bitter, they included:

1. Russia's refusal to back China in the border dispute with India and its sending of MiG jet fighters to India;

2. An allegation that Russia "perfidiously and unilaterally" tore up hundreds of aid agreements with China in 1960;

3. Russian support of Communist Albania and acceptance of the "renegade Tito clique" of Yugoslavia.

4. Soviet actions in the Cuban crisis of last fall, which China regarded as defeatist;

5. Russian opposition to the China's agricultural communes and its "great leap forward" industrial plan.

How Khrushchev will react to this indictment is anyone's guess. He has shown himself capable of holding his temper when the stakes are high, but in this case his tolerance will certainly be strained to the utmost.

DREW MEETS HOME

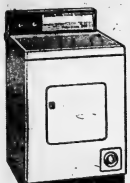
LONDON (Reuters) — Canadian High Commissioner George Drew talks Wednesday with Foreign Secretary Lord Home on "general world affairs," a foreign office spokesman said. The meeting, which lasted 30 minutes, was at the Canadian envoy's request.



The season opens tomorrow, in this district on lake, brown and speckled trout. Many fishermen have been trying ready for the past week. In the picture, Harry Hall of Belleville is making a tip-up to hold lines for fishing through the ice. Bill Bittle, Wildlife Manager Officer with the Department of Lands and Forests, inspects one already completed. This is the first year in which trout season has opened in March; previously the starting date was the first of May.

Plant Life Could Reveal Unknown Mineral Deposits

By JOHN E. BIRD

OTTAWA (CP)—The keen appetite of plant life for minerals is being used by the Geological Survey of Canada in an effort to develop the basis of a new, reliable method of searching for ore bodies.

Scientists hope the project will lead eventually to effective application by Canadian mining companies of the relatively new science of biogeochemical prospecting.

This method relies on the ability of trees and other forms of plant life to absorb abnormal amounts of minerals from rock and soil in areas with a high ore potential. If such plant life is systematically collected and carefully analyzed, the results can indicate the possibility of a buried ore deposit.

The Geological Survey, a branch of the federal mines and technical surveys department, has hired a 25-year-old British - born biogeochemist to head the project.

Dr. John A. C. Fortescue, a graduate of Oxford and the University of British Columbia, was selected for the job because no biogeochemists were available in Canada. He is the only member of the profession in the federal public service.

PIONEERED AT UBC

Dr. Fortescue and Dr. R. W. Boyle, head of the geochemistry section of the Geological Survey, now are engaged in the preparation of a greenhouse and other research and analytical facilities in an attempt to evolve a simple method of examining plants to determine whether minerals lie below them.

The attempt to develop an effective method of biogeochemical prospecting, follows pioneer research by Dr. H. V. Warren of UBC. Dr. Warren and his co-workers demonstrated several years ago the feasibility of this form of prospecting under Canadian conditions.

He also follows a recent visit by Dr. Boyle to the Soviet Union where he inspected work at geochemical research centres. He found that in biogeochemistry the Russians lead the world in amount of basic research and scope of practical applications being studied.

Biochemistry is a complicated branch of science dealing with the amount and distribution of chemical elements in plants and animals.

NEEDS CHEMICAL BASE

"The best way to explain to the layman the application of this branch of science to prospecting is to visualize that you're sitting around a camp fire in the woods," Dr. Fortescue said in an interview.

"Suddenly you notice the green because it contains a trace of copper. You remember where you cut the log and you dig down and find a rich copper deposit.

"From a scientific point of view you could be said to have carried out a successful experiment in biogeochemistry."

Dr. Fortescue's first job will be to set up a method for rapid determination of the chemical composition of ash obtained from plants growing in areas thought to contain minerals. This will be done by a spectrographic method which involves the analysis of light emitted from a small sample of plant ash when it is boiled in an electric arc.

Amounts of metal found in plant ash are extremely small. For every 1,000,000 parts of ash the normal amount of copper is only 100 parts.

However, in the vicinity of a copper deposit the copper content of plant ash may increase 100 times due to extra copper being taken up by the plant through its root system and becoming incorporated in the plant tissues.

"This principle forms the basis of present biogeochemical methods of prospecting which can be used for other chemical elements—just how many is not known at present."

ABSORPTION VARIES

Dr. Fortescue's second task will be to establish tables showing normal amounts of chemical elements taken up by plant life in various parts of Canada. This information is necessary to determine whether amounts of minerals found in plants are sufficiently high to indicate the possibility of a buried ore deposit.

A third aspect of the project will involve the growing of plants in soils containing known concentrations of chemical elements added to them. These experiments will be carried out in a greenhouse located on the roof of the Geological Survey building here.

The results of this basic research should enable Dr. Fortescue to determine the degree to which various gtypes of trees to which various types of trees draw from the earth. It also should determine how long it takes a certain species of plant life at different agea to absorb normal and abnormal amounts of minerals.

This basic information is essential for biogeochemical prospecting. The birch tree, for instance, may contain a fairly high percentage of zinc under normal conditions. But if a similar amount were found in alder ash it would be abnormal, possibly indicating a buried zinc deposit.

Dr. Fortescue said biogeochemical prospecting may prove invaluable eventually in muskeg and similar areas where normal methods of prospecting are difficult. It would be much simpler to examine the plant life growing in such areas to determine whether minerals lie under the muskeg.

MUSICIAN SENTENCED

LONDON (Reuters)—United States jazz trumpeter Chesney (Chet) Baker, 33, was sentenced Tuesday to a month's imprisonment and recommended for deportation on dope charges. Baker denied the charges of procuring heroin and cocaine without authority and making a false statement to a doctor to obtain prescriptions for the drugs.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

"Tommorow," quoth the rugged weather-scorned resident of the northern fishing and hunting haunts, "marks the opening of the speckled, lake shed brown trout season. Leave the rainbows alone, you fan! touch them until May 1st.

"Tomorrow and the following days," he went on, stroking a frost-rimed moustache, "will also prove a testing time for you anglers of the banana belt. I should prove whether you are stout-hearted and unafraid of the elements—or gaggle of warm weather sissies who like to laze in the afternoon sunshine."

Reports from the northern haunts of the elusive trout indicate that we banana-belters come as tough as any of the northern breed. A Lands and Forests Department official said this morning that a large number of "southern anglers" have been readying northern lake cottages and cabins for the event.

Hotels and motels have been well booked but the tourist record is said to have been opened.

Some northern residents have acquired "skidoos," while Jim McCarthy, a Pi'ewa hotel owner, has an army "bombardier." This is a track job which can wheel ten passengers to their fishing destinations. McCarthy is solidly booked for nearly a week.

It's going to be tough going before the Waltons reach the ice-shackled trout lakes. They'll need climb hill and dale, through snowbank and snowdrift and across snow-covered fields. The snow is deep and while most main roads are open the byways are plugged. Skidoos for hire will help.

It will be open-fishing for the trout seekers since there are no fish-huts on the trout lakes. Some are apparent on the pickerel waters.

"Tell your southern gentlemen to dress warmly and travel light when on safari to the trout grounds," advised the northern sage. "Leave the Bikinis and suntan oil at home and go heavy on the underwear and wind-proof clothing."

"There'll be no balmy southern breezes wafting across the icy surfaces of the trout refrigerators and as far as that goes there will be little shelter from the elements unless the anglers are cottage or cabin-housed fishermen."

He suggested large pieces of canvas as windbreaks for those who will junket overland to the lakes. "And," he added, "the addition of a professional post-hole digger to each party might be a good idea. Picking a hole through two feet of solid ice, won't be easy for the average angler.

Was there any way of knowing if the trout will be biting?

Bushy eyebrows lowered over twinkling eyes. "Let's say that certain indications point to the possibility that the trout will rise to the winter bait," he said. "No further questions, please."

All waters in the Tweed district of the Lands and Forests Department except those where there are "open season" for brook (speckled), brown and lake trout tomorrow. The limit of catch is ten pounds, plus one trout at 12 trout whichever is the lesser for brooks and browns—and five for lake trout.

And a special request to trout fishermen comes from the officials of the Lands and Forests Department.

"Do not cut trees or brush along the shorelines of lakes and leave them on the ice. Crown property must not be tampered with. Care should be taken when fishing offshore from private property that as little is left. Anglers should see to it bottles, cans, garbage, etc., are removed, particularly from spots near the shorelines," said an official.

Trout Fishermen Warned

Watch Roads, Ice Hazards

The Tweed district Lands and Forest headquarters feels the opening of the trout (all but rainbows, that is) season tomorrow. For many anglers it will be a new experience and Conservation Officer Bob Ramsbottom of the Bancroft Ranger Division would like to remind the fishermen of the hazards of travelling on ice over district lakes.

He says that recent aircraft patrols have revealed a particularly large number of "air holes" in the ice. These holes through the ice varying in degrees of size, are caused ferentially currents or springs that bring the warmer waters to the surface. They are also influenced by an early snowfall which provides insulation against severe winter temperatures.

Air holes become more evident during February and March and they become more hazardous when the air holes become snow clogged and hard to detect, Bob says. This was apparent when a Bancroft trapper related his experience in falling through such a hole recently while snowshoeing on Echo Lake.

Snow conditions are such that travel by car off ploughed roads is impossible. Most of the Tweed district has over 20 inches of soft snow and fishermen will find the going tough even with snowshoes or power toboggans.

Pepsi's, Joyce-Rollins Score Wins

City Playoffs All Square

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Pepsi's and Joyce-Rollins Combines forced the City Hockey League semi-finals to third and deciding games with victories over Trudeaus and Welbanks before a fair crowd at Memorial Arena last night.

Dave Jones and Billy McGuire sparked Pepsi's to a 5-3 decision over Trudeau Motors in the first game of the evening.

Jackie Elliott, with the top individual performance of the night, led Joyce-Rollins to a 4-2 win over Welbanks Motors, in the nightcap.

Both series will be completed next Wednesday night in the final double-header of the year, Welbanks and Joyce-Rollins clashing at 7.45, Pepsi's and Trudeaus at 9.15.

League finals, for the Checker Taxi Trophy, will commence the following week between first Wednesday's two winners.

PEPSI'S 5 — TRUDEAUS 3

Pepsi's led 3-1 after one period and 3-2 after two in a contest that was anybody's game until the 13.54 mark of the third when the winners opened up a 5-3 lead. Trudeaus did come back at that and both clubs were going full tilt at the final whistle.

Billy McGuire and Dave Jones triggered two goals apiece to lead Pepsi's attackers. Wayne "Wiener" Waite also turned in a good two-way game and scored the other goal. John "Shaker" Baker drew two assists with a spicee for Chuck Rowbotham, Doug Murray, George Jacklin, John Trendell, and Doug Moreau.

"Pug" Keilar and Gary Goyer picked up a goal and assist, each for Trudeaus while Jerry Mann also scored. Ed Pista and Gerry Jones drew assists.

Referees Phil Scarrow and Jean-Paul Lamarande dished out four penalties per team, including fighting majors to Doug Bay and Baker.

Jones gave Pepsi's a brief 1-0 lead after just 36 seconds of play in the opening bout, fooling Barclay with a backhander off a rebound. Keilar tied it for Trudeaus less than a minute later, rapping another rebound into the open side of the net.

Waite tallied the final goal of the period at 5.45 when Barclay never laid a glove on his close-in shot to the crease. Goyer made it 3-2 with the clunk playing five aside at 8.30 of the middle frame. He was spun around in front of Carr's cage but still got his shot away and tumbled it just inside the post.

Jones put Pepsi's in front to stay at 10.44, swooping in to drive home Baker's rebound, after a good save by Barclay. McGuire added one at 4.57 of the third, skirting a group of players before sinking a low backhander, then made it 5-2 when he broke away from a Trudeau power play and put it between Barclay's pads at 13.54. Mann's blueline shot deflected past Carr off a Pepsi's player at 16.17.

Pepsi's — Carr, Brooks, Murray, Moreau. Skelly, Rowbotham, McGuire, Trendell, D. Jones, Waite, Baker, Marcle, Jacklin, Cornell.

JOYCE-ROLLINS 4
WELBANKS 2

With Elliott doing the scoring, young Bobby Moore turning in another strong game in the nets and the entire club forechecking hard all night, the Combines were never behind in this one.

The winners led 2-0 after one period and 3-1 after forty minutes. Welbanks cut the lead to two early in the third, but Joyce-Rollins got their fourth when Welbanks closed the scoring.

Jack Elliott scored three of the Joyce-Rollins goals and made the play that set up the fourth one. Jim Sheridan had a goal and assist, Larry Mavety two assists and Hyalie Bryant one.

Bill Vesterfelt and Floyd Crawford triggered the Welbanks' attack with goals, including Gary Reid getting single assists.

The winner drew four of the game's five penalties, including a misconduct to Jim Rutherford. Both clubs toured the body hard and often from the start of the second period on but referees Carr and Lamarande were ready to flare at any given moment, never quite made it.

Elliott scored his first goal from a scramble in front of Bobby Green at 4.13 of the first and Sheridan's tip-in at 11.58 made it 2-0. Elliott did his own work for the only goal of the second period, working in nicely before sinking a low sizzler at 2.27.

Moon, with a good support, held on to his shutout until 5.20 of the third when Vesterfelt's shot got away from him and fell in during a scramble in the crease.

Elliott broke away all by himself to make it 4-1 at 11.09 while Crawford executed a good solo rush to end the scoring for Welbanks at 16.13.

Failure to score by the big line of Brown, Ethier and Muirhead, aided by Gill and Crawford on power plays, played a major part in Welbank's setback.

EARMARK FUNDS

BONN (Reuters)—West Germany will earmark an extra 2,000,000 marks (£500,000) for the purchase of British arms and equipment in the next financial year to compensate for spending that much less than its quota in the current year, the British embassy announced. The West German delegation accepted this arrangement Wednesday night at Anglo-West German economic talks in Munich.

Senior Curl Title Won By Toronto

HAMILTON (CP) — Roy H. Smith of Toronto captured the 30th annual Ontario seniors curling championship Wednesday with an 11-9 victory over A. J. Parkhill of Oshawa.

Defending seniors champion Dr. J. H. Duff of Toronto captured the secondary event by whipping Henry McLare of Brookline, Mass., 11-3 in the final for the Doolittle Memorial Trophy.

The third award, the Dofasco Trophy, went to A. R. Tarlton of Hamilton after a 9-4 victory over Bill Jepson of Brantford. Eddie Howard of Burlington took the McMurtry Memorial Trophy, defeating 85-year-old Dr. A. E. Walkey of Hamilton 12-4.

Organizers of the competition and officials of the curling association plan to go to Brandon, Man., site of next week's Dominion men's championships, to promote a Canadian championship series for senior curlers similar to those for men, women and high school competitors.

Parkhill reached the final by defeating C. A. Harris of Weston 5-2.

In the Doolittle Trophy, Dr. Duff defeated A. E. Pequegnat's Kitchener rink 10-9 in the semi-finals. McLure beat A. T. Pollock of Galt 9-5.

Jepson went into the Dofasco Trophy final after winning by default over S. B. Williams of Oakville, who died Tuesday night. Tarlton defeated C. Burton's Guelph rink 12-9.

Coach Rudy Pilous takes a loss philosophically.

He can afford to, of course, with his Chicago Black Hawks headed for what is almost certain to be their best National Hockey League season.

"Our guys had a cushion and thought they could sleep on it," Pilous shrugged after Chicago's 8-3 drubbing by Toronto Maple Leafs Wednesday night.

"They need ammunition like this to wake them up."

The first - place Hawks have 74 points, a seven-point edge over the Leafs with 10 games remaining in the schedule. Chicago's best performance for a full season is 75 points, scored in both 1960-61 and 1961-62 when they finished third.

Wednesday night's encounter was a triumph for Toronto's Frank Mahovlich, who returned after a one-game injury layoff to score two goal and assist on three others. His linemate, Ron Stewart, scored twice.

BATTLERS EJECTED

Apart from that, the 14,128 fan made the most noise over a second period battle between Toronto's Kent Douglas and Chicago's Reg Fleming that got both players thrown out of the game. It started when referee John Ashley sent them both off with minor penalties for slashing.

There was more pushing and shoving as they headed for the penalty box then Douglas turned around as they entered the gate and punched Fleming in the face.

They piled into each other behind the penalty bench and were tagged with misconducts. When they moved back on the ice and continued the fight they were given game misconducts.

The penalties carry automatic fines of $25 and $50 each.

Fleming, who holds an NHL record for most penalty minutes in a single game, came fairly close to matching his own mark of 27 minutes. He and Toronto's Bob Baun were assessed major penalties earlier in the second period for fighting. Fleming's total penalty time for the game was 23 minutes.

BIG M SCORES

Mahovlich started the scoring early in the first period while Chicago was short-handed and Eric Nesterenko tied it, pushing the puck under goaltender Johnny Bower after beating two Leaf defencemen.

Dick Duff gave Toronto a 2-1 lead with a long slap shot before the period ended.

Tim Horton broke into the clear early in the second, while Chicao had a man advantage, and faked Chicago goalie Glenn Hall to make it 3-1. Murray Balfour counted for Hawks midway through the second.

The third period was all Toronto's, with the exception of a 35-foot goal by Chicago's Stan Mikita who hit the corner on a partially screened shot.

Stewart, Bob Pulford and Stewart again scored for Leafs. Mahovlich was credited with assists on all three.

Pilous said he hopes to have the injured Bobby Hull back in action for Chicago's Sunday game against Montreal, but Santam - sized defenceman Pierre Pilote was "still a question mark."

Frontenacs Defeat St. Paul 3-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kingston Frontenacs have moved into sole possession of first place in the Eastern Professional Hockey League by means of sheer effort.

They blasted St. Paul Saints goalie Jacques Marcotte with 72 shots Wednesday night in a one-sided interlocking games at Kingston with the International League club. The Frontenacs won 3-1 and took a two-point first-place lead over Hull-Ottawa Canadiens.

Marcotte allowed a goal in each period, but pulled off nearly unbelievable saves to keep Kingston from making a rout of the game.

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cleland Morton scored four goals and Pete Conacher got three as Hershey Bears whipped Cleveland Barons 12-4 Wednesday night to take over first place in the American Hockey League's eastern division.

In the other AHL games of the night, Pittsburgh Hornets and Quebec Aces battled to a 3-1 overtime tie.

Until the 16th minute of the first period the game at Hershey was a fine contest, with Conacher's opening goal having been matched by Cleveland's Fred Hilts at the 15:27 mark.

But starting just 20 seconds later the Bears strode with a lightning attack for four goals in four minutes, 28 seconds to turn the game into a rout. Morton got the first two of the four.

Centre Willie Marshall, who scored one goal and assisted on four others, took over first place in the league's individual scoring race with 77 points. Hershey's other goals were scored by Yves Locas, Ed Mahoney, Dick Meissner and Les Duff.

Cleveland's other tallies were made by Hank Ciesla, Charles Stearns, and Jim Mikol.

The deciding 4 Pittsburgh broke a nine-game losing streak for the Hornets.

Quebec struck back at 12:20 on a 40-footer by Jean Marc Cosette to tie the game.

Big Seven

Stan Mikita of the Black Hawks scored one goal and broke a tie with Howe, for the scoring lead. Mikita now has 22 goals and 55 assists for 66 points, while Howe, has 34 assists to go with his 31 goals for 65 points, three ahead of Mahovlich.

Jean Beliveau of Montreal Canadiens, who has a league-leading total of 44 assists along with 15 goals dropped to eighth place.

OTTAWA (CP)—Players of Hull-Ottawa Canadiens have gone to become salesmen in an effort to drum up more support for the Eastern Professional Hockey League team.

General manager Sam Pollock has written to more than 2,500 firms, organizations and fans appealing for support at the gate.

Specifically, he says in the letter, "we are asking our friends to purchase for tickets for the games of March 8 (against St. Louis) and March 15 (against Port Huron), two special dates for which we hope there will be an all-out support for the club.

"I am taking the liberty, accordingly of sending a player or official from our organization to call on you in the near future. . . ."

Pollock has already warned fans that unless attendance improves, the team may be withdrawn from the area.

"This is very disturbing to us," he says, "... particularly in view of the fact that we are the symbol of becoming a participant in a major league, involving cities like Kansas City, St. Louis, Fort Wayne, Minneapolis - St. Paul, Cincinnati and Indianapolis, and to create a league of this calibre would be of significant advantage, from an economic viewpoint, to the city of Ottawa."

German Led Compulsory Figures

CORTINA, Italy (CP)—Don McPherson of Stratford, Ont., was tied for second place after the first six compulsory school figures today in the world men's singles figure - skating championships.

McPherson, 17, the Canadian and North American champion, scored 161.2 points to tie for second place with Karol Divin of Czechoslovakia.

West Germany's Manfred Schnelldorfer led the pack with 162.8 points in the unofficial scoring.

David Ld Knight of Dundas, Ont., was in sixth place with 149.8 points.

Three countries — Canada, West Germany and Russia—were in contention for the spectacular pairs competition.

Squared off against Canada and West Germany—two countries that have dominated pairs skating since its inception as a world event in 1908—was the Soviet Union, hungry for its first world figure skating title of any sort.

The Soviet husband-wife team of Oleg and Ludmilla Protopopov provided a tactical advantage of a late start in the skating order—ninth in the field of 10.

The pre-meet favorites, Marika Kilius and Hans - Jurgen Baumler of West Germany, faced the disadvantage of a low position in the pairs competition number three—just ahead of Canada's top remaining team, Vivienne Desjardins and Maurice LaFrance.

The Protopopovs were second in the 1962 world championships at Prague, Czechoslovakia. Last year's champions, Maria and Otto Jelinek of Canada, have turned professional.

Another pro skater, who also had the number three position at Prague, dropped out of that contest after a terrific spill. But earlier this month they scored an impressive victory over the Protopopovs in the European championships in Budapest, Hungary.

Debbi Wilkes and Guy Revell, the Canadian and North American champions who came here as top hopes for Canada, were out of the running. Miss Wilkes suffered a head injury in a fall on the ice Monday.

But Miss Desjardins and LaFrance were rated capable of continuing Canada's five-year winning streak among world pairs.

WERE JUST BEHIND

Only two 20-year-olds from Toronto finished just behind Wilkes-Revell in the Canadian and North American championships this year.

The other Canadian twosome in the pairs competition is that of 15-year-old Linda Ann Ward and Neil Carpenter, 18, the Canadian junior champions. They have drawn the first starting spot.

The field was reduced to 12 late Wednesday night when Austrian Erika Pinna Diana Hinko and Bernhard Ennshapel were disclined. Miss Hinko reinjured a knee during final practice.

NHL Expans'on

Patrick Says West Ready

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lynn Patrick says the west coast is ready for major league hockey and he would like to see the National Hockey League form a western division.

Patrick, owner - manager of Boston Bruins of the NHL, said Vancouver could be left out of such a division unless it gets a major league building.

Here on a scouting trip, Patrick said the alternative to NHL expansion would be the formation of a west coast major league "but I'd personally like to see a western division of the NHL because it would give our league more national character."

Patrick said San Francisco and Los Angeles are ready for major hockey and that Seattle and Portland would be logical additions.

He said NHL expansion would hinge on a national television contract.

"It's the only way we'd make money," he said. "NHL crowds are at a saturation point."

Baby Habs Clobber Hawks 6-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

In a game that had no bearing on the final standings of the Ontario Hockey Association provincial Junior A group, Montreal junior Canadiens Wednesday night defeated St. Catharines Black Hawks 6-3.

Montreal made use of the night to try out substitute goalie Martin Kerrigan in place of ailing Jocyln Cardinal.

The junior Habs had assured themselves of second place in the league, and with one game remaining in the 50 - game schedule could not catch the first-place Niagara Falls Flyers, who boast a four-point lead and have three games remaining.

The Black Hawks are well back of the fourth-place Hamilton Red Wings and out of the playoff picture.

For St. Catharines, centre John Brannenman had two goals and Dennis Hull the other.

The only positions unsolved in the league are third and fourth. Hamilton trails Peterborough Petes by three points, with both clubs having three more games.

Women's Curling Championship

Moncton Rink Virtual Champions

By FRANK SULLIVAN

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—A hot house all week long, Mrs. Mabel DeWare's New Brunswick entry in the Canadian women's curling championship, enjoys a sew and unfamiliar role today.

At this point it will take a major upset in the round-robin event to prevent the Moncton foursome from winning it all.

With today's two rounds left to play, the DeWare rink had won six of its seven matches, including the upset of the week at the expense of Mrs. Ina Hansen's defending champions from Kimberley, B.C., suffering its only loss at the hands of Mrs. Emily Wooley's veteran Toronto quartet.

The Ontario and B.C. rinks still have a fighting chance. They went into today's play tied for second place with 5-2 records.

But the draw is kind to Mrs. DeWare. She has no more matches scheduled against her chief rivals.

In the eighth round at 2 p.m. EST, she faces Mrs. Irene Burton's rink from Bethany, Man., which has won only one match in seven. Her ninth-round opponent at 7 p.m. is Mrs. Mildred Binner's foursome from Moose Jaw, Sask., which has a 4-3 record.

Mrs. Hansen takes on Quebec in the eighth round while Mrs. Wooley faces Prince Edward Island. An Alberta-Newfoundland meeting and a Saskatchewan-Nova Scotia match complete the draw.

NO EDS TONIGHT

If Mrs. Hansen or Mrs. Wooley succeeds in catching the leaders, there will be a playoff Friday. Otherwise, it will all be decided tonight.

In the sixth round, Mrs. DeWare took on Mrs. Vera Reed's Alberta rink, the holders of first place at the time, and emerged with an 8-5 victory. Then she took an easy 10-6 verdict from Mrs. Shirley Robertson's Halifax rink, forcing the Nova Scotians to concede before the final end was completed.

The doughty Wooley quartet from Ontario didn't give an inch, hammering Manitoba 13-1 in the afternoon draw and winning a big one in the evening by topping Mrs. Hansen's B.C. rink 9-5.

Minor Hockey

The Bantam Maple Leafs and Peewee Bruins chalked up shutout victories in the opening games of goals-to-count series at Memorial Arena last night.

In Bantam, the Leafs blanked the Red Wings 5-0, T. Doran paced the Leaf attack with a three-goal effort and also picked up one assist. J. McCreary collected one goal and three assists, B. Tomaso scored the other goal while P. Bishop and C. Wilson gained an assist each.

In Peewee, Brhins stopped the Black Hawks 3-0 with Tom Churchill racking up the shutout. D. McPhee, Salisbury and Lynn Burley triggered the Bruins goals. Fyfe, Moore and Sharpe had assists.

Second games in both series are scheduled for Saturday morning.

Liston, Cassius Have Problems

'Whip or Cage You' Says Clay 'Lick or Kiss You' Says Sonny

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Boxer Cassius Clay, whose gimmick is his gift of gab, said Wednesday world heavyweight champion Sonny Liston has one, too.

"It's his look," Clay said. "He's big and ugly. Nobody would scare a man if he didn't know him. He scared Floyd Patterson with it.

But he don't scare me. I'll eat him up."

Clay, whose goal is to win the title from Liston before next November, has been using the youngest heavyweight champ in history, said he ran into Liston Tuesday night in a Miami night club. The conversation, he said, went like this:

Clay: "You're so ugly, I don't know whether to whip you or kiss you. Me I'm pretty—too pretty to be a fighter."

Liston: "That's right, I don't know whether to 'whip you or kiss you, either."

Clay: "There you go, popping off. I predicted that because I am so great, you would fall in eight. Now you're in a worse fix, because I've cut it to six."

Liston: "If I fell in six, it would be a fix."

Clay: "Keep talking and I'll cut it to five. How did you beat Patterson, with that look?"

Liston: "Not the look, the hook."

Play Sweden Today

Smokies Whip U.S. 6-1

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP)—Yvail Smoke Eaters, Canada's representatives in the world amateur hockey championship in Stockholm next month, trounced the United States 6-1 in an exhibition game Wednesday night.

The Canadians took a 3-0 lead in the first period and added three unanswered goals in the second period. The U.S. scored in the final period.

Right winger Hugh McIntyre scored two goals for the Canadians, one in the first period and one in the second. Other Canadian goal-scorers were defenceman George Ferguson, who opened the scoring, Edmond Cristofoli, Walt Peacock and Howie Hornby.

Only three Canadian and two U.S. players were sent off the ice by the East German and Swiss referees because of minor offences.

The Swedish world champions take on Canada today in the final game of the preliminary exhibition tournament.

Not Satisfied With Purses

Harness Body Calls Meet

TORONTO (CP)—An emergency meeting of the Ontario Harness Horsemen's Association has been called for March 9 to consider purses offered at the Old Woodbine and Mohawk raceways.

President Les Ehrlick said Wednesday the horsemen are not satisfied by the 40 per cent of the track's mutual take offered by the Jockey Club, which operates the tracks. He said they want 47 per cent, the amount that goes into thoroughbred racing purses.

Ehrlick said the association does not have the power to call a strike by horsemen against the tracks, but "if we decide to reject their purse schedule we can only recommend to our members to race elsewhere, and this doesn't help the sport in Ontario."

The Jockey Club has offered $1,115,800 in purses for 132 nights of racing at the Old Woodbine track in Toronto and the Mohawk raceway, to be opened in April near Campbellville about 35 miles northwest of Toronto.

Western Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

San Francisco Seals have a chance tonight to regain the Southern Division lead in the Western Hockey League that they last held when the season was a mere 24 hours old.

Calgary Stampeders set the stage Wednesday night when they edged Portland Buckaroos in Portland 5-4. The Bucs, defending champions in the southern grouping, have led the division for three months.

Portland's lead, now down to one point, would be wiped out if the Seals beat the third-place Los Angeles Blades in Los Angeles tonight. Portland is idle.

A crowd of 6,742 watched scoring by Calgary's Ron Leopold, with two, Coc Hoskins, Gord Redahl and Gord Velpravs. Portland scorers were Tom McCarthy, two, Ken Laufman and Jack Blonda.

Int. League Opens April 16

NEW YORK (AP)—The 80-year-old International League, which becomes a 10-team league this season, for the first time since 1937, opens its 1961 baseball schedule April 16.

Tommy Richardson, president of the league, announced the schedule today with each team playing 152 games. The league will be composed of two five-club divisions.

The northern section teams are Toronto Maple Leafs, Buffalo Bisons, Rochester Red Wings, Syracuse Chiefs and Richmond Virginians.

In the southern division are Jacksonville Suns, Atlanta Crackers, Columbus Jets, Indianapolis Indians and Little Rock Travelers.

Jacksonville won the 1962 pennant and Atlanta was the play-off winner. Indianapolis and Little Rock are the new members of the league.

At the end of the regular season the leaders in each division meet in a best-of-seven championship series. The two second-place finishers play each other with the winner taking on the first-place champions for the Governors' Cup.

The opening day pairings are Toronto at Jacksonville, Syracuse at Atlanta, Rochester at Little Rock, Columbus at Richmond and Buffalo at Indianapolis.

The second openers are staggered. Columbus is at home to Indianapolis and Buffalo entertains Richmond April 18. The three other clubs make their first home appearance April 24 with Little Rock at Rochester, Atlanta at Syracuse and Jacksonville at Toronto.

Sport Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Two years ago, when Yvon Durelle was an $8-a-day worker with the New Brunswick department of lands and mines, he vowed he would never return to boxing.

"I'll never be that hard up," he said. "I can always eat fish."

But even the fish wouldn't bite for the craggy-faced Baie Ste. Anne fighter. He had to sell his last fishing boat to survive and to keep his wife and four young children.

The onetime Canadian and British Empire light - heavyweight champion, who had earned more than $80,000 in the ring, was broke. Three months earlier the Moncton boxing commission had barred him from fighting in that city after he took a bad beating from a third-rate gym fighter.

Yvon tried wrestling, as a few other washed-up old fighters had done. This career came to a sudden halt one night in Calgary when he tumbled out of the ring and broke a leg.

TRIED COMEBACK

Now, the man who has admitted he never knew how to lost is back in the ring. "I can't box," he once told a friend. "The only way I can fight is to go straight ahead and punch. I can't go sideways or backwards."

The friend was Mérv McKenzie of Toronto, Ontario athletic commissioner.

McKenzie recalled the conversation earlier this week when he read about Durelle's seventh-round knockout in Montreal over Cecil Gray of Halifax.

"The promoters certainly didn't over - match Yvon this time," McKenzie said in an interview. "If he was in with Maxim Berezuk, it probably would be the end of him. This fight is just a teaser. Gray is nobody but, unfortunately, there's always a chance that a nobody will tag a guy and put him out of commission."

BARRED IN ONTARIO

McKenzie said he wouldn't allow Durelle to fight in Ontario.

"We certainly recognize the Moncton and the Canadian Boxing Federation suspensions and can't figure why Montreal would allow him to fight there. The only reason I can think of is that commission members in Montreal are probably new and haven't seen Yvon in the ring. But surely they've heard of his fights and, although the Montreal commission is not a member of the CBF, I think it should take advice of the federation and not allow him to fight. It's for his own good."

McKenzie was at ringside when Durelle took the fearful beatings—two from world lightheavy Ulteholder Archie Moore in Montreal and the other from Canadian heavyweight George Chuvalo in Toronto.

"Yvon was knocked out in each of those fights. I have never seen a boxer take such beatings as he did.

In each fight he took at least 50 solid shots to the head. He was battered right down to the floor. His fighting career should have ended there.

"Durelle is a nice guy. He's frank and earnest, but everybody knows where nice guys wind up."

Black Cats, No 13 But

"Lucky Seven" Not for Doak

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) Seven may be a lucky number to most but not to Don Hoak, Philadelphia Phillies' new third baseman.

Hoak, obtained during the winter from Pittsburgh, would rather wear No. 13, hold a black cat in the dugout or walk under a ladder en route to his position.

General manager John Quinn found Hoak easy to sign, but this uniform number bit, that's something else again.

Hoak and his wife, singer Jill Corey, were guests on a television show in Pittsburgh last month. As a surprise gift, the producers unfurled Hoak's new Phillies' uniform. He was pleased as the audience applauded.

Then Hoak noted the No. 7 on the back. He couldn't wait to get to a telephone and call Russ (Unk) Hearry, the Phillies club-house custodian who confirmed that the infielder had the right uniform.

EXPLAINS REASONS

The third baseman waited until reporting here for spring training to explain to Russell why he couldn't wear No. 7. "I'm not superstitious," he said, "but 14 years ago I reported to Greenville of the Sally League. They handed me No. 7. I suffered a wound that took 30 stitches in my leg, two broken fingers and was beaned three times. I also hit .231."

For the next eight years he wore a uniform number other than 7, but in 1955 he landed with Chicago Cubs who handed him the "lucky" digit.

"I had the worst season of my life," says Hoak. "I could not do anything right. I was hit on the head twice and I batted .215. The Cubs traded me to Cincinnati and I swore I'd never wear a 7 again."

Russell says that when the season opens, Hoak will get No. 12. For the time being he is using No. 19.

Hoak wants it understood, though, he's not superstitious.

Maroons Take Opener 5-2

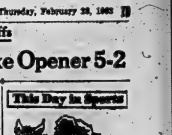
CHATHAM (CP)—Ted Power, of the Chatham Maroons veteran centre who was the only player to break Windsor's monopoly in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A scoring race, is maintaining his pace.

He scored two goals and added a pair of assists as Chatham took a 5-2 win from Galt Terriers Wednesday night in the first game of their best-of-seven league semi-final.

Power was fourth in the scoring race with 80 points. Windsor Bulldogs, who took first place in the league and lead Woodstock Athletics 1-0 in their semi-final, held the other seven of the top eight scoring positions.

The Maroons outshot the Terriers 39-19. They took a 2-1 lead in the first period before an estimated 700 fans and scored the only goals of the second.



Bob Seymour, Tom Clark and Jim Connelly scored the other Maroons goals. Ed Burr and Ron Brain counted for Galt.

Next game of the series is Friday in Galt.

Political Leaders Disagree With de Gaulle's Foreign Policy, Like ECM Action

The following account of of French President Charles de Gaulle's view of England, the United States and the European Common Market was written by Harold Mar, Reuters bureau chief in Paris since the end of the Second World War and widely acknowledged as one of the best-informed observers in the French capital.

He thought Macmillan was prepared to bring Britain wholly into the European Market with hands free to link Britain's defence and foreign policy to that of Europe instead of to the United States.

But the meeting between de Gaulle and Macmillan at Rambouillet, near Paris, last December, preceded by what the French affirm was a growing reticence on the part of the British negotiators in Brussels, left de Gaulle with this conviction:

That either Macmillan had never considered political and defence independence of the United States a necessary part of entering the Common Market, or else he had abandoned such an intention because of strong opposition within Britain.

For de Gaulle, the Kennedy-Macmillan Nassau Polaris agreement late in December underlined that Macmillan and Britain of any future independent defence policy and automatically made it impossible for the British to throw in their lot with the future Europe envisaged in the Gaullist grand design.

MANY APPROVE BREAK

While many French political leaders applauded the decision of de Gaulle's foreign policy, they nevertheless approve of the temporary end of the Common Market negotiations with Britain at this stage.

For many quarters have organized French agricultural industry has been persuaded by government to break off the talks, unless—a near-impossible contingency—Britain is prepared to adopt from the start the same form of farm protectionism as the Six currently enjoy and agreed to deal with food imports from while Commonwealth countries exclusively.

Pressure was, incidentally, also being put on the government against any further entry from some powerful industrial groups. Faced with the approaching end of the expansionist opportunities of the first years of the Common Market, these groups feared the competition of British industry inside the Market's common external tariff.

On the agricultural issue, the French government is known to still is, in a weak and vulnerable position.

The Common Market agreement was ratified by parliament on the strict understanding it would provide the solution for France's growing problem of farm surpluses in wheat and meat. For France, the Common Market treaty meant in part favouring the principle of supporting French agriculture from the French taxpayer to the German taxpayer.

The rules for the common agricultural policy were finally agreed on by the six Market members only in January, 1962, after arduous and often acrimonious negotiations during which the French several times had to threaten to refuse further tariff reductions unless in the Rome treaty timetable.

NOTHING SOLVED

Even so, the agriculture agreement was "in principle" only. It did nothing concrete to extricate the French from their farm problems.

In the negotiations with Britain, the reconciliation of British and French farm interests proved an enormous, if not insuperable, obstacle. But that was not all.

In addition, the other five Common Market governments were sheltering behind these negotiations, the French say, to postpone putting into practice the common agricultural policy painfully agreed on more than a year ago.

In all these circumstances, the French government probably had no choice except to reverse the priority which had crept into the situation as the result of Britain's offer to enter the Common Market.

The government concluded it was imperative that the members should implement their own common agricultural arrangements first and deal with British membership afterward.

This attitude would in all probability have been adopted, in one form or another, by any French government, with or without de Gaulle, with or without a grand design in the political field.

It is a political axiom in France that no French government can get into a fateful clash with the 8,000,000 farmers and their families and hope to survive.

OTHER PARTIES APPROVE

A Socialist National Assembly member told this correspondent soon after de Gaulle's January press conference: "If we were in power we would have had to do the same thing."

How decisive this farm situation and the prolonged reluctance of the five Common Market partners to implement the Rome treaty agricultural policy have been in bringing about the present grave external crisis can be seen in these ways:

The growing trankness with which the French press, politicians and cabinet ministers in private are talking about the danger to the life of the Common Market if the five other members do not "come across."

[illegible] agreement to help the [illegible] and tobacco.

No one here makes any secret any longer of the fact even de Gaulle's offer to Britain of association with the Common Market instead of full membership is subject to "considerable progress being made first in the Common Market."

An example of current thinking, even by the opposition, is provided by Mr. Maurice Faure, president of the Radical Party and a firm anti-Gaullist member of the National Assembly. He has always been a pro-Gaullist of a supranational Europe and was the most successful of France's negotiators in the Rome treaty.

But Faure now has said: "I will not give much for the future of the Common Market if by the end of the year progress has been made in spirit in agricultural problems, its relations to the ex-French African states and the setting up of at least a modest political union."

Crawfords Eliminate Lightfoots

Belleville Crawford Metals earned their way into the Bay of Quinte Basketball League finals with another top-sided victory over Belleville Lightfoots last night, 86-38.

In the other half of the twin-bill, played in Trenton, Wilson Concrete downed RCAF Flyers 94-47 to tie their half of the semi-finals at one game apiece. The third and deciding tilt will be played in Trenton High School gymn next Monday night, with the winners meeting Crawfords in the finals series.

Last night's Crawfords-Lightfoot game was much the same as the first of the series. Crawfords used a zone defence and a fast break to open up a 40-16 half time score and were never threatened.

The winners finished the game with only five players and the Lightfoots with six when Bert Faulkner and Glen Reynolds were tossed out midway through the second half for fighting. Earlier in the half, Crawfords' Sid Forster was ejected for excessive talking.

Ted Batchelor had a field day for the winners, hooking a healthy 32-point total to lead all scorers. Bill Batchelor added 19 points and Bert Faulkner 15 to back Batchelor.

Don Smith topped Lightfoot scorers with 16 points.

BELLEVILLE CRAWFORDS (86): N. Lange 3, B. Gault, Lekina 8, Forster 4, Faulkner 15, Batchelor 32, Latchford 19.

Academy Members Refuse To Be Stampeded in Votes

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — This could be Oscar's finest hour.

Never have the Academy Award nominations seemed so apt, so free of the taint of commercialism and local interest, as those which were announced this week.

The 2,500 academy members refused to be stampeded into naming some of the heavy spenders who waged noisy campaigns for nominations they didn't merit. The voters also avoided most of the other traps that have hurt Oscar's reputation in the past.

You might expect toothiness over runaway production to sway the voters. But no. Lawrence of Arabia, which local laborites would place in that category, was the front runner in total nominations.

Then again, you would think chauvinism would rule the voting, especially since the last Oscars went to a pair of foreigners, Sophia Loren and Maximilian Schell. Yet Anne Bancroft and Katharine Hepburn, award was Marcello Mastroianna, who can't speak English.

Also Peter O'Toole, an Irishman. The supporting actor nominees include a Britisher (Terence Stamp) and an Egyptian (Omar Sharif).

Nor could the voters be swayed entirely by money matters. They passed up the director of the $18,600,000 Mutiny on the Bounty to reward Frank Perry, who directed his first movie, David and Lisa, at a cost of $150,000.

The critics' race signals an end to the longtime fealty of the academy to Hollywood's veteran movie makers. Besides Perry, nominees include a Britisher (David Lean), an Italian (Pietro Germi) and two relative youngsters out of television (Arthur Penn, Robert Mulligan).

Then again, you would think chauvinism would rule the voting, especially since the last Oscars went to a pair of foreigners, Sophia Loren and Maximilian Schell. Yet Anne Bancroft and Katharine Hepburn,

Cartoon Feature Is Aimed Directly at Child Audience

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Writers on CBS' Alvin Show, a cartoon series recently turned up with an idea which had the little chipmunk characters giving their human father a hot foot.

"It was a very funny gag," said Ross Bagdasarian, creator of Alvin. "But when I finished laughing I turned it down. If we'd used it, I figured we would have had at least 2,000 fathers on fire. . . ."

This cartoon feature is aimed directly at the child audience. Alvin and his chipmunk pals are patterned on Bagdasarian's own youngster, Adam. The hapless human figure in the cartoon bears an amazing physical resemblance to Ross himself.

The chipmunks were born in 1958 when Bagdasarian wrote a song inspired by a question asked by three-year-old Adam. Since then The Chipmunk Song and successors with chattery voices effects have sold almost 20,000,000 records. The cartoon show followed a couple of sea-sons later. Currently it is seen Saturday mornings.

THEY WATCH THEM

"We know that our own kids watch cartoons carefully," Bagdasarian said, "and we know all about children who have climbed up on the garage roof and jumped to take off like Superman. So we're awfully careful about what we do—no violence, no cruelty to animals, just good clean fun and music."

He never expected he would have adult fans.

"You know who love the show?" he asked. "Grandmothers. Some of them watch when they are baby-sitting. But others watch it because the chipmunks remind them of their grandchildren."

Recommended Insight:

"What would you like for dessert, Patty?"

Astrological Forecast

For March 1

By STUART OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Excellent day for meeting new people, selling, cementing friendships. Better for action than for admonishing yourself for not "doing better." Time with those you did all right!

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Take time to be right about money matters. You could seek aid of Gemini individual. Tonight a quiet gathering favored over noisy, stranger-filled rooms. Consider before acting.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Good helping hand if request is made. Doing a little extra will repay you materially as well as spiritually. Very good for planning down future plans. Exciting journey indicated ahead.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Friendship fine. But you ultimately must make your own decisions. Means start facing situation as it actually exists. Present quest leads only to a long, fruitless search. Better settle for reality!

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Get routine work out of way early and day sparkles with refreshing progress. You emanate plenty of personal appeal. Buy when you are revitalized.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Your intuition serves you well. Listen to "inner voice." Especially where job factors and ambitions are concerned. May be one who misconstrues your motives. Be alert!

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Key is willingness to expand base of activities. This not accomplished by day-dreaming. Instead, take steps which lead to successful fulfillment. Means you must be dynamic, confident.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Take care with details. Do the "little" jobs and the big ones will take care of themselves. Discussion today could result in added success. Be attentive! Cooperate.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): The happier you make loved ones, the happier you will be. That's key to nagging "blues." Do things with zest, enthusiasm today, showing associates you can set pace.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Your stock with "other" person rises. You can gain much by original, creative approach. Win your way through charm, charm. Show appreciation for talents associates display.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): You give the impression of being satisfied. Good. Temptation is to "let hair down," but this not wise today. Maintaining appearance of self-satisfaction gives you advantage!

Pisces (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Shouting accomplishes little. Today calmly approach best. Many things appear to be "out-of-order." But some patience brings success. Excellent evening for new, exciting contacts.

If Today Is Your Birthday . . . you like to pioneer. Year emphasizes harmony, travel, exciting activities.

General Tendencies: Cycle up for Taurus, -Gemini, Cancer. Special word to Sagittarius: An inexpensive gift could turn "blue" day into happy one.

Record Number Of Candidates Is Expected

OTTAWA (CP) — Spokesmen at national headquarters of the four main parties say their parties will field as many or more candidates in the April 8 election as in the 1962 vote.

This would indicate that a record number of candidates will fight it out in this year's election, provided the usual number of independents join the fray.

The record was set last year when 1,026 candidates vied for the 265 seats in the Commons. The total included 37 independents of various kinds and 12 Communists.

Liberals and Progressive Conservatives say their parties intend to have full slate of 265 each. Conservatives had 208 last year, Liberals 265. They were short by one candidate because of a technicality.

A Social Credit spokesman predicted his party will have at least 236 candidates and perhaps as many as 250. He said the gaps will be mostly in Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and Quebec. This is a reversal of last year's report when there were 230 SC candidates, a record for the party.

A New Democratic Party source said his group will field between 210 and 226 candidates, compared with 154 last year. The gaps would be in the Atlantic Provinces, Quebec and the Prairies. The record number ever fielded by the old CCF forerunner of the NDP, was 208 in the 1945 election.

An unofficial compilation by The Canadian Press shows that 484 candidates had been nominated up to Tuesday night. The breakdown: Conservatives 208; Liberals 148; NDP 58; SC 120; Communist 9; other 4.

Commission sources have indicated they plan to enter 30 candidates. The number of independent candidates usually rises sharply in the last few days before nominations close.

Nominations close at 2 p.m. on Monday, March 25, in 262 constituencies, including two that elect two each, and on Monday, March 11, in 21 remote ridings where more time is needed to distribute election supplies.

Nine of Ten Believe CBC Does Good Job

OTTAWA (CP)—The publicly-owned CBC said today that 9 out of 10 Canadians believe with 4,000 adult Canadians have shown that 90 per cent of them feel that, in general, the CBC is doing a "good" or "very good" over-all broadcasting job.

It is five years since the corporation said the survey showed that only seven per cent of those interviewed felt that the CBC was doing a "poor" or "very poor" job. The statement said this is evidence of wide-spread public regard for the CBC.

The CBC did not release its report on the study, in which its own research staff put together results of interviews carried out by Canadian Facts Limited, a Toronto company. Two subsequent press releases will be issued, it said.

On the question of encouraging the use of Canadian talent, 74 per cent felt the CBC "does well or very well in this respect." Only 20 per cent felt that the corporation "does at all ably" in this field.

Asked to appraise the CBC's job of promoting unity between French-speaking and English-speaking Canadians, 75 per cent of the French-speaking persons interviewed felt that the CBC "does well" while 30 per cent of the English-speaking people "express some dissatisfaction with the corporation in this respect."

ALTER SHELTER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House bomb shelter is being modernized at a cost estimated at $500,000. Assistant press secretary Andrew J. Hatcher confirmed today that work to include a modern communications system is well under way.

Three New Ministers Ready As Man. Legislature Opens

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Manitoba's legislature opens today, with three new faces on the government's front benches.

Premier Roblin, with a new budget following the close of 14 general election, brought three new members into his cabinet Wednesday and moved one minister.

Obie Baizley becomes labor minister, Robert G. Smellie municipal affairs minister and A. W. Harrison minister without portfolio, while former labor minister John B. Carroll takes on the welfare portfolio.

Meanwhile, this was the business which occupied members of other legislatures:

Halifax — J. Clyde Nunn (C—Inverness) pressed the Conservative government to make its proposed study of Nova Scotia's money-lending practices a "thorough and far-reaching" one. Many of the money-lending agencies, he said, are nothing but "legalized" rackets and disguised usurers."

Fredericton — Increases in mothers' allowances—to $60 a month from $35 — and other changes in the Social Assistance Act were introduced by Welfare Minister W. B. Duffie.

Edmonton — Premier Manning said he is "not ready to stuff the law with exceptions" as he rejected a request from the Alberta Beef Forest Industries Association that wood products be exempted from regulations in the proposed farm marketing act.

He told a legislative committee studying the measure, which that the forest industries have been harmed by current legislation and "the province has no interest in killing the goose that lays the golden eggs, the paper industry."

He urged representatives of the industry to place confidence in the government and in a board which will supervise the act. "We need to start with the idea that the government and the board are going to do their worst."

Regina—Liberal Leader Ross Thatcher was nearly "named"

Computer System Installed To Assist the Weatherman In Making up Forecasts

by ALEXANDER FARRELL

MONTREAL (CP) — G-20 is about to be called in on the secrets of the mysterious atmosphere.

Weather forecasters now get a lot more information than they used to about atmospheric conditions all over the northern hemisphere. In fact, they get so much that if they have to sit down and figure it all out they can't arrive at a forecast until it's not a forecast any longer.

This is where G-20 enters the picture. G-20 is a 10-unit, $1,250,000 computer system installed last year in a sound-proofed room at the Canadian meteorological service in Montreal.

Now is undergoing a series of trial runs and is scheduled to become a full-time operating partner of the weatherman some time this summer.

Its task is divided into three steps, data processing, analysis and forecasting, requiring less than an hour to complete.

Data from observation stations all over the northern hemisphere, including Chile and the Soviet Union, pours into the Montreal office at 12-hour intervals.

1,000 LINES A MINUTE

Expressed in the language of mathematics, this information adds up to about 15,000 teletype lines that have to be decoded and sorted into various categories, such as temperature, humidity, pressure and wind direction and speed.

The next step is to interpret all this information in order to get the broad weather picture for the whole hemisphere, and the final step is to predict how this picture will change in the next 48 hours.

This new weather computer, first in Canada, can do 100,000 additions in one second.

It can multiply 35,000 eight-digit numbers faster than you can say "two times two is . . . ssh . . . four."

The unit on which the computer's calculations emerge on paper, the line - printer, can print them at the rate of 1,000 lines a minute.

To the layman's eye, these lines are a jumble of numbers and letters. But meteorologists understanding them to mean such things as "cold front moving east across Alaska," translates them into weather maps and forecast charts.

Computers were introduced into weather research and analysis in the United States in 1954 and have since come into use in Germany, Sweden, France, Britain, Russia and Japan.

WOULD NEVER END

James Leaver, officer in charge of the central analysis office at the Montreal weather bureau, said: "Computers are rapidly taking the uncertainty out of forecasting. If we could ever feed computers all the necessary information, we would someday be able to get perfect weather forecasts."

Michael Kwizak, supervisor of numerical weather prediction, also said that up to now it has been necessary to apply unaided human memory and intelligence to the reams of weather data that pour into the office. One disadvantage of this is that there is a limit to the amount of data and experience the human brain can store up and bring together into meaningful calculations.

Another is the time needed to do a thorough job. He said that 10 meteorologists, using pencil and paper to solve all the mathematical equations presented in one complete weather report from around the hemisphere, would have to work solidly for a year to come up with a 24-hour forecast.

HELPS OTHER REGIONS

To have a forecast ready when needed, meteorologists had to limit themselves to what they considered the most essential information.

The G-20 is leased by the meteorological branch of the department of transpor from Computing Devices of Canada Limited, Ottawa. Mr. Leaver said it is expected to open up a wider field of weather analysis and forecasting to the meteorologists working at the central analysis office in Montreal.

Instead of putting any of them out of work, it would provide more work by making it possible to handle more data and prepare more thorough, more accurate weather reports and forecasts.

The Montreal office transmits, by wire, hemispheric weather maps and forecast charts to regional bureaus throughout Canada, which then combine this information with knowledge of local conditions to work out detailed forecasts for their own areas.

Mr. Kwizak said: "The central analysis office has to consider such as large-scale systems, to deal with weather systems throughout the hemisphere. We do no go into detail about thunderstorms, fog, snow fall and so on, as the regional bureaus do."
